White Elephants Are Scarce. Only 24 white elephants have been captured since the beginning of the Christian era. This is the declaration of a noted elephant catcher of India.

HOW ONE CROP WAS SAVED. Nebraska Man's Story of the Way in Which He Conducted a Raid on Grasshoppers.

The Nebraska State Journal tells this story of a gentleman who was growing wheat in southern Nebraska when the grasshoppers struck him. He had a 40-acre field of wheat that year, promising a big yield, and the prospect of its having to go to feed his enemies, the grasshoppers, was galling almost beyond endurance. Very soon after the vanguard of the hoppers appeared, however, this gentleman made an enomological discovery that saved his crop.

"I found," he said, "that the grasshoppers were in the habit of climbing the wheat stalks every morning to spend the day feeding on what was intended to feed me and my family. I used to go out to the field to see how they were getting on every morning, and in my impatience at the liberties they were taking with my wheat I would occasionally strike at a clump of them as they hung to a stalk and knock them to the ground.

"After awhile I noticed that when a grasshopper was thus dislodged he made no further effort to get his dinner, but remained on the ground until the regular time to climb up the stalk next morning. Immediately on making the important discovery I went and took down our long wire clothes line, and called my wife to come and help me. Then we went through that 40-acre field, dragging the clothes line over the wheat between us, and knocked all the grasshoppers to the ground. There they stayed till the next day.

"Next morning we gave the hoppers just time enough to get well started up the stalks when we went out and repeated the proceeding of the day before. The result was the same, and in the course of a few days every grasshopper in that field had died of starvation. Our neighbors came out every morning and called us a pair of old idiots, but we harvested the only wheat crop in that part of Nebraska that year."

SPANKS HER BIG HUSBAND. George Ratted at His Better Half's Gaudy Hosiery and Got a Good Licking for It.

George Kummerlee, of Hoboken, N. J., who is six feet tall and strong enough to tear his diminutive wife in twain, appealed to Recorder Stanton in Hoboken to punish her for her habit of boxing his ears, spanking him across her knees and scratching his face. He complains that she acquired the habit shortly after they were married and that it has grown in ferocity.

When Kummerlee explained that her conduct was due to the fact that he "I'm no goat," said Haggerty, as the chase led up the steep face of the rock. "I'll surround the bowlder and wait for the lady and gentleman to come down."

The citizens of Harlem helped Haggerty surround the rock and watched the fleeing bridegroom and the sprinting bride as they appeared and disappeared in their spiral ascent.

"They'll throw each other from the precipice," shouted a man who was getting late for work, but didn't seem to care.

"Officer, you must form a human chain at once," said a woman.

"What for?" said Haggerty.

"Didn't you ever go to the theater? Did you ever see a piece where the gentleman throws the lady from a rock without the police forming a human chain?"

Just then the bridegroom reached the summit, dodged through a little pavilion up there, and started down the path again just as his wife reached the summit on the other side. She stopped to get her breath, and that lost her the race, for on the trip down the bridegroom beat her by two laps and a half around the hill. He also eluded Policeman Haggerty and dodged through the crowd in the park to Madison avenue, where he boarded a car.

"He got on a car," yelled some one as Haggerty came up.

The policeman jumped aboard the wrong car (there was a string of them), and nabbed a man who looked like the young husband.

LOST LIKE A PRINCE.

THE GAMES LOSER THAT EVER STRUCK GAMBLING JOINT.

Got Rid of $18,000 in One Hour and Then Went Back to Herding Sheep on a Ranch in Wyoming.

"There's no way of telling in advance how a man's going to take his complete wiping out in a game of chance," said a Wyoming man to a Washington Post reporter. "I've seen men of long-tested gameness go all to pieces after big losses; seen them suddenly struck speechless, as weak as children, with their lips trembling, like those of women, who are about to cry. On the other hand, I've seen chaps with low foreheads and weak chins and reputations for crawling and backing water in tight places, stand four-square to the finishing wrenches of long runs of devilish luck and take their bitter medicine with hearts apparently as brave as their faces were weak.

"The games loser I ever saw to have a sheep herder, who didn't look to have enough character to stuff great peat. He was bunched sheep on the Idaho sage ranges for $25 a month and his grub, when an aunt in the east whom he had scarcely ever heard of, much less seen, died and left him $18,000. He didn't have to come east to get the money; a lawyer handed him the bundle in Potomac. He went to Bud McGrath's farm bank and told Bud that he wanted to make a few $1,000 bets. McGrath told him that he'd better hang on to his coin. The herder told Bud that he wanted action on his money, and that if he couldn't get it at McGrath's layout, why, there were others. So McGrath dealt them from the box himself, with a $1,000 limit. I saw the whole play. It lasted only 40 minutes. The herder wasn't in it at any stage of the route, and the game was on the level beyond all doubt. Coppered or open, the herder couldn't land a right. It was the fiercest run of evil luck I ever saw a man have at faro bank.

"I found," he said, "that the grasshoppers were in the habit of climbing the wheat stalks every morning to spend the day feeding on what was intended to feed me and my family. I used to go out to the field to see how they were getting on every morning, and in my impatience at the liberties they were taking with my wheat I would occasionally strike at a clump of them as they hung to a stalk and knock them to the ground.

"I'VE HAD MY WHIZZ."

When the herder had lost $13,000, McGrath said to him:

"You'd better pinch out the remaining $5,000—give yourself a chance."

"You hand me out another boxful," replied the herder. "When I get enough I'll be broke."

"The man was perfectly cool and collected, and he laid down his last five $1,000 bills without a tremor. He picked four straight losers. By that time the box was nearly out. The herder put down his last $1,000 note in an effort to call the turn. He lost out.

"Son," said McGrath to the sheepherder. "I'm no hog. I'll just cut it in two with you, and he began to count half of the money that he had won from the herder.

"No, you won't," replied the herder, "but you can give me a drink and a bottle to put in my pocket."

"Better take a couple thousand, anyhow, and run to 'Frisco or Denver, and have a whizz for yourself," persisted McGrath.

"I've had my whizz," was the man's reply. He wasn't sulky at all, and he didn't try to look abused. He was simply all man and all game.

"Where are you bound for now?" asked McGrath, after setting out the drinks and a pocket bottle.

"Back to the old Circle-X," said the herder, and he started for the ranch an hour later. He had bought three blue flannel shirts, a pair of top boots and a poncho, and he took these things along with him in a bundle. He was found frozen stiff on the bank of the Snake river next winter."

A Skillful Evasion.

"B—but I thought the cannibal king was hunting and was not eating any meat," protested the shipwrecked sailor.

"So he is," responded the cannibal queen, grimly, "but he regards you as seafood."—Judge.

No Information. "Yes, she tried to find out how much money her husband had in the bank."

"And did she learn?" "No, indeed. They wouldn't let the bank teller."—Judge.
