SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1890.

A LAMENTABLE METEOROLOGICAL VISITATION.

The storm that has just swept along the valley of the Ohio is one whose ruthless violence is unmatched by any of these terrible visitations that have gone before it. Unparalleled it is in its destructive effects in the annals of any land or time. It is a thing that calls forth the deepest sympathy of all who read of the region through which it passed. Great cities have been laid in ruins, the face of the country has been made a desolation. Nothing unprepared by the hand of man or of nature herself has had strength to resist the mighty sweep of the wings of this cyclone. The enormous value of the property destroyed is forgotten in the appalling horror that fills the stoutest heart as we contemplate the terrible loss of life that has been the supreme calamity of this visitation. The survivors, as they view the places where their homes once were happy, will forget the wreck of their fortunes that leaves them beggars in their grief for the greater loss of those lives which made life precious to them and property valuable in their eyes.

These destructive energies of the elements have become of alarming frequency and force. It is idle to think that we hear of them more only because of the more perfect methods in vogue of gathering and transmitting the news. Their frequency and power are both increasing, and the causes are worthy of the closest study of the most advanced science, if indeed there is any grasp of thought yet sufficiently wide and strong to reach even a conjecture of their causes, and of any means of preventing a recurrence of such developments of the elemental powers of nature.

There will be a very important meeting at the Chamber of Commerce this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and our citizens generally are expected to be there. Upon the action at this meeting will depend whether the proposed permanent exhibit of our products in Chicago and some Atlantic city shall be commensurate with the merits of our section. Mr. D. Freeman has, since the last meeting, interviewed many of our leading citizens, and will make a very gratifying report upon the liberal manner in which the proposition has been received by them. He hopes to be able to tell the meeting that there is a very strong probability that the required $1,500,000 per month of subscriptions will be forthcoming. It will be remembered that the Santa Fé Railroad Company have offered to provide and pay for a permanent exhibition room in the Rialto building in Chicago. This is a very central and attractive location. The only expense our people will incur in Chicago will be to forward and take care of the exhibit there. A movement of this character should enlist the active cooperation of all our people, for its successful outcome will be very advantageous to Southern California.

A visit to the work upon the buildings of the State Reform School at Whittier showed us that it was progressing very rapidly. The second story of the main building is well under way, and the foundation and a portion of the first story walls of the engine and machine shops are completed. The boys' building, on the west side of the main edifice, and the girls' building, on the east side, have yet to be commenced. The several buildings are to be finished, according to the contract, by the 15th of October, and although the work has been considerably set back by the heavy and continued rains of this winter, Mr. R. B. Young, the contractor, says that he will have the buildings ready on time. The residence of Dr. Walter Lindley, the Superintendent, is a fine roomy building, well finished throughout, and was erected by Messrs. Collins & McNally at a cost, including extra work, of $4,500—an honest and creditable job, in which the State has got good money's worth.

We learned at Whittier, the other day, that Don Pio Pico, the last Mexican Governor of California, had received legal notice to vacate the Rancho, the old homestead of the Governor, which he has occupied for perhaps half a century. The enforcement of the writ will leave this historical relic of a bygone era homeless, for we understand that he has nothing whatever left out of the wreck of one of the largest estates ever owned by one man in the pioneer times. As the Governor is hard upon ninety years of age, it is sad to contemplate the misfortunes that are closing around his evening of life.

IS IT TO BE THE WINDOW FRAUD?

There can be no doubt that the demoralization of silver in 1873 was a deliberate and deeply-planned plot to cheat the debtor classes of the country for the benefit of the creditor classes, the poor man for the rich, the farmer for the banker, the West for the East. It was made to look like the error of an engraving clerk, but the error was inspired; and for five years it was impossible to get silver back into the statutes as a coin on any terms, and it has up to this time been impossible to get the metal restored to its rightful place in the economy of the nation after a lapse of nearly twenty years of continuous contention. If it was merely an error, why is it that the people who have been always suspected of suggesting it, have persistently opposed the righting of the wrong, correcting the error?

The only thing that has been possible to accomplish in all this period is what the Bland act has done, to provide for a limited coinage of white metal, the amount being set at from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 per month. The animus of the clique behind the fraud has been too plainly evident during every month of the twelve years since the Bland act was passed. If there had been no conspiracy to demoralize silver and degrade it from its rightful place, why has not the highest limit provided by the new law not been reached for a single month in all these years, or if it has, then seemingly only by accident? The coinage of silver has hugged as closely to the lowest limit of the law, as some timorous land-lubber in command of a shaly craft would hug the shore in a heavy sea.

And now, when after eighteen years of endured injustice, the people have become impatient to the verge of madness, a new fraud is about to be perpetrated in the hope that the wool can be pulled over their eyes, and silver held in a position subordinate to gold. Secretary Windom's scheme is that fraud—no more, no less. It is an insidious scheme concocted for the purpose of getting the Bland act out of the way. That plan for the relief of the debtor classes was working admirably so far as it was allowed to work by the Secretaries of the Treasury, who have all been tools of the Wall-street pawn-brokers for many years. There was no disturbance to our finances wrought by the coinage of silver. All that coin, and all the certificates of that metal were being readily absorbed, and there was no drain of gold going on because of this use of silver. The people were justified by the facts before them in demanding a larger relief than was being given them in this respect, and the goldbugs had no answer to make. Their mouths were closed by the irrefutable logic of the situation. The West, with her mortgaged farms, with the ruinous prices being paid for her products, and with her great resources calling aloud for development, demanded a larger supply of money to meet the exigencies of the situation. There was no way to refuse this request, no grounds on which to deny the demand.

Senator Jones, a Western man and a thorough financier and economist, knowing the wants of the section he so ably represents, and the impetus all business must receive from a more adequate circulating medium, introduced a bill in the Senate which was perfectly satisfactory to the West in general. It was a step forward, and a long one, towards the free coinage of silver. We have all hoped that it would have passed the Senate, and in the event of its so doing, all felt sure of its being received with acclaim in the popular branch of the National Legislature. But it seems that all these hopes have been of the sort that makes the heart sick. The cloven foot of the devil of greed has gotten admission to the Lower House, and is leaving its devious tracks all over that place, where the people's representatives have been wheeled or bought to betray their constituents. It is very evident that the Window scheme is to be passed through the House, and pressed upon the Senate as a substitute for the Jones bill. The results of such a thing will be disastrous. The Bland act will be repealed by it. Silver will be a mere commodity, measured in its value by gold. It can be bought and sold, dealt in, cornered, made "long" and "short," knocked about like a shuttlecock and degraded totally from its position as a noble metal to the rank of lead, iron or coal. It is all very well to provide for the free coinage of the white metal when its value reaches a certain ratio with gold. The schemers who have invented this "cunningly devised fable" know well that time will never come. This provision is the spring of deceit to catch the woodcocks of Congress who do not see the effects of this bill. Some "high-reaching Buckingham" in the House is being used by the gold conspirators of Wall street to give silver the coup de grace and knock the financial life out of it for years to come. Window is Wall street's tool, and the Western Congressmen who vote for his bill are the gudgeons of legislation who are selling the interests of their constituents for an economic bladder stuffed with wind.

Don Bernardo Guirado, one of the most sagacious of our country merchants, owns a walnut orchard a few miles above his store at Old Los Nietos, which he told us yields him a net profit of $15,000 every year. As the orchard contains one hundred acres, this is at the rate, year in and year out, of $150 from each acre. Mr. J. H. Burke has a forty-acre orchard near Rivera, which although not in full bearing, last year gave him a return of within forty dollars of $6,000. These figures show that the English walnut is a good tree to plant. It is not much of a sign of Waterman's weakness as a candidate for the head of the Republican ticket that the Times, his most inveterate opposer, devotes three mortal columns of editorial to show why he should not be made the nominee. A few months ago the Times treated the suggestion that Waterman should receive the nomination for a second term as a good joke. Now it takes three columns of serious editorial stuff to show why he should not be nominated. Verily, the Waterman boom is growing apace. Although he will never again be landed in the capitol, yet it looks very much as if he would, in running for the nomination of his party, be "Eclipse first—the rest nowhere."

MANGLED HUMANITY.

THE WALLS OF A BIG BREWERY COLLAPSE.

Six Men Buried in the Ruins—Three of Them Dead—Nine Men Killed by the Explosion in Chicago—Fourteen Injured—Other Items.

EYANVILLE, Ind., March 28.—The two side walls of the Fulton-avenue brewery collapsed this afternoon, letting the roof fall in. Six men were at work in the upper story, three of whom escaped, but John Winger, Charles Tilley and Edward Kelly were buried in the debris, and are believed to be dead. Owing to the dangerous condition of the building it is difficult to get anybody to work on the ruins tonight. The firemen are doing what they can.

A harbor tug was swamped this morning by a tremendous gale. The crew of six men were rescued with great difficulty. The severe storm last night unroofed a few buildings, but did no other serious damage.

THE CHICAGO EXPLOSION.

Nine Men Killed and Thirteen Severely Injured.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Search in the ruins of the building wrecked by the explosion at the sugar refinery yesterday was completed this evening, and it is now known that nine men were killed and thirteen injured. All the dead were laborers, their names being August Therman, Albert Hass, Frank Wallison, John Otto, Henry Hubelst, Michael Heuer, Morris Flynn, Albert Witzka and Fred Graff. Most of the bodies were partially consumed or terribly mutilated and some of them could only be identified by fragments of clothing remaining intact. Great crowds surrounded the place all day, most of them being anxious relatives and friends, and whenever a body was taken out and identified the lamentations of the immediate relatives were heartrending. One or two of the injured may yet die, being very seriously burned. The Coroner's jury will meet on Thursday. The officials of the sugar refinery pursue their policy of yesterday of refusing to give any information they may have.

A STARTLING CONFESSION.

Bridget Sweeney Says She Set Fire to Secretary Tracy's House.

NEW YORK, March 28.—A Washington special in a morning paper, printed with large type, says: It is confidently stated that the mystery which surrounded the fire in Secretary Tracy's residence is cleared up. There are well-sustained rumors that Bridget Sweeney, a trusted old servant, who had been living in the Secretary's family fourteen years or more, has confessed that she fired the house with kerosene. Her statement is said to be that she poured kerosene all over the room, paneling and as far up the stairs as her stock of oil would go, lit the parlor gas set fire to the coal oil lamp, No. 20, which was in the room, and then fled. Whatever is assigned for the horrible deed, and no possible incentive except insanity.

TROOPS AND PROSPECTORS.

Prospect of Bloodshed Over the Lost Adams Mine.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., March 28.—Great excitement prevails here over the sending of troops into the Navajo reservation after a party of nineteen prospectors who are in the Caviso mountains, about one hundred miles north of Gallup. The party has been there three weeks, and it is alleged has found the Lost Adams diggings. They are well armed and are determined to thoroughly prospect the section or fight. The Indians drove out a party a short time ago to the north. No more shaft on a body of very rich native and free gold ore. The large party then went in, and the Indians notified the troops at Fort Wingate to take them out. An expedition of seventy-five men left Gallup this morning with rations for the campaign.

Cable Flashes.

LONDON, March 28.—The Tithes bill passed the second reading in the Commons tonight.

BERLIN, March 28.—Minister of Commerce Von Berlepsch gave a farewell dinner to the labor conference delegates tonight.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 28.—The sculling match today on the Parramatta river between McLean and Matterson resulted in a victory for McLean.

LISBON, March 28.—The claims of England and the United States on account of the seizure of the Delagoa railway by the Portuguese, are settled except for a few formalities.

LONDON, March 28.—A dense fog prevails on the Irish coast, and it is presumed that the steamer City of Paris is proceeding direct to Liverpool without touching at Queenstown.

Incendiarism at Redding.

REDDING, Cal., March 28.—A fire, which is supposed to be incendiary, broke out in the Good Templars' hall, and the hall and three adjoining stores were burned. Mrs. Willis's millinery store, Mrs. Tester's restaurant and Howell & Hall's paint shop were consumed. Loss probably $15,000.

Sheriff Flack's Successor.

ALBANY, March 28.—Governor Hill has appointed Major-General Daniel E. Sickles Sheriff of New York, vice Flack, resigned.

COUNSELLOR CLARKE.

He Pleads His Own Cause on a Writ of Habeas Corpus. F. K. Clarke, the Pasadena man of much notoriety, was before Judge McKinley yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus. Clarke is confined in the city prison for obtaining goods under false pretenses. His wife and sister-in-law are included in the charge, but they are out on $250 bail each. Clarke came up to plead first that the charge against him be dismissed; if he failed in that he wanted to be let go on his own recognizance, and failing here again he wanted his bail reduced to $250.

He came into court at 2 o'clock accompanied by his poor wife, who looked the picture of distress, if not of despair. He was dapper, chipper and confident in his demeanor. As soon as he sat down, he took a comb from his pocket and proceeded to straighten out every kink in his hair, until he had it reduced to proper form. Then he took a deliberative survey of the room and all in it, his thin, sharp face wreathed in smiles of approval at all he saw. His pleadings on the petition are as long as all the moral laws in the world, and compete with the Levitical law in their voluminousness. The court soon told Mr. Clarke that his bail would not be reduced, and when Clarke pressed the point several times by instancing the bail of the unfortunate ladies of his family, the court said: "Well, do you want the bail of the ladies raised?" He then argued to have the case dismissed for many and for complicated, if not for weighty and sound reasons. The court took the matter under advisement to decide today.

Clarke is charged with obtaining goods under false pretenses, and his wife and sister-in-law are charged with the same offense.

A new complaint was filed last evening against Clarke, sworn out by Simpson Bros., grocers. They say that he got $11 worth of goods from them by false representation.

Deputy District Attorney Hardesty tried to make out that Clarke's offense under the first charge is a felony. That is not specifically alleged in the complaint, but it is likely a new complaint will be filed charging that it is a felony.
