Last Monday night an Italian working in the Gold Road shaft was struck on the head by a falling drill and was precipitated to the platform, forty feet below. Initiative and Referendum

This week there was submitted to the people of this county three measures affecting the railroads, for which a referendum was asked. These measures are the electric headlight on all trains, which the railroad company complain cannot be complied with within the limited time and which would entail needless litigation. Another act entitled a full train crew; another to punish any person acting as engineer or conductor who has not served at least three years as fireman or brakeman. Another bill that is to have the referendum invoked is that providing for semi-monthly pay day. While this act may entail some additional work to the employer it would be a great benefit to many of the employer, and it is probable that the people will affirm the act. Another of the things that are to become matters for the sanction of the people is the Kenney bill, which provides for the employment of English speaking people only in hazardous occupations. The enactment of the law by the people would shut out all non-English speaking people in the mines and on railroads where there was hazard of life.

To get through he had several cowboys pull him out of the mudholes and the creek bed to dry land where he could get traction for his machine.

Next Monday the calendar of the Supreme Court will be called and the untied causes thereon will be reset. The court has done a large amount of business since its first session in May, and so far there has been general satisfaction expressed for the judicious manner of disposing of the business of the court by Judge Krook.

Cloudburst in the Wallpapis

Last Tuesday afternoon a cloudburst in the high mountains to the east of Kingman sent down a wall of water through what is locally known as Slaughter-House canyon, which created considerable havoc on the way. Below the slaughter house the big sand teams were at work, and only that the roar of the flood notified the teamsters before the crest reached that point four of the big teams would certainly have been drowned, and it is impossible that the teamsters could have made their escape. As it was the men barely saved the teams, the wagons being left in the wake of the flood badly wrecked. Two of the big wagons were piled up against some shrubbery, after the substance of the flood, a shapeless mass of wreckage. One 3 1-2 inch steel axle wagon had one of the axles broken and the heavy wood work broken off. Another thimble skein axle had the skein torn off and one wheel was stripped off and carried away. Two wheels were found near the Maguire ranch, four miles below.

At the slaughter house a few pigs were drowned, as were many chickens. The water rose to a height of three feet on the door of the hog pen, but only two little porkers were caught.

South of town, where the canyon unites with Railroad canyon, the flood of water was great. It tore out the rock spur, dropped two cars loaded with rock into the canyon and washed out the wagon road at that point. It also damaged the Chloride branch, but not to such an extent that travel was held up. The flood was one of the greatest ever seen in this canyon.

There will be no election nor appointment of county or precinct officers this fall or winter, despite the quotation from the Prospector. The court in rendering its opinion made the obvious ruling that precinct officers were included in the scope of the injunction restraining the Secretary of State from issuing his proclamation for primary election, and no election can be held unless regularly called by the proper officer. Under the law all officers hold over until their successors are elected and qualified, with the noted exception of members of the legislature and school trustees.

The late lamented legislature provided that all counties be laid off in supervisorial districts and that hereafter supervisors be elected from their respective districts. This districting of the county devolves upon the board of supervisors before the next election, but just how this county is to be cut up is now causing some anxiety to some of the out who would like to be in and who may be candidates at the next election.
