Do Not Hang Up the Receiver
When you Get the Wrong
Number!

These are some of the causes for WRONG NUMBERS, the blame for which rests partly on the Telephone User and partly on the Telephone Company:

- A subscriber may speak indistinctly;
- He may trust to his memory when calling a number;
- The private exchange operator, who has other duties to perform while watching the switchboard, may be at fault;
- The figures in the number may be unconsciously transposed by the subscriber;
- Not infrequently the subscriber in his haste does not pay proper attention to the exchange prefix, and a wrong number results.

When you get the wrong number:
DO NOT HANG UP THE RECEIVER;
Move the hook up and down SLOWLY;
When the operator answers, tell her she has given you the wrong number and again give her the number wanted and she will try to complete the connection.

By getting the operator and explaining the mistake you protect yourself from an overcharge, as she will not register a message on the meter on the switchboard until your connection has been correctly established.
