SATURDAY... APRIL 7TH, 1906.

DO NOT BE SO TENSE.

Let the Lips Lightly Touch, Not Be Compressed, and Practice Taking Perfect Rests.

Resting the mouth is very important. Your lips should lightly touch each other, but should not be compressed. Your teeth should not be ground together, as is the habit of most people. You should not pull the upper lip down or do anything that distorts the mouth. Take a looking glass and examine your mouth. Be sure that you know how to rest your lips.

Then learn how to rest your head. This, too, requires some knack. In walking the head should rest well back upon the neck. It should never be thrust forward. In sitting it should take the easiest position possible, and if convenient, it should rest against a cushion or the back of a chair. There ought to be more high backed chairs in the world. The head ought to be rested more than it is.

Resting the back is very important. Most women have a backache simply because they cannot rest the back. Men usually sit in comfortable chairs. Desk and office furniture, though it looks stiff and heavy, is really very comfortable. A good desk seat is the most comfortable thing in the world. Often the chair revolves, giving one a chance to rest one's muscles. One can turn this way or that, revolve so as to keep away from the light and turn in such a manner that the rays strike one's book just right. But with women's furniture it is different. Nothing is really comfortable.

The woman's resting chair should be low enough for her to touch her feet to the ground; it should be located where it is just bright enough. Few women have the room light enough during the day. They sit and poke along in the dark. Few women have nice, cozy, bright comfortable reading desks, and few indeed, have the right kind of a sewing room.

In a handsome home on Long Island there is a linen closet that is as a linen closet ought to be. It is 12 feet square, has two windows, and is papered in a comfortable buff. Its chairs are high-backed sewing chairs, and there are foot-stools. The room is scented with lavender and there are low shelves and plenty of them, for the linen. Such a room, if converted into a sewing room, would be ideal.

Learn to rest your body all over. Then practice resting for five or ten minutes three or four times a day. Pretty soon the habit will become strong on you and you will rest all the time.

Taking the perfect rest cure will seem worth while to you when you discover how it relieves of headaches and other ills. Just try it for a few weeks and see how you feel.

DAINTY CASE FOR MUSIC.

Not Infrequently the Musician Wants Something Fancy to Carry Music Roll of an Evening.

It is not always easy to find a really practical music-case which will hold a fair number of pieces, and which yet will not look out of place when carried in the evening, and when seen in the company of a dainty evening cloak. We give a suggestion in the accompanying sketch for a simple but very pretty music-case, suitable for taking out in the evening.

This case should be made in silk of some dark color, and lined also with silk, but in a paler shade, a stiff interlining of canvas being used to make it firmer. Just where the case folds over, on the inner side, there should be a band of strong black elastic about one-half inch wide, but long enough to reach from end to end of the case, and laced securely on either side. The music can then be folded in half and slipped under the elastic band, just as blotting paper is held in a blotting-book.

The case should be edged with silk cord in a harmonious color, and tied with ribbon bows. A handle formed of twisted ribbon and also tied with ribbon bows will give a finishing touch to this pretty case.

Smoothing Veils.

No woman traveler or dweller in a boarding house need put up with rumpled veils, ribbons and other affairs nowadays. Light-weight and convenient smoothing irons are to be had together with little alcohol lamps for heating them. They are easily portable and take up very little room. And they do the necessary pressing as quickly and well as the old-fashioned kind.

Simple Cucumber Cream.

Take the cucumbers and cut in small pieces, then cover with water, using a cupful to each cucumber. Let simmer for half an hour on a slow fire. Strain and add ten drops of benz. In to each pint of clear fluid. Shake well and use as a face wash.
