

THE DOCTORS.

The State Society Meets in Annual Session.

The Annual Address of President Lindley.

Interesting Reports by Several of the Committees.

Papers Read in the Discussions on Medical Subjects—List of the Physicians Present.

It was a convention composed largely of men, with a woman scattered here and there through the crowd, that settled down into quiet and attention at the rap of Dr. Walter Lindley's gavel, in the Elks' hall yesterday morning.

After a few words of introduction from Dr. Walter Lindley, Mayor Hazard took the floor and spoke to the following effect:

"It is with peculiar pleasure that I find devolving upon me the duty of welcoming this representative organization of California physicians. The physician is a student. To him comes no commencement day, no graduation, no cessation from study. In the earliest days of the world's history there were doctors. The savage tribes had medicine men before they had rulers; and through all ages the doctors have earned the respect and gratitude of all nations.

Continental study has brought the once crude subject to the standard of an exact science. You may say that man is the same today that he was a thousand years ago. Anatomically he is the same, but the surroundings of modern times give rise to new diseases and complications of old ones unknown to your lexicon, because of the new conditions of life and modern innovations in diet, clothing and habits. It requires an intelligent body of men to cope with and thwart the new diseases, and a physician who is not a student is useless. The medical fraternity has not disappointed mankind. It has kept pace with the march of improvement and stood ever in the front rank of the army of progress.

We have had meetings here in our city of large and influential organizations, but today, for the first time, it is our privilege to welcome the class of men to whom we entrust the lives of ourselves and our families. It may be that, from a financial point of view, the medical profession is an unprofitable one; that the doctor often finds a balance on the wrong side of the profit and loss account in his ledger, but the amount of love, gratitude and respect they receive from mankind is inestimable. We welcome you. You are always welcome. We hope that your stay among us will be pleasant, and we assure you a hearty welcome at any time you may choose to visit our fair city in the future."

Mayor Hazard was heartily applauded, and Dr. W. G. Cochran rose and delivered an address of welcome in behalf of the committee of arrangements and the Los Angeles Medical Association. He stated that there were now 182 registered physicians in Los Angeles, as against twenty eight years ago. Three years ago visitors would have been met with a brass band on every corner; today they would have to be contented with a serenade by the Salvation Army. We had a boom then, but it bursted not long ago, and Los Angeles folded the drapery of her couch about her and sank to pleasant slumber; at least that is what the Northern newspapers say. However, though three years dead, disintegration has not yet taken place, and if, while you are here, you doctors will hold a post-mortem on the remains, you will find a mighty lively corpse. Dr. Cochran here gave a series of statistics relative to the growth and present size of Los Angeles that was probably interesting to the visitors present, as they made liberal use of their note-books during the reading of the same.

Dr. James Simpson, of San Francisco, replied to the addresses of welcome in behalf of delegates from Northern and Central California. He spoke in a humorous vein, giving an exaggerated report of a former visit to Los Angeles during boom times when he slipped in the mud and was arrested for selling real estate when he got upon the cars with the mud still adhering to his clothes. He closed by saying: "We shall be pleased to accept all hospitality you choose to offer. You may entertain us in any way you please, and at the close of the meeting you may call on me and I will tell you what I think of the whole matter." Laughter and applause were frequent during the remarks of Dr. Simpson.

Dr. Lindley followed with a very able address, which was attentively listened to by all present, in substance as follows: "Dr. Lindley's Address. Members of the California State Medical Society: This is a day of joyous greetings. Many of us meet for the first time. We have been practicing our profession; some in the cool shadow of Shasta's snowy summit; others on the bright and shining sands of the Mojave desert; many in the beautiful city of San Diego, where Father Junipero, on the 16th day of July, 1769, established the first California mission; yet others in the San Joaquin valley, where there are fields of waving grain and where the raisin grape reaches great perfection; others in the orange groves of San Bernardino county; several in the rich valley of the Sacramento, while most of you have been in the busy hum and stimulating atmosphere of California's—The Pacific Coast's—great metropolis, San Francisco;—ye today will be with many of us the first opportunity to clasp hands and wish each other God speed in the noble mission of alleviating suffering and increasing the longevity of human life.

colleges, young men upon whom will fall the mantle now worn by older practitioners. We believe in you. There are no schools in the Union that are granting diplomas to a better class, whether judged by a social, mental or educational standard, than the two medical schools in San Francisco and the one in Los Angeles. Many of us—the majority of us—graduated at Eastern institutions, but we realize that you have had many advantages that we knew not of, and that we must soon yield our places. Every man here, who has graduated at a California school, has in his diploma something which places him out distinctly above the great mass of American physicians.

Young men of the Golden State, you are, in fact, California physicians, we hail and salute! I believe in some forms of protection. The American orange should be protected, the American raisin should be protected, and, in my opinion, the American physician should be protected. We, as physicians, do not desire any protection, except that holders of foreign diplomas who come to America shall not be allowed any greater privileges than are accorded abroad to American physicians.

The University of Berlin has recently refused to recognize any medical diplomas from United States medical colleges, and it has been announced that any American physician desiring to practice medicine in Prussia must first take a regular course in a German college. "The French Minister of Public Instruction has declared officially that hereafter foreign doctors shall submit their diplomas to the judgment of the French Faculties, which would then decide whether they were on a parity with those granted to French practitioners. Furthermore, foreign medical men should be required to undergo the final examinations to which French candidates for qualification to practice have to submit themselves."

One-sixth of the physicians of California are from foreign lands and graduates of foreign schools, and some of them are excellent physicians, but I would like to see the next Legislature provide for an examining board, no member of which should belong to the faculty of a California college, whose duty it would be to require each person who applied for a license, with a foreign diploma as his credential, to pass an examination equivalent to the final examinations of our California colleges.

The old fight between regulars and homeopaths has about exhausted itself. Real physicians have something else to do. Life is too short. The beam and the mote idea, and a personal application of the golden rule are now influencing the minds of intelligent physicians. No longer will one of our regular surgeons refuse to perform Caesarian section on a distressed woman, or tra-cheotomy on a choking child, because a homeopath had first been called.

Humanity has some claims on the skillful oculists, gynecologists and surgeons, that are higher and stronger than the adamantine walls of prejudice that divide schools. I know of one regular medical journal that has been published for four years, and has never contained a bitter word against a homeopath, but I regret to say that every homeopathic journal in America, still, to some extent, keeps up a windmill warfare. If the time devoted to mutual abuse had been spent in introspection, and scientific investigation, the world would have been much better off.

In discussing medical education, Dr. Lindley quoted the views of Dr. J. P. Widney, made public two years ago, and continuing, said that he thought physicians were becoming more abstemious each year. He advised every young physician to dispense, as far as possible, his own medicine. He said: "The following were recommended for reinstatement in the society: J. H. Johnson, T. W. Gerviss, C. A. McQuestin, Harry N. Winton, C. Rowell.

The board of censors also recommended that Dr. J. A. Bailey, of Santa Ana, be expelled from the association as a member. After some discussion as to the right of the association to expel a doctor without first giving him a hearing in his own defense, Dr. Bailey was expelled by a vote of forty-eight to three, and Dr. J. S. Griffin and Col. Joseph R. Smith were elected honorary members.

The committee on publication reported and were, on motion, discharged. The report of the editorial professional paper of the convention was read at this point by Dr. Emma S. Merritt, chairman of the committee on histology and microscopy. The paper dealt with the part played by bacteria or microbes in the economy of nature. It was so full of technical terms as to be unintelligible to the uninitiated, and the gathering around the reporters' table began to look sleepy, with the exception of one reporter, who whose face a look of horror slowly crept over as the lady next to him sketched the progress of fermentation decomposition of ordinary beer, and gave a lively description of the microbes that inhabit the fluid during the various processes. The microbes were said to have similar appetites to human beings, and to be Nationalists in so far that the different classes worked on the co-operative plan. The paper was said to be a very able effort, and was highly praised by the doctors.

Ex-Governor Stoneham was here introduced to the convention, and made a few remarks. Dr. Charles E. Blake reported for the Board of Medical Examiners. Report received and filed.

Dr. W. P. Gibbons, of Alameda, suggested the framing and passage of a law which would cause the plaintiff to provide sufficient bonds to indemnify, in case of failure to sustain his charge, the physician or surgeon in all pecuniary losses which he may have incurred; and I would urge that we use our best endeavor to, at least, secure legislation that will restrict the plaintiff to furnish bonds for all the legal cost of the suit.

He urged the society to do something to exhibit at the World's Fair.

Two plans have suggested themselves. First, To have a large papier mache model of the State, that will give the observer, at a glance, an idea of our physical geography; showing the pine forests, water courses, altitude and game, from the Sierra Nevada in the north to the San Jacinto mountains in the south, showing the delightful resorts at sea level to 10,000 feet above sea level, and also the valuable opportunities for some classes of invalids at Indian and Salton, which are several hundred feet below sea level; showing the orange gathering in some sections, while Shasta and other mountains are buried in snow; showing Catalina and other islands of the sea that lie in sight of our coast, where vacationists can have an ocean atmosphere and receive all the advantage of a sea voyage without any of its discomforts, and, in fact, give a general epitome of California.

Second, To offer a prize of $500 for the best article equivalent to not over fifty pages 12mo. printed matter, descriptive of the climate of California. In conclusion Dr. Lindley said: "We, of Southern California, sincerely appreciate your kindness in coming." "We believe that you are beneficial to our cause. We are engaged in a work which is one of continual care, anxiety and self-sacrifice. The work of a true physician, like that of a Sister of Charity, is a labor of love. Consequently, a sordid and selfish man is out of place in our profession. Day after day you face disease that others may give you, inhaling from the loathsome air about you, and leaving the comforts of home to aid those who are in distress.

"Enduring with a martyr's might, Through weary day and wakeful night, Far more than words may tell, Gentle and meek and lowly and unknown, Thy merits measured by thy God alone."

On motion the following committee was appointed to consider the recommendations contained in the president's address: Dr. Martin Kezberg, Dr. J. H. Parkinson, Dr. J. R. Haynes, Dr. Chester Rowell and Dr. T. R. Stockton.

Dr. J. F. Hamilton, of Salt Lake City, Utah, was invited to participate in the proceedings of the convention.

After a few announcements by the committee of arrangements the association adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Afternoon Session. Dr. Follansbee, for the Board of Censors, recommended the following list for membership in the association: J. H. Davison, F. D. Bullard, H. Nadeau, Lulu T. Ellis, W. W. Hitchcock, P. H. Bailhache, W. W. Beckett, A. Mitchell, C. P. Bogg, George L. Cole, B. F. Kier, C. D. Ball, J. H. Utley, W. R. Fox, D. G. MacGowan, W. L. Wade, M. L. Adams, N. Miner, J. W. Marks, O. Fitzgerald, J. T. Stewart, J. W. Hazlett, M. F. Price, Robert W. Miller, P. C. Remondino, W. A. Edwards. The following were recommended for reinstatement in the society: J. H. Johnson, T. W. Gerviss, C. A. McQuestin, Harry N. Winton, C. Rowell.

Ex-Governor Stoneham was here introduced to the convention, and made a few remarks. Dr. Charles E. Blake reported for the Board of Medical Examiners. Report received and filed.

Dr. Francis L. Haynes, the well-known surgeon and gynecologist, read a paper describing his method of operating upon patients in his particular line. Two patients of his, upon one of whom he had performed successfully a very difficult and dangerous operation; and the other afflicted with the unusual disease known as "floating kidney," were introduced and examined by interested physicians. Dr. McMonagle followed Dr. Haynes, indorsing most of his remarks and methods of conducting operations. Dr. Cole followed in the same line.

The president then appointed H. B. Ellis, C. S. Keaton, Washington Dodge and D. D. Crowley to take the place of absent members on the committee on prize essay. The association then adjourned until evening.

Evening Session. This was a short session. D. H. Hodghead, of San Francisco, of the committee on necrology, made his report. The committee on prize essay requested further time to make their report. The committee on medical and surgical diseases of children reported, through Dr. Dawson, of St. Helena, and the association then adjourned to attend a reception at the residence of Dr. Willis, 501 E. Vista street. The physicians present were: Los Angeles—H. Bert Ellis, H. G. Brainerd, T. J. McCoy, W. W. Hitchcock, J. H. Davidson, H. S. Orme, B. F. Kierulff, Mary W. Moody, Kate I. Howard, Lulu Talbot Ellis, J. M. Harris, T. A. Craves, John R. Haynes, W. L. Wade, O. D. Fitzgerald, Francis L. Haynes, Robert W. Haynes, J. E. Cowles, D. C. Barber, J. S. Widney, A. Mitchell,

W. W. Murphy, W. W. Beckett, J. H. Utley, Walter M. Boyd, W. G. Cochran, J. N. Hagan, C. B. Bogg, J. K. Carron, E. S. Carlisle, in case of failure to sustain his charge, the physician or surgeon in all pecuniary losses which he may have incurred; and I would urge that we use our best endeavor to, at least, secure legislation that will restrict the plaintiff to furnish bonds for all the legal cost of the suit.
