

FORTY-THREE STARS.

Idaho Adds Another to the Glorious Galaxy.

All Old American Flags Are Now Out of Date.

Wyoming Will Wait a Few Days Before Coming In.

The President's Reasons For Signing the Idaho Bill Yesterday—Flags Float Over the Capitol.

Associated Press Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Senate amendment to the Wyoming admission bill would have been concurred in to-day by the House had a quorum been present. The point of no quorum was made, and Cannon of Illinois appealed to the House to permit the adoption of the conference report on the District of Columbia appropriation bill, and concurrence in the amendment to the Wyoming bill without the point of no quorum being raised, saying that he would move to adjourn immediately thereafter. The House, however, adjourned without action. The Wyoming bill was enrolled ready for signatures.

The reason for the President's action in signing the Idaho bill to-day was an interesting one. The President, it seems, found that the law ordained that a new star should be placed upon the American flag for each new state on the fourth of July succeeding its admission to the Union. The President left it to Dubois, Delegate from Idaho, to decide whether to have the bill signed at once and get a star, or leave the star over until July 4, 1891, Dubois chose the star now, and as a result the bill was signed and forty-three stars are due upon the flag tomorrow.

It was believed that had the house adopted the amendment to the Wyoming bill today the president would have approved the act before leaving the city. Delegate Carey said this evening that the amendment concerning Yellowstone park had already delayed the admission of Wyoming several days, but the park was the wonderland of the world, and would be worth many world's fairs to the state in the next century, and under the circumstances the people of Wyoming would patiently wait a few days more days for the realization of their great ambition.

The Idaho admission bill declares the present territory of Idaho a state, and ratifies the constitution framed by the convention of July 4, 1889, and adopted at the election in the following November. The state is declared entitled to one representative in congress until after the census. The usual grants of sections 16 and 36 of the public lands in each township for the support of common schools, thirty sections for public buildings and 5 per cent of the proceeds of sales of public lands to constitute a permanent school fund were made, and the state confirmed the title to seventy-two sections of land granted the territory for a university and the land on which the penitentiary at Boise City is situated. For the support of an agricultural college 90,000 acres of land is granted; 100,000 acres for a scientific school; 100,000 acres for state normal schools; 50,000 acres for an insane asylum at the Black Foot, 50,000 for a state university at Moscow, 50,000 for the Boise City penitentiary and 150,000 acres for other state charitable, educational and reformatory institutions, none of the lands to be sold for less than $10 per acre. All mineral lands are excepted from the grants made. An appropriation of $25,000 is made to defray the expenses of the constitutional convention.

The state is made a judicial district to be attached to the ninth circuit, court to be held at the capital. The usual court officers will be appointed and proper provisions made for the transfer of such. The state constitution which is ratified by the act contains a special provision prohibiting polygamy and declaring no person entitled to a vote, to hold office or serve as a juror who is a bigamist or polygamist, or who practices or encourages plural marriages or is a member of or countenance any organization which teaches such doctrines. The state has a Mormon oath which is required of voters, and it was not until the supreme court upheld its constitutionality that the bill was considered by the senate territories committee. In the house the democrats refrained from voting, and asserted the intention to make a test on this bill of the speaker's right to count a quorum.

A BIG DEAL.

Vanderbilt Supposed to Be Interested in the Sale of the Santa Fe.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Times says: Wall street has a story to explain why Cornelius Vanderbilt cut his European sojourn to hurry home in the summer while in London. It is stated that Cornelius Vanderbilt was induced by Baring Brothers to make an investigation of the financial conditions and property of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. After a carefully prepared statement had been submitted to him, he is said to have conveyed to Baring Brothers the assurance that he is ready to join with them in the ownership and management of the Atchison system. It is known that since Vanderbilt returned to this country one of the foremost directors of the Atchison Company has been his guest and in constant consultation with him at Newport.

A Remarkable Cloudburst.

VAN HORN, Texas, July 3.—A remarkable cloudburst in the mountains stopped traffic on the Texas Pacific to-day. A train coming from El Paso near here today ran into an enormous flood of water which had spread eight miles over the valley and completely inundated this town. The train had to tie up here, as the track ahead was all washed out. The flood was almost without warning, although it had been raining heavily in the mountains for many hours.

FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Flags to Float Over the Capitol While Congress is Not in Session.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The stars and stripes will float over the capitol tomorrow. It is a singular fact that never before has the flag floated on the exterior of that building except when congress was actually in session. The new sergeant-at-arms of the senate having become aware of this state of things, called Senator Ingalls's attention to the matter. The conference resulted in Senator Ingalls, who is president pro tem, directing the national colors to be flung to the breeze tomorrow, the Fourth of July. To run the flags up on the regulation flagstaff is impossible on account of the rules of senate and the house, so there have been put in place at the foot of the dome four flagstaffs, pointing north, south, east and west. From each of these will depend a twenty-five foot flag.

Wertland's body has not yet been found.

A BURNED TOWN.

PULLMAN, WASHINGTON, ABOUT ENTIRELY DESTROYED.

The Inhabitants Rendered Helpless by the Lack of a Fire Department and Suitable Water Supply.

PORTLAND, ORE., July 3.—An Oregonian special from Colfax, Washington, says: The town of Pullman, Washington, is on fire. The business portion is a total loss. The fire started in the Loomis stables at 2 o'clock, and in twenty minutes the whole town was in flames. There was no fire service. Buildings were blown up with powder, but without avail.

PULLMAN, Wash., July 3.—At 1 o'clock this afternoon fire started in the lively stable of Lyle Bros., and in a moment the entire building was in flames, which soon communicated to the adjoining building. The business portion of Pullman was doomed, there being no fire engine, no water or other apparatus to aid in checking the flames. Two hours after the fire started every business house in town with one exception was in ashes. The total loss is $230,000, and the total insurance $121,000. The strenuous efforts of the bucket brigade confined the fire to the business section, though it seemed at one time as if the residence portion of the city would also go. Eight head of horses were burned in the stable where the fire originated and the loss of merchandise was in every case substantially total. Many firms moved their goods to the fields, but falling sparks set even these afire and they were lost.

The following are the heaviest losses: L. R. Leith, $5,000, saloon, insurance; $1,000; Congregational church, $3,000, insurance, $2,000; Richardson & Wilkinson, $7,000, general store, insurance, $4,000; Munroe & Carpenter, loss $6,000, hardware, insurance, $5,000; Farish Brothers, $35,000, hardware; insurance, $19,500; McConnell, Gamblers & Co., $80,000, general merchandise; insurance, $5,000; Dodd & Company, $17,000, implements; insurance, $1,500; Downey and Miller, $14,000, general store; insurance, $3,000; W. Brownshield, $12,000, building; insurance, $8,000; A. Windus, $5,000, shoe store; insurance, $1,500; M. D. Henry, $10,000, building; insurance, $1,000; postoffice, $1,000; no insurance.

BRUTAL SLOGGERS.

A Prize Fight at Chicago Which May Result Fatally.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Jack Ashton was to have met Frank Glover at Battery D tonight in a hard-glove contest, and 2,000 people assembled to witness the encounter. The police prevented the men from sparring, however, owing to the fact that in one of the preliminary fights Mike Brennan, of Boston, was so seriously injured that he will probably die. Brennan was contesting with Frank Garrard, of Chicago, nominally for points, but it is asserted since by those present that the fight was to be for blood. Brennan is the man who recently worsted Tommy White, of Chicago, in a long drawn-out battle. The match between Brennan and Garrard was a fierce one, but after the second round Brennan had decidedly the worst of it. In the third and fourth he was repeatedly knocked down, and in the fifth, after arising two or three times, both men being very groggy, Garrard pushed against him and both men went to the floor, Brennan underneath. His head struck the hard boards with a resounding crack, and when Garrard arose Brennan was found to be unconscious. Physicians were summoned, but up to a late hour tonight consciousness had not returned, and the doctors think he will die, having undoubtedly suffered a concussion of the brain.

An American Sealer Arrested and Held at Unalaska.

Several Seamen Drowned from a Small Boat While Hunting—An Insane Cook Uses Poison.

Associated Press Dispatches.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—The steamer Karluk arrived today with Alaskan news. The schooner Mattie T. Dyer was seized by Deputy Port Collector Evans when she put into Unalaska in distress. Her crew was discharged and her compass and seals taken. The Dyer is an American sealing vessel, hailing from Portland, Maine. She had seven-seventeen sealskins. An insane cook on the Dyer attempted to kill all on board by placing poison in the food. He was given in charge of the physician on the Albatross. When off Kodiak island three men were lost from the Dyer. They left the Dyer in a small boat to hunt seals, and a rough sea and heavy fog coming up it is supposed they lost their bearings and were drowned. A day's search failed to discover any trace of them. The three missing men are Harvey Kraft, a hunter, J. A. Reggans and J. Newell, seamen.

The schooner Pearl, chartered by the North American Commercial Company, returned to Unalaska from the cruise to Bering sea with news that several of the crew had been drowned. The disaster happened during one of the gales peculiar to those latitudes. A heavy sea washed the three sailors overboard. The ship's boat was lowered to that date could reach the men they sank.

Reports from the newly discovered volcano on Lobos bay state that it is still in an active state. Since the receipt of the first news of the upheaval of an island close to the volcano two other islands have been thrown up by submarine eruptions. The volcano until recently had been active for several years. One of the officers of the Karluk stated that it is located about five miles off Unalaska. It is still smoking and once in a while great shoots of flame burst forth from the crater. The flow of lava has stopped, however. The two new islands are nearly as large as the first one pushed to the surface by the volcano.

On June 13th Ella Blum, Captain of the schooner, arrived at Unalaska, and reported that he had caught up to date had been twenty-eight sea otters. The John Hancock was spoken off Nagai island, and reported that 55,000 oddfish had been taken aboard and all the officers and crew were well. The five-masted schooner Lewis is lying at King's cove. She will carry supplies to the cannery at Thin point and will return with a cargo of salmon. Up to June 13th the schooner Alexander had caught thirty sea otters.

A DESPONDENT BANK CASHIER.

He Suicides Because of Adverse Criticism by His President.

TACOMA, July 3.—R. H. PASSMORE, aged 38, son-in-law of P. B. Mann, a grain merchant of Minneapolis, suicided this morning, cutting his throat with a jack knife, and died three hours later. Passmore and two daughters have been east for several months, and the former is supposed to be with her mother. Passmore received a letter yesterday saying that his wife could not return until August. Passmore is a despondent cashier of the First National Bank of Milwaukee. Passmore came to Tacoma a year ago and assumed charge of the Security Bank as cashier. Rumor has it and it is generally believed that President Hayward of the bank, on returning a couple of weeks ago from an extended trip east, criticized realty investments made by Passmore, which failed to appreciate. Passmore, it is said, lost on the investments personally, some say $5,000. Hayward told friends that he did not criticize Passmore's action save in a kindly manner. However that, and the fact that his wife did not return it is thought, caused him to grow despondent. Yesterday he was about the bank as usual, and a couple of days ago took dinner with Hayward. As far as can be learned his accounts with the bank were all right. He was a vestryman at Trinity Episcopal church, and moved in the best society.

His furnished house was vacated July 1st by the tenant, Passmore expecting his family to return Tuesday. He asked the tenant to remain, saying his family would not return till September. The tenant could not remain, having made other arrangements. Passmore has been boarding with friends since his wife's departure east.

He suicided with a pearl-handled, two-inch blade pocket-knife, which was found on the bed. He had stabbed himself three times through the heart, and then cut his throat. The blood soaked through the mattress, carpet and floor, and was about to drip from the ceiling below, showing that he had committed the deed before midnight Wednesday. There was a faint heart flutter when he was found at 8 a. m. today. The remains will be shipped to Milwaukee tomorrow.

A DREDGER BURNED.

A Chinaman Roasted Alive Before he Could be Rescued.

STOCKTON, Cal., July 3.—Last night Jacob Brack's dredger, which had been used in levee building near Brack's Landing, in the northwestern part of this county, was destroyed by fire. A Chinaman was burned to death and three white men narrowly escaped with their lives. One of them, Ed Franklin, of Woodbridge, was terribly burned on the legs and head, and will probably die. The fire was discovered by a Chinese wood-chopper, who was asleep in his cabin on the bank and was awakened by the crackling of the flames. He hurried aboard to awaken the four men asleep on the dredger, and succeeded in dragging one after another to the bank, but could not reach the Chinese cook, as the interior of the dredger was ablaze. The men rescued were Franklin, Lucas, and an engineer named Sutton. It is feared that Sutton may lose his sight. Lucas was badly burned on the feet and legs. It is supposed that the fire was caused by the burning of the Chinese cook's bed clothing from an opium pipe. The dredger was totally destroyed. It cost about $20,000, and was worth, when destroyed, $40,000.

A DELIBERATE MURDERER.

He Kills His Man While Lying Helpless on the Floor.

EL PASO, Tex., July 3.—Joseph D. Brown, an expert telegrapher and railroad clerk, was wantonly murdered at the "Gem" saloon yesterday morning by Wm. G. Colwell, an engineer at the steam pumping station. Colwell had been out drinking and gambling all night, and about 3 o'clock in the morning left the "Gem" in an irritable mood, having met with losses at the faro table. The man he killed was standing outside of the door and joshingly asked Colwell how much he lost, to which Caldwell says, he replied that it was none of his business. After more words Colwell whipped out his pistol and fired twice. The man ran into the saloon. Colwell pursued him inside and found him lying on his face and hands on the floor. Walking deliberately up to the prostrate man, Colwell placed one foot between his legs, and bending forward fired two more bullets in his back. They entered his heart and killed him instantly.

STARVING WORKMEN.

Desperate Cloak-Makers Cause a Riot in New York.

Several Shops on Broadway Attacked and Wrecked.

Homeless Families Walk the Streets Without Shelter.

Many Heads Broken by the Exasperated Strikers—One Man Seriously Injured.

Associated Press Dispatches.

NEW YORK, July 3.—It has been feared for some time that starvation would force the striking cloakmakers to do acts of violence. These fears were realized today. It has been a matter of common notoriety for several days past that these unfortunate people have actually been in awful straits, and a few have been confronted with the necessity of leaving their homes for lack of money to pay rent. Last night several families were out on the streets all night and the men this morning were driven to the point of desperation, and about two hundred of them went over to their old workshops. They massed in front of Meyer, Jonasson & Co.'s place and the Mercantile Cloth Company, two of the largest firms in the city. Joseph Lereberger, a buyer in the employ of Meyer Jonasson, came down the street. When the strikers saw him they made a rush at him, and Lereberger was badly beaten up before he managed to escape from the mob. The success of the attack upon the first victim seemed to turn the usually peaceful men into a body of rioters. They ran down to Jonasson's store, and the front doors being open, a few of the bolder ones entered and seized the office boy, Charles Butler, and in a second he was receiving the same kind of blows which fell upon Lereberger. William Winer, an operator, Joseph Rodelheimer, a packer, and Bookkeeper Sims were the next to receive similar treatment to that accorded the other two. Two Italians were then attacked, but they drew weapons and the strikers fled. The mob next gathered around a cloakmaker named Kunze. He did not get away so easily as the other men.

When the police, who had been notified, came running down the street, the strikers scattered, but they left Kunze on the sidewalk bleeding from half a dozen cuts in his head. They must have kicked him, as his injuries were serious.

All this time another detachment of strikers had been busy two blocks below. They were men who had been in the employ of the Mercantile Cloth Company, and they gathered there just as in front of Meyer Jonasson & Co.'s and waited for the workmen to come along. They were rewarded just before 3 o'clock, when they surrounded the men, struck them badly half a dozen times and then chased them up the stairs. The mob was then scattered by the police.

While all this was going on an angry mob of striking cloakmakers collected at the corner of Irvington and Eldridge streets, determined to obtain work or prevent the bosses from employing non-union workers. Samuel Villet, a Pole, had about a score of men making cloaks for him. He did not like the looks of the strikers, and accordingly he locked and barred his doors. About 11:30 o'clock, when the crowd was the largest, Villet and his employees were started by a crash. The strikers had broken open the front door, and a mob of about thirty, led by Abraham Rosenberg, rushed in upon them. They demanded that all hands stop work, and meeting with no success began to threaten and intimidate Villet and workmen. The strikers threw out of the windows the plumb lines, being made, and pandemonium reigned.

The streets in that vicinity were filled with a surging mass of people. Villet, becoming terrorized, and after receiving an ugly gash across the right eye with a knife, he whipped out a revolver and fired two shots. One bullet lodged in the back of Abraham Rosenberg, and with a shriek he staggered out on the street. At this moment the police arrived. They captured Villet and eighteen other persons, and carried them off to jail. Rosenberg was removed to the hospital, where he lies in a precarious condition. Tonight two hundred Jews on the east side mobbed a driver of a loaded cloak manufacturer's truck, on which also rode a policeman. The latter caught the leader and let his club fall on his head so often that he collapsed, and the crowd slunk away.

The Boiler-makers' Convention.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The American Boiler-makers' Association today decided to organize local boards in various cities to have control of local matters. The next meeting will be held in St. Louis. President Curran delivered an address in which he denounced as untrue the statement that the brotherhood was referring to the report that the manufacturers were to have a black list against organized labor, he was opposed to such a step, and said that the man who first adopted it would be sure to go under. Several of the manufacturers in reply said that no such thing as a black list had been thought of. At the evening session the apprenticeship report went over to the next meeting. An insurance scheme is to be formulated by a committee. Adjourned.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION FINISHES ITS FIRST SESSION.

The Lake Front Location to Contain the Principal Portion of the Fair. Committees Appointed.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The first session of the national world's fair commission ended today, a recess being taken till October 8th. At the morning session a communication was read from Mr. Colbrown, representing the mining interests of Colorado, asking the appointment of a committee to confer with the local board regarding the proposed mineral exhibit. The exhibit is to be underground, the walls of the corridors, halls, etc., being formed of various mineral ores, arranged as found in the earth. Referred to the committee on mines and mining.

Resolutions expressing the satisfaction of the commission with the financial report of the local organization were adopted after considerable discussion. The question of an appropriation for the payment of the lady managers was referred to the committee. A new committee was constituted, known as the committee on machinery and motive power, consisting of eight commissioners. The committee on titles and local facilities, to which will be referred all questions about site, transportation, etc., was announced as follows: Commissioners Groner, Ewing, Bute, Gavoia, French, Williams, Ferry, Khundley, Brainerd and Ryan. Judiciary committee—Maisey, Lindsay, Sewell, St. Clair, Smalley and Gregg. A committee of six on the forestry and lumber exhibit was also organized.

Just how much of the fair will be located on the lake front is still apparently an open matter. The only formal definition of the boundaries of that part of the site was contained in a communication from the local directors, saying that it was the intention to make as large an area as possible of the room now existing, or that may be gained hereafter on the lake front, and to use Jackson park as far as may be necessary to provide adequate room and buildings for the exposition.

Struck With a Bottle.

At 1 o'clock this morning a number of young men were sitting in the Palace saloon, when one of their number, named B. W. Fernald, commenced to joke with the proprietor, Joseph Schultz. The latter, it is stated, threatened to clear the house, and caught Fernald by the arm to put him out. This riled Fernald, who was slightly inebriated, and the two men quarreled for a few minutes, the row finally ending in Schultz smashing a bottle over Fernald's head, felling him to the ground and cutting his temple. Sergeant Jeffries was summoned and placed Schultz under arrest on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon, but upon being taken to the station he was released upon $100 bail.
