ROMPERS FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

WHATEVER other folk may feel, it is quite certain that there is no garment in the wardrobe quite so well appreciated by the little children as the rompers in which they can play and be happy without consideration of clothes. Here are four excellent ones, each different from the other, each in good style and each practical. No. 8651 is quite novel in cut and in shape, yet so simple that it can be run up in almost no time and it is thoroughly comfortable and satisfactory. The 42 portions are buttoned together as shown in the small view and there is an opening at the front of the body portion. In the picture, striped galatea is trimmed with plain.

MISSES DESIGNS IN PLEASING VARIETY By MAY MANTON

HERE is a dress that is absolutely simple in all its lines, easy to make and youthful in the extreme, yet because it is made of dotted tulle and trimmed with ruffles of plain silk, it is very dressy in effect and can be utilized for all afternoon occasions and even for the informal dinner. There is a straight skirt and a tucked blouse with slightly full sleeves. Nothing could be less trouble to make, yet it gives the smartest and best lines. Here the neck is cut in V shape and a little ruching of silk makes the finish, but a little yoke can be added if a high neck is wanted. In the back view, the dress is shown made of cotton voile with ruffles of the same and with a yoke of net, but as a rule, girls will like the open neck the better and it is to be preferred for girlish necks are very apt to pretty and the lines are good. In this instance, the trimming is arranged on deep points, but the skirt is perfectly plain and consequently can be trimmed in any way with the straight ruffles shown in the back view, evenly spaced, or with the ruffles put on as they are here, or the lower edge of the skirt could be cut out in scallops, points or battlements and bound, for all these treatments are fashionable and they all are good. Any material that is soft enough to be gathered can be used for the neck. For the simple frock of between season wear, silk, and wool crepe would be pretty with the ruffles of tulle.

EVERY design that suggests the bolero idea is fashionable. This rock is charming as can be, yet so simple that it is especially well adapted to the girls' use. The bodice is shorter waisted at the front than at the back, giving a pretty line and the fronts are rounded and arranged over a wedge shaped center to give the bolero suggestion. The skirt is made with finished edges that are lapped over the panel which harmonizes with the center of the blouse. Here, a crepe or tulle silk and wool is trimmed with satin. The suggestion for combination is a good one, not alone for these materials but also for any two that contrast well. A plain silk could be used with a figured one

POPULAR STYLES FOR GIRLS

THE plaited skirt is an unquestioned favorite for girls' dresses. It always is becoming to the younger contingent and it is especially suitable for the incoming season. Here are three frocks, all equally fashionable, yet each shows a plaited skirt of a different style. No. 8709 includes a little bolero that is exceedingly attractive. This bolero is a quite separate garment and consequently can be made to match the skirt or of a different material. The skirt is plaited and joined to a belt. The blouse is joined to another belt and the two are buttoned together. For the 6 year size will be required 3 yds. of material 27 in. wide, 2 yds. 36, 1 1/2 yds. 44 for the bolero and skirt, 1 yd. 36 in. wide for the bolero.

Everything that gives the best effect is fashionable. No. 8177 shows a pretty little dress which includes that feature. The skirt forms a box-plait at the front and one at the back, with an inverted plait at each side. The blouse is a very simple one with only under arm seams; the sleeves are sewed to it at the long shoulder line and the vest portion is arranged under the front edges. There is a lining which holds the fulness in place.
