SAE NATION'S SOUL WITH PLAY

Two great church conferences declared for a stronger stand against "worldly amusements." It seemed like a reversion to Puritanism, a denial of the new liberality toward recreation that has crept into nearly all the churches.

"They were right," declared the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, a Unitarian pastor of New York, "right in their recognition of the problem, although perhaps wrong in their solution of it. He is blind who cannot see that our nation is entering a period of self-indulgence and pleasure-seeking which threatens its very soul. The action of these churches is a protest, a great and necessary protest, against deadening and corrupting influence."

He finds fault with our amusements not so much because they are wicked as because they are insane. If banal musical comedies exist for the "tired business man" most movie shows exist for the "tired workingman." But he questions whether even New York business men are tired enough to enjoy the "meaningless" shows they go to. And if our working people are as tired as most of the movie programs indicate, "we are on the verge of intellectual and spiritual bankruptcy."

The nation would better have no shows at all, he says, than such entertainments, and better no dances at all than the dances of the cabarets and the cheap dance halls. To that extent he agrees with Puritanism. But he is not for "repression." What is needed, he insists, is "expression."

"When people have the least opportunity for expression, they are apt to give the loosest rein to indulgence. New York is pleasure-mad chiefly because New York has not learned to play." He thinks a universal eight-hour day would be a good thing everywhere, because it would leave people with more energy to indulge in, and demand, wholesome recreation. And he would have a theatre and dance hall in every church, to foster the amateur drama and the social dance in a wholesome environment.

ADVICE TO CITY-MAN-FARMERS

The back-to-the-farm movement has really done wonders for many city men. It has awakened their interest in Mother Earth and growing things, reminding them that the whole world does not consist of offices and business papers. The hope for a "little place in the country" has often proved the impetus for a healthful move away from the artificial city life.

Like many other perfectly good inspirations, however it has often swept the unwary off his feet. The joyous would-be farmer so often fails to control his imagination. He dreams cheerfully of the fortune he's going to make with chickens or fruit or mushrooms. But he overlooks many harrowing details and scoffs at the wise man who tries to warn him of troubles ahead.

We are learning in these days that fresh air and pure water are not certain of attainment by a simple move to the country. There's many an expense and much skill and sanitary engineering betwixt the farmer and his health.

And then there are other trials which the city man is apt to overlook in contemplating the rosy picture of a snug little farm. Transportation, of course, is better than ever before. The automobile is giving the farmer neighbors. Good lighting and heating are possible. But—all things can't be taken for granted. They take time and money and forethought.

Francis Copeland, writing in The World's Work gives these six essential rules for the prospective farmer

1. Be perfectly certain that your neighbors are congenial, for farming in an uncongenial neighborhood is impossible.
 2. Locate near a school and a church—you can get labor easier even if you do not use them yourself.
 3. Be sure the country is healthful, and the water pure.
 4. Look well into the transportation facilities; roads, railroads and rates.
 5. Find out where the markets are.
 6. Then buy a good piece of land.
- It's all excellent advice and calculated to put more real joy into the city-man-farmer's life than even his soaring dreams predict.

ADVANCEMENT IN THE NAVY

The first year that enlisted men in the navy were permitted to take examinations to qualify for admittance to the naval academy, five of them passed. The second year, 1915, the number of successful candidates rose to eight. In the examinations just held to select this year's candidates, 23 enlisted men have qualified.

The law providing for this new system of advancement only authorizes the acceptance of fifteen men per year. Eight of those who have earned their right to a course at Annapolis are therefore doomed to disappointment, unless congress gives the secretary of the navy authority to appoint all the successful candidates.

It goes without saying that such authority should be granted. We need more officers to fill out the personnel of our growing navy. No good officer-material should be refused. Still more do we need to encourage the sort of spirit that is exemplified by the work of these 23 eligible candidates. That spirit has been aroused by the abolition of the old barrier between officers and enlisted men.

There can be no greater spur to ambition and faithful service than the knowledge that any man, by ability and hard work, may rise to any position in the navy. And it will be an excellent thing to fill a greater proportion of Annapolis appointments with eager men who have worked their way up in the service. Such men should make better officers than those who owe their appointment to political influence.

BILLIONS OF SAVINGS

Savings accounts in the United States are growing faster today than ever before in our history. In less than two months, from March 7 to May 1, the increase of savings deposits in the country's national banks increased $41,000,000, making the total deposits more than $11,000,000,000.

That is at the rate of more than $2,000,000,000 increase a year. It means that in twelve months, at the present rate, our people will save and put in the bank nearly twice the amount of our national debt, and will have enough in the bank then to pay that debt a dozen times over. This comparison is impressive, when we consider the relation that the savings of most foreign nations bear today to their immense and steadily mounting debts.

And these figures do not include the billions deposited with state banks, trust companies and other financial institutions.

NOSES

A Brooklyn, N. Y., girl, found dead with a gas tube in her mouth and the gas turned on, left this note:

"I can't stand it any longer—my nose keeps growing larger and larger."

She was no raw girl, either, at the sensitive and silly period. She had reached the comparatively mature age of 25 years.

Of all the things that drive people to self-destruction, worry over a prominent nose seems to be about the most absurd. Presumably the victim in this case had never heard of Cyrano de Bergerac, or read his eloquent tribute to large noses—symbols of aggressiveness, nobility, generosity, intelligence and power. And she was probably ignorant of Tristram Shandy, who preached the same sort of philosophy, and bled his own weakness, foolishness and inconsequentiality on a nose so small as to be almost non-existent.

The fact ought to be recognized once for all, especially by persons sensitive about their looks—a big nose is nothing to be ashamed of, but something to be proud of. There is the man or woman who ever did big things and made a stir in the world, who didn't have a sonspishous beak?"

SUBSIDIZING CHILDBIRTH

A bill is pending in the French chamber of deputies proposing that, beginning next January, the government shall pay a stated sum to every woman who bears a child, for the first child the mother is to receive $100; for the second, $200; and $100 for every child thereafter. The mother is to be recognized and rewarded by a bonus of $60 when his fourth child is born.

The measure is inspired, of course, by the depletion of France's population by the war, coming after three decades during which the birth rate remained almost stationary. It is necessary to fill the ranks again, and to insure a yearly surplus of births over deaths hereafter, if the nation is not to suffer slow extinction.

Some of the other belligerent countries are likely to adopt the same policy. And eventually we may even adopt it in the United States. Not, let us hope, as an artificial device to fill gaps caused by war, or even to stimulate the growth of population in normal times. We are still far removed from any menace of "race suicide."

E. PROGRAM IN OMAHA

The Omaha World-Herald shuddering at "Eastern hysterics," is sure that "the Middle West does not need any arousing" to preparedness. We all hope so, but confidence is not increased by The World-Herald's assertion that "the men of the West believe that there is no nation on earth that can whip the hundred million people of the United States." The Hon. Champ Clark said substantially the same thing in the House of Representatives the other day. All this belongs to the redomontade of school histories. It is on a par with the Hon. Elijah Pogram's whose proud boast to the Despot and the Tyrant is that "his bright home is in the settin' sun." If "the men of the West" believe that in modern warfare mere raw, defenseless numbers can prevail against attack by an enemy using all the destructive means of scientific war, they have at least to learn the A B C of preparedness.

Mr. Hughes should come out in the open. It is not enough to resign from the Supreme Court and state whether he is pro-American or not. He should shave.

IN POLITICS

Being Original And Culled Notes From Exchanges Upon Interesting Subjects

In another column of this issue will be found the announcement of John A. Ross as a candidate for the nomination of the Democratic ticket of the office of county attorney. Mr. Ross has filled the office of county attorney for the past two years and has had more criminal legal tangles to contend with than any other attorney who has represented the county. He has been earnest and conscientious in his work and if he believes that he had a case against any one that was charged with a crime he placed the matter up to the court and the jury. His record of convictions secured in the murder cases of the county for the past two years is a remarkable one. He is willing to go before the voters at the Democratic primaries on the record that he has made and there is but little doubt that he will secure the nomination and that virtually means his election in November.

Dave Adams, one of the pioneers of the northern part of the county has placed his announcement in this issue as a candidate for the nomination of supervisor subject to the will of the Democratic voters. Mr. Adams has been a resident of Cochise county for over thirty years and is one of its most prominent business men. He is interested in the cattle, mining and telephone business. He has always been a warm supporter of the Democratic ticket in Cochise county and has never asked for any office or favor at the hands of the party. He has hundreds of friends throughout the county who are now at work in his behalf since it became known that he was a candidate for the office of supervisor. There is but little doubt but what Mr. Adams will make a strong race for the nomination. He will secure the largest vote in the northern end of the county of any of the candidates.

William Riggs, of El Dorado, has placed his announcement in the Review as a candidate for the nomination of state senator at the Democratic primaries on September 12. Mr. Riggs needs no introduction to the citizens of Cochise county, he has represented them in a number of official positions and has always proved himself worthy of his trust. He represented the county in the state senate for the past two years and was one of the active members who was always working in the interests of his constituents. The present land bill is one of the measures that he was instrumental in passing and he was also behind the movement that abolished the old land commission that was such an expense to the state. His record is one that cannot be assailed and there is no doubt but what he will again receive the nomination at the hands of the Democratic party and that he will again represent Cochise county in the state senate.

J. M. Sparks, of Douglas, announces his candidacy for re-election as a member of the board of supervisors of the county. He was elected two years ago and when the board was organized in January of last year he was made chairman. The service of Mr. Sparks on the board has been highly satisfactory and so far no one has even been mentioned in Douglas as a candidate to oppose his re-election.

FROM THE DEMOCRATIC FESTIVITIES

Being a successful building contractor many believe that Mr. Sparks is specially qualified for the position of supervisor. It is believed that the announcement of Mr. Sparks will result in his nomination, as in the past it has been conceded by all parts of the county that Douglas is entitled to one of the members of the board. The present holdover member on the board is a resident of Bisbee, also conceded to be entitled to one member of the board. Mr. Sparks is one of the pioneer residents of Douglas and at the very beginning of the city he has been nearly all the time engaged in contracting. While he is always a good booster, he is a man that believes in the practice of economy in the doing of all things. Since taking his position on the board Mr. Sparks has devoted much of his time to a careful study of the roads and other features of public improvement expected of the county. In bridge building and other construction work the knowledge of Mr. Sparks in this line of work has been a distinctive asset to the county.

OPHTHALMOLOGY

You will get a better service here than at either optician or oculist. A service that you would have to go to a larger city to get. Many chronic cases are coming to me and getting relief. Some come wearing glasses that increase their troubles, many are learning that glass fitting is not nor can it ever be successful as a commercial proposition, with thinking people department and jewelry store glasses are in the twilight zone, ophthalmology is teaching folks that glass fitting is more of an exact science than the practice of medicine. If you have eye troubles of any kind call and see me. I can and do guarantee satisfaction.
