It is read by a big percentage of the legal fraternity, including bench and bar. It is the favorite of Chicago's leading business men. It reaches all classes in their homes. It is read by the Fire Department. It is read by the Police Department. It is in every public office and every public library. It is not controlled by any cheap, cheeky or crooked advertising agency. In the seventeen years of its existence it has managed to build up a large circulation and great business without the aid of professional advertising sharks. THANK MR. KEELEY AND THE TRIBUNE.

The Eagle joins with its fellow citizens in applauding the generous act of Mr. James Keeley, the managing editor of the Chicago Tribune, and of the Tribune itself, in presenting the $5,000 reward received for capturing Stensland to the poor depositors.

The following explains itself: "Chicago, Ill., Oct. 16, 1906.—Mr. John C. Fetzer, Receiver Milwaukee Avenue State Bank, 215 Dearborn Street, Chicago—Dear Sir: I have today received from the Chicago Clearing House Association the reward of $5,000, offered by it for the arrest of Paul O. Stensland, the defaulting and fugitive president of the Milwaukee Avenue State Bank, who was captured by me in Tangier.

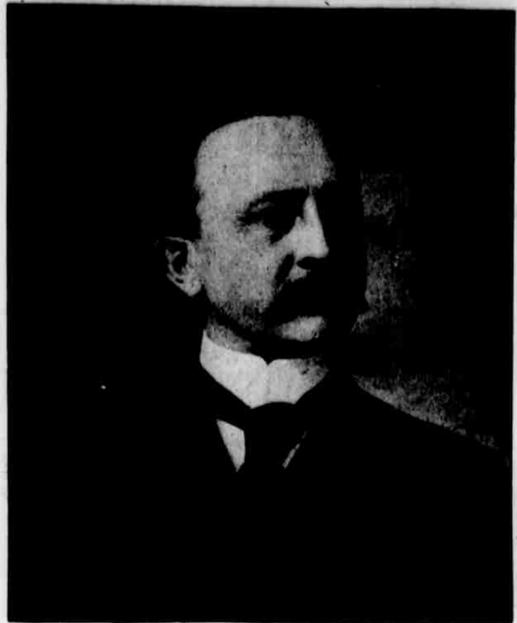

"On behalf of the Chicago Tribune I take great pleasure in endorsing the check over to you and request you to utilize it as one of the assets of the bank and distribute it among the depositors of the wrecked institution.

"The amount may not be of great benefit individually to the depositors, but I feel every possible cent should be realized and utilized for those whose trust was betrayed and whose savings were stolen by the men in whom they had placed unbounded confidence. Very truly yours, J. KEELEY, Managing Editor The Tribune."

Mr. Fetzer gratefully accepted the check and acknowledged it in the following letter:

"Chicago, Oct. 16, 1906.—Mr. James Keeley, Managing Editor The Chicago Tribune, Chicago—My Dear Mr. Keeley: I acknowledge receipt of the check of the Chicago Clearing House Association for $5,000, the same having been received by you for the capture and delivery to the proper authorities of Paul O. Stensland, the defaulting president of the Milwaukee Avenue State Bank, and indorsed to me on behalf of the Chicago Tribune.

"I certainly appreciate both the receipt of this money and the motive that prompted its gift, and assure you that, so far as in me lies, the last cent of it and of every other fund coming into my possession in this matter shall be realized and utilized to the furthest extent for the benefit of the depositors of this institution.

"On behalf of the depositors I wish to extend to you and the Chicago Tribune not only our thanks for this check, but for the great service you have rendered them and the community at large in the return of Mr. Stensland. Very truly yours, JOHN C. FETZER, Receiver."

REAL DEMOCRACY.

Two English delegates who came over to a great convention held in Milwaukee were "thunderstruck" at the "remarkable democracy of America," as displayed when as one man the other delegates removed their coats, vests, collars and cuffs and prepared to be as comfortable as possible in a hot convention hall. It was new to them, but is not new to us. Men in America are quite apt to make themselves comfortable when by themselves, though sometimes the conventionalities are rudely disturbed. But why shouldn't men be comfortable? It's a mighty absurd custom which permits women to wear the thinnest sort of clothes, while men are compelled to sweater in many thicknesses of cloth, woolen, cotton and linen at once. The lining of a man's coat sleeve is thicker than all a woman wears upon her arms in summer. Add a thick layer of woolen cloth and frequently a sleeve of an undershirt, and see what a difference there is. Men's shirts are cool enough in themselves, but look at the collars, the ties and the cuffs which encumber them. Almost every man wears thick padding in the shoulders and several thicknesses of "wadding," harelcloth and various other things in the front of his coat. It is well enough to talk about "delightful democracy," but for some reason this same "delightful democracy" has not yet dared to defy established conventionalities by permitting men the same freedom in dress and comfort that it allows the women. Biddle and criticism always await the man who tries to be comfortable in public, and the ones who criticize most are those who most need reform. It's a peculiar thing that men stand thus in the way of their own needs and desires. If they wanted to, they could by a concerted effort overturn all the old ideas and establish a code permitting rational dress; but, bless your soul, they will continue to stick to thick, stiff linen bands about their necks, heavily padded coats, plug hats and all the other uncomfortable things, time without end, because they would much rather be uncomfortable than ridiculous. That is to say, they will do this in public. But when they get out of sight they will "peel off" quickly and say hard things about the custom which makes them awkward.
