Wise and Otherwise

As usual the Coon story is of a dark nature.

There never was a law that could not be enforced if officers honestly performed their duty.

New York's recent steamboat holocaust is heart sickening to think of. The loss of a thousand mothers and babies is heart-rending enough to make strong men weep.

Much Intemperate Temperance has the promise of doing things for once in life. The Madison Park beer license is killed, unless all signs go for naught.

The City Attorney of Georgetown—the attorney for Georgetown—what's his name, who advises on law and public sentiment in Georgetown? Anyway there is a chap in Georgetown that is finding out things about gambling, if not about law and public sentiment.

Story in Two Chapters.—Chap. 1. Mr. Ontop: "I just got a free pass to the races! By jove! I knew they would have to recognize me; I am popular!"

Chap. 2. After the races:—"Dam that pass! It don't pay to be so all-fired popular."

Communities sometimes have spasms. Now, goodness is a good thing, but the doing of a plain duty is not an act of such great goodness that the "doer" need walk on stilts, or a parade need be inaugurated to celebrate he "doing" or the "done."

The Woodmen of the World are about to put forth their energies to build a lodge temple in this city. In this undertaking they should receive every encouragement not only from the membership, which is very large, but from the public generally.

Two Boys were running down Madison street the other day, when both tripped, stumbled and fell. One boy sprawled out on the ground crying like a lost calf; the other jumped to his feet, kicked the obstacle over which he had fallen and said, "Darn you, take that!" One of those boys of ours will succeed in this world of ours, sure.

Hon. Sherwood Gillespy, who has recently returned from the East, is of the opinion that the money scare that is prevailing over the country just now is more a fancy than a reality. "Work is plenty throughout the country; crops are good and prices as usual, hence it is impossible for a panic to prevail. So far as Seattle is concerned, it was never better. My business is a half a million dollars ahead of its last year's report for the same number of months."
