

Fashion Hints for the Ladies.

THE WARDROBE.

Trimmings and Accessories of Pretty Summer Gowns.

Belts of dull finished kid, plain, embroidered or spangled, are the mode of the moment, and grosgrain and satin ribbons with or without slides, are also worn. A few corsets are seen, but these are not the dominant idea. They are mostly employed in connection with the long cash ends so much liked with soft summer gowns.

It has been already mentioned that stitching and stitched straps are the chief decorations of satin made gowns, but the straps are often of satin instead of being of the same goods as the costume. Satin straps are less severe than those of cloth and give an aspect of greater elaboration. They are also well used on jackets and capes of light cloth in conjunction with applications of lace or embroidery, a system of trimming which may be simple or rich, according as the satin is of the same shade as the cloth and the applications elaborate, or the satin is of a contrasting shade and accompanied by much gimpure laid over satin.

Tailor made capes are rather long this season, and are usually finished by one or more circular ruffles, so slightly curved that they are not very full. The cut shows a girl's costume of gray wool, the skirt being decorated with bands of cream gimpure. The blouse opens over a pointed gimpure of geranium velvet and has revers of the velvet with gimpure applications. The close sleeves have cuffs like the revers and a triple cap of gray wool. The belt and collar are of geranium velvet, the hat of tobacco brown straw trimmed with geraniums and geranium velvet.

WEDDING FASHIONS.

Items Concerning the Costumes For the Important Ceremony.

Princess gowns are fashionable, but not numerous, and they never become common. This style is the most elegant in appearance of any and is the regulation for wedding gowns. The princess form is less suitable for very slender figures than for rounded ones, but its disadvantages may be overcome by a proper adjustment of trimming. Mouseline de soie, so much employed as a decorative fabric, is especially pretty as an adornment of bridal costumes, its transparent cloudiness softening the long lines of the gown and harmonizing it with the filmy veil. Draperies of mouseline may be arranged around the neck, bust and shoulders, the sleeves may be covered with puffings of it, and it may compose the entire tulle or be carried completely around the foot of the skirt in plaitings or ruffles.

White satin, the conventional material for bride's attire, remains the favorite still, although moire and broche silks are sometimes employed. Cream white is chosen for brunettes and plump women, snow white for slender and fair women. Whatever white is selected all the accessories should be of the same tint—stockings, shoes, gloves and veil.

The cluster of orange blossoms is now worn at the heart instead of at the waist, and only a few of the flowers are used for decoration. The simple aigret of blossoms or a little diadem is preferred for the head, and is placed toward the front. The cut shows a costume for the bride's mother. It has a long rind of green broche silk, bordered with a ruche of mignonette green. The skirt and plastron are of plaited light green silk, as are the spangles and cravat. The broche sleeves are plain. The straw toque is trimmed with pink poppies and white feathers.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Pretty Accessories to Accompany Dainty Summer Costumes.

A great deal of jewelry is worn even with out of door costumes, although discretion must be exercised with respect to these. Jeweled buttons and long, jeweled chains, with stickpins and brooches, are seen with street gowns—that is, articles which have or pretend to have some use and are not solely ornamental, like a bracelet.

Out crystal balls are a novelty for terminating the handles of parasols. Carved ivory handles are also revived, and various designs are seen, animals, birds, etc., being favorites. Perhaps the newest pattern is the three plumed crest of the Prince of Wales.

Embroidered black net is used for many charming costumes this season over white, black or colored silk.

Now is the time to utilize rich old lace which has become too much worn to be beautiful as it is, but retains its bold pattern intact, although the mesh has been broken away. The lace may be applied to cloth or satin and the design embroidered down with silk or beads, the remnants of the mesh being afterward cut out, leaving the design incised on the material. This forms a very fashionable and effective trimming, and is used for revers, cuffs, yokes and collars.

The sketch illustrates two pretty cravats. The first is of pale pink mouseline de soie, the neck ruffle and jabot being bordered with pink plaid taffeta. The second is of orange taffeta edged with a tiny ruche of white mouseline de soie and has a jabot of white lace embroidered with orange baby ribbon.

THE COIFFURE.

Preferred Way of Arranging the Hair—A New Coat.

For the fashionable coiffure the hair continues to be waved. It is lifted to the top of the head, where it is lightly twisted and forms a soft, upright loop. Ornamental pins and combs are much worn. But little hair is carried over the forehead—two tiny curls perhaps. For a low forehead the pompadour style is pretty, but a high forehead requires softening by a surrounding of light, fluffy locks.

Tiny tresses without a crown are seen. They are composed of puffings of tulle and a few flowers or ostrich tips, and are just large enough to encircle the knot of hair at the top of the head.

Hats lifted in front form a contrast to the general style, which dips down over the face, and are usually more becoming, as they show more of the hair in front. Flowers and fruits are the preferred trimming, these being garlanded about the crown and a cluster being placed in front under the brim next the hair.

Wedding veils are square, being so arranged that one corner falls over the face, the others being drawn back and held in place by being pinned to the hair behind. The veil may also be worn mantilla fashion, with the face uncovered. If it is preferred, but the first style is the most pleasing.

The illustration shows an attractive coat of black pean de soie. Bias bands of pean de soie outline a bolero and pass up to the collar at the back. The collar itself is of violet velvet, and small gold buttons adorn the open fronts. The tight sleeves are quite plain. This style of coat is entirely new and may be made of satin or taffeta. The effect depends upon the fit entirely, as no trimming is used, and the tailor made aspect is preserved as far as possible.

"Lady Babbie" Off the Stage.

I saw Maude Adams the other day in a hansom and though she does not have the appearance of one who is on the verge of a collapse, as the papers would like us to believe, she looked very thin and worn. She has the smallest face of any woman I have ever seen, and with all her work and delicacy she is most remarkably young looking. On the stage in her Babbie got up she looks like a little girl of about 16. In street dress you can see that she is a woman well on to 30, but a very well groomed and good looking woman. She dresses in plain, but very smart and has not the least suggestion of the actress in her appearance.—New York Letter.

OUTING COSTUMES.

Gowns to Be Worn For Golf, Tennis and Bicycle Riding.

Tailor made costumes are in great demand both in wool materials and duck and pique. Stitching, straps and buttons are the only trimmings employed, but the severity of such a gown is happily relieved by the chemisette front usually to be seen beneath the open bodice, the chemisette being ruffled, puffed or shirred as elaborately as is desired. Coquilles of mouseline de soie or lace are a favorite decoration, and cravats of white, blue or pink tulle, tied in a big butterfly bow, are newest of any neckwear.

The latest tennis gowns have a plaid skirt and a bodice of plain goods of the predominant color of the plaid. Coats of solid scarlet cloth are used for golfing and add a gay note to the landscape.

Short, tight jackets or boleros of white pique are a novelty for summer wear and are fresh and pretty, as they may be easily laundered. The same style of garment is seen in white satin, but when made of such rich material its use is confined to narrow limits. Silk and satin are very valuable materials for the wardrobe, but their place is not on outing gowns, and the elaborate designs for bicycling, yachting and tennis costumes, in which white silk is given a prominent part, are practically useless and could only serve for the dressmaker's show-room.

The cut shows the latest French model for a bicycle suit. The bloomers are of brown serge, as is the jacket blouse, which is belted with yellow leather and opens over a pink shirt waist and black satin four-in-hand. The white straw hat has white quills and a brown ribbon band.

FASHION HINTS.

What is Worn by Those Who Follow the Newest Mode.

Some very elaborate summer costumes have the skirt and bodice of differing materials, although of the same color. The jacket corsage is frequently cut away in a curious fashion and has a basque only at the sides and back. The basque is lined with satin of a contrasting color, and the very newest departure is to place a tiny ruche of ribbon along the inside of the edge of the basque, so that it scarcely shows at all from the outside, just as a balconise is put on the inside of the foot of a skirt.

Dark blue and Nile green form a fashionable color combination, the latter serving

ing as a lining for jackets of the former. Jackets of various bright tones of red are much worn in Paris for morning walks, but they necessitate great care in the choice of the gown and hat with which they are worn. With a jacket of vivid color it is best to keep the gown dull and simple so that the jacket may be the decorative touch of the costume. The hat may be black or may match either the jacket or the gown, but there should be no opposition of bright colors, as the charm of the costume is then entirely lost.

Many elegant corsages, blouses of spangled lace or heavy gimpure are adorned with large poppies of tulle or silk gauze. These poppies are made of frills of the material, gathered very tight to form a rosette, the heart being composed of an immense cabochon or a jet motif.

The picture shows a group of parasols. The first, of tulle, is covered with lace designs and is bordered with bands of lace separated by a puff. The second is of pink pean de soie embroidered with apple blossoms. The third is of tulle cut in scallops at the edge and trimmed with bands of black velvet ribbon.

Old New Orleans.

Before the lighting of the streets of New Orleans at night with oil lamps, which important innovation in civilization was decreed by Baron de Carondelet, then governor of the province, the streets of the town, except on moonlight nights, were in Cimmerian darkness. If occasion required that people, especially women or an entire family, should venture out in the inky night and only too frequently under a dark sky, they were piloted by a servant bearing a lantern. But in those days there was little gadding about in New Orleans. "Early to bed" was the rule, and, except for the firing of the 9 o'clock gun in the Plaza de Armes, the roll of the curfew drum at the barracks, the drowsy hourly cry of the sentinels at the forts announcing the hour and the hooting of screech owls in the trees in the plaza, there was little to disturb the silence after dark of the streets of the "New Rome" on the banks of the Mississippi in those days of its dolce far niente of the expiring Spanish domination in Louisiana.—New Orleans Picayune.

A BLACK SKIN REMOVER.

The Negro Need Not Complain Any Longer of Black Skin.

This preparation, if used as directed will turn the skin of a black person four or five shades whiter, and that of mulattoes perfectly white. It also removes wrinkles and freckles from the face and makes the skin beautiful.

Any person using it can see the result in forty-eight hours. It does not turn the skin in spots but bleaches out white. It is a very good thing for weak eyes if allowed to get in the eye while washing the face.

One box of this powder is all that is required, if used as directed, the skin remaining beautiful without continual use, and is perfectly harmless.

Direction and preparation will be sent to any address on receipt of $2.00 or C. O. D.
