A CONTEMPLATED OUTRAGE.
 The Republican party has never been noted for moderation in the exercise of power. While pretending to a great regard for liberty and for popular rights, it has in reality never hesitated to sacrifice both to its lust of power. Just now the leaders of that party are engaged in incubating a bill which will hand the election machinery of the states over to federal officials. In this measure the American people are brought face to face with a great peril, and the only thing that will save them is a defection from the party ranks that can scarcely be hoped for. The Republican house caucus has decided to report a measure giving the control of the elections for president, vice-president and members of the house of representatives to federal officials. The president recommended such a bill in his message to congress. Such recognized leaders as Reed and McKinley are determined that it shall become a law. That the senate will put a bit into the mouth of its more impetuous associate is scarcely to be believed. Are we warranted, then, in assuming that the people are hopelessly without redress?

must either be refuted or explained away, or he must rest under a cloud that no amount of brilliancy will dissipate.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA is finely served in her representatives in congress. Stanford, who could have saved the clause in the tariff bill relieving from the internal revenue tax grape spirits used in the fortification of sweet wines, is absent in Europe, and that provision of the last importance to every vignerone in the state, is killed in committee; and Vandever's absence or inefficiency—it matters not which—jeopardizes the passage of the appropriation to finish the federal building in this city. In view of our experience this session it should be the object of both parties to select men of capacity, energy and fidelity to duty to represent us in the house, and we should lend all our efforts to send to the senate a successor to Mr. Stanford who will be able and willing to attend to the business of his constituents. Such a man as Stephen M. White in the senate would be of incalculable value not only to our section, but to the whole state.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1890.
 A WASHINGTON dispatch says that it is likely that our fellow townsman Major H. Z. Osborne, editor of the Evening Express, made so good an impression when he was at the capital as a candidate for the office of public printer, that he will be appointed one of the board of general appraisers under the McKinley tariff bill if it passes. For the sake of our fellow-sufferer in the art-preservative we hope he may get it, and that a good fat salary may be attached to the office.

HONEY CANS.
Eastern Dealers Object to the Use of Old Kerosene Cans.
 Shipments of honey to eastern points will begin soon. The crop is said to be perhaps a trifle smaller than usual, owing to the prevalence of cold and windy weather during the early spring months. Commission men who make a specialty of handling honey are endeavoring to make bee ranchers understand that the present practice of packing honey in gasoline and kerosene cans operates very unfavorably toward getting good prices for the article. For some time honey in old cans has been bringing on the average about one cent less a pound than that packed in new. This makes a difference of about 60 cents to the can, considerably more than the difference between the cost of the old and the new can.

SCALY SKIN DISEASES.
Psoriasis 5 years, covering face, head and entire body with white scabs. Skin red, itchy and bleeding. Hair all gone. Spent hundreds of dollars, but not cured. Incurable. Cured by CUTICURA.
CURED BY CUTICURA.
 My disease (psoriasis) first broke out on my left cheek, spreading across my nose and most covering my face. It ran into my eyes, and the physician was afraid I would lose sight. It spread all over my head, and my hair all fell out, until I was entirely bald-headed; it then broke out on my arms and hands, and my feet were so sore that I could not wear shoes. It covered my entire body, my face, head and shoulders being the worst. The white scabs from my head, neck, shoulders and arms; the skin would thicken and be red and very itchy, and would crack and bleed if scratched. I tried many hundreds of dollars of the CUTICURA REMEDIES and after using two bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, I could see a change; and after I had taken four bottles, I was almost cured; and when I had used six bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT and one box of CUTICURA SOAP, I was cured. I had been cured of the dreadful disease from which I had suffered for five years. I thought the doctors would never cure me. I thought I was cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES cured it without any scars. I cannot express with a pen what I suffered before using the CUTICURA REMEDIES. They saved my life, and I feel it my duty to recommend them. My hair is restored as good as new, and I feel as if I know of others who have received great benefit from their use.

The aspirants for the Democratic congressional nomination are increasing in number. The latest gentleman to shy his castor into the ring—to employ, metaphorically, the language of the accomplished people who profess the manly art—is Hon. J. Marion Brooks, a Democratic war-horse who snuffs the political battle from afar, and who can out-ha ha any charger of scriptural, poetical or historical narrative. When we say that the Hon. J. Marion is from Missouri we have said enough to let the discerning know that the political waters will be stirred to the very depths.

By no means. All who have read American political history are familiar with the high-handed acts of old John Adams and his brother Federalists. Their alien and sedition laws and their monarchical mummery and flummery were even more offensive than the tampering with the rights of the people which is now being attempted by John Cabot Lodge and his fellow conspirators. For a time the people were subjected to intolerable annoyance, menace and espionage in consequence of the laws enacted and the policy pursued by the Adams administration. There was apparently no redress. Every department of the national government was in Federalist hands. Congress was overwhelmingly Federalist. The supreme court was unanimously so. Even Washington had seemed to give his august countenance to the Federalist junta. In the person of the president of the United States the enemies of the liberties of the people had an indomitable and blooded leader to whom strife and the high-handed role were second nature. Everything seemed to point to an era of autocratic government, popular in form in some respects, which was apparently to last for generations.

Another objection made to the use of the old cans is that, owing to careless cleaning, they very often taint the flavor of the honey. Those which have previously been used for gasoline are not so likely to do this, as this volatile fluid evaporates, leaving scarcely a trace behind. But when the stock of gasoline cans runs out, kerosene are used. Honey-packers declare that these can easily be cleaned so that neither taste nor smell remain, but the commission men take a different view of it. It is certain that on various occasions cans of honey have been found when the soldered top was taken off to have a bad odor and taste.

The prohibition craze seems to be on the wane. A strong movement is reported in Maine for its repeal, and the business men of Nebraska are out in arms against it. Kansas is shaky on the subject, and Iowa, its western stronghold, is not so much of a stronghold as it formerly was. The fact is that prohibition is a tyrannical exercise of the power of the majority that grates severely upon the American mind. Regulation is readily accepted by many strong temperance people who are averse to prohibition on the ground of its infringement upon the free will of the individual.

But all this was surface glamour. Across the Potomac river, in the shades of Monticello, dwelt a genuine lover of liberty in the person of the man who had penned the immortal Declaration of Independence. If opposed to the un-republican brutality of the Federalists nothing but the calm wisdom of a statesman and philosopher, but before his wise and equable arrangement of Federalist insolence and usurpation the fabric of despotism melted away as does a snow bank under a fervid April sun. The people rose in their might and overturned the Federal party, and so great was the popular disgust inspired amongst the masses by these Federalist antics that a Democratic ascendancy which lasted quite forty years was insured, the contrivance by which John Quincy Adams was made president by the house of representatives not being a real interruption of that ascendancy, as Clay, Crawford and Adams all proclaimed as belonging to the party of Jefferson, and the Federalist organization had really disappeared at the second election of Monroe.

It is certain that on various occasions cans of honey have been found when the soldered top was taken off to have a bad odor and taste. A prominent commission firm of this city recently sent a man out to make a tour through the adjoining counties to look over the season's product of honey. He found that in nearly every case in spite of the protests which have been made the bee men were preparing to put up their strained honey in old cans. A large business is done in San Bernardino in the purchase of these old cans. A recent issue of a paper in that city narates the stealing of 180 of them by some boys, which shows how extensive the business is.

There is a general and quite natural feeling in Los Angeles that something ought to be done to insure the passage of an appropriation for the federal building in this city. It is the misfortune of this community to have an apathetic representative in congress, but our population is so unique in its composition, and so representative of all portions of the United States, that a little effort on the part of individuals would probably result in great good. Gen. Clunie may be relied upon to stand in cordially in any movement looking to our well-being, but his efforts should be seconded from as many influential directions as possible. The great chasm made by Gen. Vandever's neglect must be filled from some quarter.

Strong as the Republican party seems just now, it is not any stronger than were the Federalists under old John Adams. When Mr. Springer, an able and intrepid Democrat from Illinois, addressing Speaker Reed, said, "You can ride over the representatives of the people, sir, but the people can pull you and your party down," he spoke, although he may not have known it at the time, in the genuine spirit of prophecy. Perhaps the most offensive of all the measures proposed by the Republican leaders in this federal election bill, which takes the elections out of the hands of the people and puts them into those of federal myrmidons.

For the first time in a long while the police authorities of San Francisco are showing some backbone, and in a laudable direction. They seem to have set out in earnest to stop the slogging matches that for so long a time have been a disgrace to the metropolis of the Pacific coast. The extent to which a lot of brutal prize-fighters have been allowed to go at the Golden Gate was one of the scandals of the day. If the authorities will go further and put these gentry in the chain-gang as fast as they develop a disposition to punch each other's heads the public at large will breathe a fervent hosannah. For one reader of newspapers who cares to persevere intelligence of this kind, there are at least ten who are unspcakably disgusted at its frequent and nauseous recurrence. If the police will only continue the good work, they will earn abolition for many shortcomings. It is a great pity that the court sitting at Purvis, Mississippi, contented itself with only inflicting a fine of $500 on John L. Sullivan for participating in the Sullivan-Kilrain fight, instead of sending him to the penitentiary for a round term.

A while ago the Examiner issued an edition of fifty-eight pages. Last Sunday the Chronicle came out with sixty pages. In the name of the great Jumbo Jum, what does a newspaper reader want with such a paper? Life is too short to read it and keep abreast of the times in other matters. The time will come when the people, dazed and surfeited with the mammoth dailies now issued, will make a loud call for a paper that will give all the news of the day in a concise shape. As it is, one has to wade through an ocean of matter of no present interest to find what is really going on that one wants to know about. Mark the prediction: The reaction from the mammoth daily will be to a finger sheet containing nothing but actual news, boiled down to the most compact proportions; and these will be issued during the day in hourly editions as fast as the news comes over the wires. Trade papers will get all the advertisements excepting the "wants" and special and miscellaneous notices, and the editorial

The time will come when the people, dazed and surfeited with the mammoth dailies now issued, will make a loud call for a paper that will give all the news of the day in a concise shape. As it is, one has to wade through an ocean of matter of no present interest to find what is really going on that one wants to know about. Mark the prediction: The reaction from the mammoth daily will be to a finger sheet containing nothing but actual news, boiled down to the most compact proportions; and these will be issued during the day in hourly editions as fast as the news comes over the wires. Trade papers will get all the advertisements excepting the "wants" and special and miscellaneous notices, and the editorial

Strong as the Republican party seems just now, it is not any stronger than were the Federalists under old John Adams. When Mr. Springer, an able and intrepid Democrat from Illinois, addressing Speaker Reed, said, "You can ride over the representatives of the people, sir, but the people can pull you and your party down," he spoke, although he may not have known it at the time, in the genuine spirit of prophecy. Perhaps the most offensive of all the measures proposed by the Republican leaders in this federal election bill, which takes the elections out of the hands of the people and puts them into those of federal myrmidons.

It is certain that on various occasions cans of honey have been found when the soldered top was taken off to have a bad odor and taste. A prominent commission firm of this city recently sent a man out to make a tour through the adjoining counties to look over the season's product of honey. He found that in nearly every case in spite of the protests which have been made the bee men were preparing to put up their strained honey in old cans. A large business is done in San Bernardino in the purchase of these old cans. A recent issue of a paper in that city narates the stealing of 180 of them by some boys, which shows how extensive the business is.
