The Business Man Says

"I am more interested in good telephone service than Rates. I must have good Service or I cannot run my business."

It was to be expected that a four-year war, involving twenty-seven nations, in which seven million five hundred thousand men were killed, and more than twenty million injured, costing one hundred eighty-six billions of dollars, would upset business and domestic affairs everywhere.

It certainly has done so.

It is the American characteristic to aim to produce the best manufactures, operate the finest railways, conduct the biggest stores, etc.

We are not satisfied to be just fair or medium. We strive for perfection.

The Telephone Company standard of Plant and Service has been in keeping with the National Characteristic. It has insisted upon the best telephone equipment that money could buy, and the best telephone service that skillful and competent people could produce.

The service is gradually getting back to the pre-war status, just as every business is slowly recovering from the effects of the war.

It is hoped that the Telephone Service will be the first to reach a high standard of perfection. No effort will be spared to secure this result.
