TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1890.

CALIFORNIA.

It is forty years to-day since congress admitted California to the sisterhood of states in the Federal Union. That is but a short period of time. Many of the argonauts who had rushed here in 1849 in search of gold still live to see the great state by the sunset sea celebrate her fortieth birthday.

Just as the middle of the century was about to be reached, that grain of yellow ore was struck at Sutter's Fort in the mill stream. For forty years a steady stream of enormous volume of silver and gold, has been poured into the currents of the world's commerce from this state.

California's mines are not by any means exhausted, and the treasures she will still pour into the laps of the nations in the future will be as rich as those of the past. Her gold and silver will still supply motive power to many enormous enterprises whose measure will dwarf even the greatest of those achieved.

The state is studded all over her thousand miles of longitude with flourishing, populous and handsomely built cities. The shipping business of San Francisco is larger by many times than that of the world at the date when Columbus sailed for Cadiz to look for the New World.

It is well to stop and think of the elements that surround our life in these days. Their most distinguishing feature is rapidity. And our progress is not phenomenal in this land and age.

would lead us to expect because of her remoteness and the consequent cost reaching here, yet her progress has not been slow. To reach her present population of about a million and a half has required forty years.

CALIFORNIA'S INFLUENCE ON THE WORLD.

As we stop today to think of our state on her fortieth birthday, it is interesting to contemplate her influence on the other states of the Union, and on the world at large. Gladstone is a profound student of human history. He has said that England has made more material progress in the century now drawing toward its close than in all previous centuries from the landing of Caesar—that is, eighteen centuries.

But the progress of England has been slow as compared with that of our own country during the century. Again, the development of the second half of the century, both in England and America, has been vastly more rapid than in the first fifty years. California has exercised a larger influence in bringing this about than all the rest of the world combined.

Just as the middle of the century was about to be reached, that grain of yellow ore was struck at Sutter's Fort in the mill stream. For forty years a steady stream of enormous volume of silver and gold, has been poured into the currents of the world's commerce from this state.

This stream has run at from $50,000,000 to $90,000,000 a year since 1870, the last twenty of the forty years in question. If it is averaged at $70,000,000, we get a grand total of the precious metals in the last twenty years of $1,700,000,000. If we assume that it was the same for the twenty years preceding, we have a grand total of $3,400,000,000 for the forty years.

California's mines are not by any means exhausted, and the treasures she will still pour into the laps of the nations in the future will be as rich as those of the past. Her gold and silver will still supply motive power to many enormous enterprises whose measure will dwarf even the greatest of those achieved.

The Pine Tree state seems to be wedded to her political idols as tenaciously as ever any worshiper of a miserable fetish was. Whatever we may think of Car Reed, there is no doubt that the rank and file of his party is at his back. His policy is that the majority must rule, and rule in such a way as to override every right the minority may claim.

It begins to look as if Chicago had for once in its career met with a job bigger than it can handle in the world's fair. All sorts of difficulties beset this matter, as little or no progress is being made.

SOME POLITICS.

PREPARING FOR THE POND AND DEL VALLE RECEPTION.

The Committee of Arrangements Met Last Night—Several Other Organizations Making Preparations.

A committee of arrangements for the Pond and Del Valle reception met last evening at the Tammany club rooms, with President Ling in the chair and C. L. Hargitt, secretary. Every Democratic club in the city had representatives present.

The following gentlemen were appointed as additional members of the finance committee: T. J. Cuddy, A. McNally, A. Kerane, C. F. Last, W. L. Price, C. M. Hayden, A. Boteller, and O. Ponet.

On music, Dr. Kurtz, J. L. Einstein, Biggy, J. A. Redona and J. L. Melville. The following are the clubs and their representatives: Alliance—Dr. James Kurtz, T. E. Gibbon, A. C. Clark, Boyle Heights.

The meeting then adjourned to meet Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the Alliance club rooms in the Downey block.

The Jackson Club.

The Jackson Democratic club met last evening at the Alliance rooms in the Downey block, Joseph Mesmer in the chair and William L. Price secretary.

Committees for arrangements were made, in conjunction with the Iroquois, Democratic Alliance and other Democratic clubs, to present a solid Democratic front, in a procession never before equalled in this city.

A call was issued by J. Mesmer, president of the Jackson club, to the presidents of the various Democratic clubs throughout the city last evening, to consider the acts of the various committees appointed a few days ago to perfect arrangements for the Pond and Del Valle reception.

ances. And if persistently bored by those who find a pleasure in seeing all things at cross purposes and all people more or less scoundrels undetected, she does her best to mitigate what she cannot prevent. She has strong principles, but she is not an active proselytizer. She lets others think for themselves and, only when called on to testify, raises her own private flag aloft. She knows the difference between constancy and aggression, which, with the courage of her opinions, has also the modesty of reticence. She treats the servants as, in a certain sense, her friends, her children, while still keeping the reins of home government in her own hands.
