WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

Servants Hardest Things to Find in Washington

WASHINGTON.—"Mrs. Wash'n't'n, deed Ise gwine t' quit you all. Ise sorry, but Ise got t' do it—Goo-by—Goo-by," said the dusky pantry queen who had worked in the senator's family for years with more or less satisfaction.

"You're not going to leave us?" inquired Mrs. Washington.
"Deed Ise got t' leave—goo-by—goo-by," returned Miranda. "Ise gwine t' work in one ob dem musicians factories—gwine t' git three dollars uh day an' gits mah nights offen all de time an' mah holidays an' kin go see de parades on dem natural holidays. An' Ah donn haf t' work on Sundays—no—more—goo-by."

"But look at the risk you are taking; look at the dangers of working with explosives," cautioned Mrs. Washington, entreating the cook to remain.
"Deed taint no dangers, Mrs. Wash'n't'n, you jes gits blowed up onct in a while. In de kitchen you gits burnt up and scalded an' dar you is; but in de musicians factories you jes gits exploded all t' peeces an' whar is you? Ain't dat better?"

"Well, will you send me your sister, Blanchet?"
"She bin workin' three months in de 'optical gittin' two dollars a day."
"How about your other sister, Rose?"
"Mah goodness, she's uh lady! She's runnin' de elevator in dat big department house on Connecticut avonct an' attin' twelve dollars uh week. She donn do nothin' but push uh l'il handle, an' she upstairs an' push uh l'il handle agin an' say 'Wash yo' step, please'—real polite, like dat—an' den go downstairs agin an' read uh book all de rest ob de day. She ain't nevah gone t' work no more!"
This is not fiction; it is plain, serious fact that confronts the housekeepers in Washington. Servants are the hardest things in this city to find. The call to the factories and the government has depleted their ranks.

Capital Rapidly Becoming an Educational Center

UNLESS present signs fail, one important result of the war which will be of lasting duration will be the making of Washington the most influential publishing and educational center of the United States. This will fulfill one of George Washington's dreams of the capital city named in his honor.

The government printing office is the biggest printing plant in the world, but since America's entrance into the war the capacity of that plant has been hugely overtaxed. The government has been required to let many printing contracts to private firms, in spite of the fact that the law prohibits such a practice except in case of absolute emergency. But the emergency has been absolute, because of the enormous volume of publishing work incident to the war which the government has felt called upon to do. New York and Boston have regarded themselves as the publishing center of the western hemisphere and of the two New York has held the lead. Now, however, government publications are being issued at such a tremendous rate that their prestige is jeopardized. In addition, many magazines are published here, and it is understood many more are to be published, some moving from other cities. Some two hundred periodical publications are now being mailed from Washington.

Miss Jeannette Rankin Has Her Day in the House

WHILE scores of women, some of whom reached the capitol before seven o'clock in the morning, were fighting with door tenders in a vain attempt to force their way into the house galleries the day of the vote on suffrage, a modest little woman, low voiced and rather timid, was sitting among 400 congressmen on the main floor of the house of representatives watching them do exactly what she wanted them to.

That woman was Jeannette Rankin of Montana, the only woman ever elected to congress. It was "her day." Several thousand men and women who filled the galleries of the house looked down on her, and all realized that hers had been no small part in the victorious fight. The speaker rapped for order. Congressmen opposed to suffrage and those for it quarreled over the time the resolution should be debated.

The main doors directly in front of the speaker swung open. Miss Rankin entered. A black stole was thrown over her left arm. She held a bunch of sweetheart roses, tied with yellow tulle, in her right hand. From force of habit she dropped into a seat in next to the last row.
She got up immediately and went to the big mahogany table half way down the floor. Members taking an active part in the passage of bills always sit there. Miss Rankin threw her bouquet carelessly on the table.
Chairman Baker of the suffrage committee left his place at the table. He had brought his committee clerk to the floor to handle his papers. It was the first time there ever had been a young woman clerk on the house floor. There will be more when suffrage is universal. She had on a black silk dress, white silk patch pockets, and collar of the same material with two sharp points.
Walsh of Massachusetts suggested that Baker allow Miss Rankin to open the arguments for suffrage. Baker was embarrassed, but agreed. Miss Rankin put her hand on the reading stand and looked at the speaker for recognition. She made a quiet speech for suffrage and was given close attention. She finished before her time expired and returned to her seat amid applause.

Government Clerks Likely to Get More Pay Soon

IT SEEMS as if the much-maligned government clerk is soon to come into his own. He has suffered for a long time on small wages. But now there are several bills in congress designed to help this financial situation. One of these measures, known as the Keating bill, stipulates temporary salary increases for employees making $2,500 or less. The increases graduate from 5 to 30 per cent.

Another measure, known as the Nolan bill, provides that no person who has been in the employ of the government for three years and who is twenty years old shall receive less than $3 per day, $90 per month, or $1,080 per year.
Hearings are now going on before congressional committees upon these bills, and it seems likely that one, if not both, will pass congress. The scale of living has increased so much in Washington that it is declared necessary for the clerks to receive higher wages in order to get along.

Neither of the bills is regarded as ideal. The Keating bill is only for temporary relief. In the case of the Nolan bill the clerks say that there are many in the ranks who, even though they receive more than $3 per day, still need more money.

Planning for Next Season's Home Garden Crops

REALIZING that the capital city should set an example for the rest of the country to follow, Washington already is making plans to provide bumper home garden crops next season. Numerous organizations to stimulate interest in home gardening have been formed, among the leaders being the Capital Garden club, the first in the city to take up the question of increasing the food supply by local cultivation.

The Capital Garden club started a campaign recently to raise $3,000 to defray the expenses of a campaign of intensive education, and today the sum is almost in hand. Cash prizes will be awarded those having the best gardens and experts will be engaged to supervise the plots and assist in their cultivation. The department of agriculture is taking a keen interest in the home garden project and Washington's amateur farmers will have the advantage of the co-operation of the department's experts.

It is expected that the action of Clarence Wilson, food administrator for the District of Columbia, will be followed elsewhere. He has pledged his co-operation and assistance, expressing the belief that the increase of production is just as important as a war measure as the saving of food. He believes excellent results could be accomplished all over the country if all other food administrators would make this a part of their duties.

At any rate, Washington intends to show the way in this important phase of war work and will blaze a trail that other cities will do well to follow.
