

“Where are we at.”

In the soup. It is boiling and very hot.

The more you abuse an Afro-American the better he likes you.

You are more kind to your enemies than you are to your friends.

Some people imagine that they can discuss the financial question.

This is a money campaign in which Afro-Americans do not figure.

Moneyed men only are wanted in this campaign.

Some men would rather have newspaper notoriety than money.

Mr. Langston may style Mr. Bryan a National tramp, but, from all appearance he is a repeated one.

This is not a campaign of abuse but solid argument.

For this and other reasons Afro-Americans are not in it.

When the battle is over, you may then count the dead and wounded.

Several have made their apologies and asked forgiveness.

Senator Sherman made a great speech at Columbus.

He is the right man in the right place.

Brave men will protect their families.

A coward is often found in the ranks of the brave.

A colored judge will fill one of the benches in our court.

There are slow men as well as women.

A positive man or woman is a jewel.

A good journal is hard to find some times.

Some men think marriage is a failure.

Some women are of the same opinion.

A good woman is a positive character.

When you find them they are entitled to respect.

Women ought to be allowed to make laws for the men. Existing evils would be somewhat different.

The advice of a good woman will often keep men out of trouble.

Some men think women have no rights that they are bound to respect.

They think otherwise when they enter into a systematic courtship.

The happiest days a young woman enjoy are the days of her courtship.

Carriage rides are less frequent after marriage.

You can command respect by letting a man know his place.

Too much familiarity breeds contempt.

Never tell all you know at any time.

Some people will say that they know you, especially among your friends in your absence.

A man who spends his money lavishly among friends does it to make an impression.

A sensible woman will not tolerate his company.

He spends more before his marriage and starve you to death thereafter.

A conceited man or woman is wise in his or her own estimation.

A bombast will endeavor to impress you that he is wise.

A still tongue often makes a good impression among the learned.

Don't imagine that you know it all.

You will show your weakness soon enough.

Flattery some times impresses a bombast that he has knowledge.

The weakness of some people is often portrayed in their talk.

If you are silent you can find out just how much they know.

A vacillating person has no stability.

Your welfare is dangerous in their hands.

Your enemies you know, your friends you must watch.

Your enemies often remain away from you, your friends get near you.
