FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1890.

The Examiner is right in hoping for the gain of a Senator and member of the Assembly in Los Angeles at the coming election, and the papers which are taking it to task are reckoning without their host. It is hard for our Republican friends to forget 1888. But, the case being altered, that alters the case.

It would be rather amusing if Pond and Del Valle should brush up and carry the boasted Republican stronghold of Los Angeles county. Stranger things than that have happened. From the number and enthusiasm of the Democratic clubs of the city and county, and from the lukewarmness of the Republicans, this would not be so surprising. When people in California get a good ready on they often make decided breaks.

BOULANGER may not have been a hero at certain periods of his career, but he had the faculty, in a remarkable degree, of putting what the Irish call the "comer" on his fair admirers. Thus, we are told that the Duchess D'UZES advanced the pious and posturing General fully $600,000 to promote his political schemes. It had not been for the hero's habit of fainting dead away at critical stages of his career, and his quite evident dislike of revolutions, the Duchess would not, in all likelihood, have regretted the loss of her money.

From Mr. Williamson Dunn we learn that the present is the best summer the California Southern Railway has ever experienced. Its business has far exceeded that done last year and surpasses that done in the celebrated year of the boom. Facts talk as loudly as coin, and an authoritative statement like this embodies volumes for the revival which is now under way in this section. The Southern Pacific officials speak in an equally pleasing strain. The shipment of vegetables over that line to the Eastern and Southern States has been one of the pleasantest of the recent developments.

THERE are two business projects under way in Los Angeles at present which, it is claimed, will involve the spending of five and one half million dollars in this city and neighborhood in the coming two years. These are the Los Angeles Terminal Railway and the new Water Company which is being promoted by Messrs. E. L. Stern, J. de Barth Shorb and others. That, of itself, would not be a bad basis for a pretty fair-sized boom. It is pleasant to know that our own city is keeping up with the procession. With all Southern California on the up-grade, it would be a melancholy thing to be left behind.

LE PROGRES CALIFORNIEN has come out as a semi-weekly. In one of its articles discussing local politics, it says that the Republican regime has been invariably sweet and complaisant towards the French colony prior to elections, and profuse in promises, but when the time came to distribute the appointments French Republicans have been left in the consommé. It says that whilst all other nationalities have fat positions in the various offices, there is but one Frenchman in any department of either the city or county government, and his place, though useful, is a very humble one, that is to examine back yards for the city board of health. This is a very serious indictment against the g. o. p., and our irate contemporary is right in calling upon its leaders to rise and explain.

The preparations which are being made to develop the Temescal tin mines are on a most extensive scale. They are located some five miles from South Riverside and will be a great source of prosperity to that flourishing burg. The syndicate which has been organized to work them own forty-seven thousand acres, most of which is highly mineralized and a large portion of which is said to be suitable for orange culture. The Temescal tin ore. It is claimed, in some instances goes as high as seventy per cent., although that is probably an extreme figure. The famous Cornwall mines in England, which have been for many years the principal source of the world's supply of this exceedingly valuable metal, are reported only to average three per cent. There has seldom been a time in Southern California when the prospects for development in all lines have been more encouraging than now.

The Wasp joins the Argonaut in speaking contemptuously of the twaddle about Buckley nominating Pond. Notwithstanding this fact, based on absolute truth, the Republican press is engaged just now in copying long and foolish articles from the Sacramento Record-Union, in which the stale slander is retailed. There are ten times the evidences that Crimmins and Dick Chute and their followers nominated Markham to one that Buckley had anything to do with the nomination of Pond. This is the old, familiar cry of "stop thief," and it will deceive no one. Instead of Buckley controlling the whole San Francisco delegation, Mr. Pond had a compact and determined body of supporters in that delegation, which increased steadily till the third ballot. On the fourth ballot the Democratic candidate for Governor was so clearly the choice of the Convention that Buckley in self defense was compelled to swing into line if he desired to avoid complete isolation. But any noorback is a good enough Morgan for the Republican press in their present desperate straits.

withstanding this fact, based on absolute truth, the Republican press is engaged just now in copying long and foolish articles from the Sacramento Record-Union, in which the stale slander is retailed. There are ten times the evidences that Crimmins and Dick Chute and their followers nominated Markham to one that Buckley had anything to do with the nomination of Pond. M'KINLEY SHAVED-NEXT.

Now that the Senate has disposed of the McKinley bill, we may next look for a strong effort on the part of the radicals to bring up and pass the force bill. This is a pet measure with the Quay-Reed element of the Republican party—the element that is willing to use any means, no matter how unscrupulous or even revolutionary, to perpetuate the power of the Republican party.

The force bill is one of the most ingeniously devised measures imaginable to compass this object. It would place the power in nine men—one in each United States judicial circuit—to control the election of a congressman in every close district in the Union. No one doubts that, under existing circumstances, each of these supervisors would be a Republican, and, as far as they could find the material, a Republican of the order and timbre of the Dudleys and Davenport. They would be empowered to appoint deputies to supervise and report the returns in each congressional district, to be present in the polling booths, to examine the ballot boxes, and to exercise such powers in the count as would make them masters of the situation in close districts. It is true there is a pretence of fairness in the way in which these deputies shall be selected, but the preponderance of the deputies would naturally be Republicans.

We are now making strong efforts all over the Union to introduce the Australian ballot system, so as to surround the voter with the utmost protection in casting a secret ballot. This law would render the practical carrying out of this system impossible. The deputy supervisor would be there, and there could be no secrecy.

When we are told that the law will not be generally invoked in the Congressional districts of the country, we say that there is not one in which a petition would not be successfully gotten up to proclaim it as under the law. The reasons are obvious. The patronage to be exercised in the appointment of deputies is very great, and there will be always those wanting deputyships who will be able to get one hundred names to a petition for the purpose of letting them in.

The measure is not only vicious, but unnecessary. If there are any districts in the country where large numbers of voters are shut out from the franchise, the constitution provides a remedy in the decrease of the ratio of representation. The author of the bill intends it mainly to reach the South to secure a free ballot to the negro. But we know that in the manufacturing districts of the eastern states if a man votes against the wishes of his employers he votes himself out of work. There are no lack of Senate reports of investigating committees to show this. Whether intimidation of some sort can ever be overcome by any kind of legislation we doubt. It is bread and butter in the North; it is the natural dominance of a superior race and intelligence in the South. Education may in time overcome the latter; but man is always subject to starvation.

It is asserted, on what appears to be good authority, that the Republican candidate for Governor, while in the mining business, directed a letter to his superintendent ordering him to discharge all the Irishmen in his employ-ment and to retain the Chinamen. If this be true, the tall Pasadena—or to employ the description of Markham made popular by Gen. Backus, "the sun-burnt son of the sunny south"—will find that he has unearthed a good sized hornet's nest. He is said to have taken this action on the ground that the Celestial was the better workman of the two. That letter would make highly interesting campaign literature.

The Tribune seems to be very much exercised over the fact that the HERALD occasionally quotes scripture. Our esteemed contemporary appears to like neither the decorous methods of this paper nor the somewhat different style of the Times. We feel inclined to repeat our performance, and to predict that the Republican State ticket in California will not be elected, to employ the language of the Apocalypse, until "a time, and times and a half a time" shall have elapsed. Translated, that means, in the vulgar language of the hour, not until Doomsday.

ASSESSOR MASON, the gentleman with a conscience which compelled him to raise our assessments to an unheard of figure, has concluded that he will not run. This is gracious on his part. The last gentleman to announce his withdrawal is Mr. Francis, who has concluded that he doesn't desire to succeed himself as Recorder. What is the matter with the ordinarily aspiring members of the Republican party? Do they see the hand-writing on the wall?

Bonnets and hats of two kinds of straw, open and close, bid fair to be popular.

Excited Cigar Makers. BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Great excitement was created among the striking cigar-makers here today by the renewal of the attempt on the part of the manufacturers to crush the strikers by the wholesale arrest of pickets. Heavy bail was demanded in each case. The object apparently was to attempt to exhaust the resources of the strikers' bondsmen, and by getting some of the more prominent strikers in jail to frighten the others into returning to work.

A Disgusted Delegate. Supervisor C. N. Baker, of Santa Paula, was a delegate to the late Republican convention at Sacramento, and had the sagacity to know that Morrow was the man to nominate for Governor, if it were the desire to put up a winning ticket. It befel otherwise, however, and in the following witty and terse letter to his better-half, he portrays his feelings and experience. Realizing that the slate programme would be faithfully carried out all through the list according to contract, and not desiring to play the role of an automaton, he transferred his proxy to another, and hid himself to Auburn, from which mountain retreat he indited this humorous and doubtless truthful epistle:

"It is very warm here and very dusty, and the more I see the more I hope to feel thankful, for living in Ventura county. There is not another place in the state so hot as this. You will, of course, have seen by the papers that we have been severely sat upon. I feel very much like a canned dog, the humiliation is worse than the hurt. Up in Morgan's window are two pictures, one of a lot of darkies with a fighting dog, going to the dog fight, the other is their return, the dead dog in the wheelbarrow, and the owner, who went to the fight, carrying the list according to contract, returning with one ear gone and in a general state of delapidation. You go and look at the picture, look at the owner of the whipped dog with his countenance suggestive of entire defeat, and you will see the condition of your absent spouse at the present time. I will get over it. Political defeats do not last long, but I will never go to another convention, unless I am willing to trade my candidate for a pig, a coming con, or a jack-knife. I have no fault to find with Markham, the winning candidate, but my vanity is hurt. I thought the Ventura delegation would come home with flying colors, that Morrow would be nominated and Ventura county would boom up like an electric light in a Santa Barbara fog.

Bring up the hearse to the depot. Spread the report that I am coming home with the smallpox and contagion is fatal. Fix me up a box in the barn, where I can for the next thirty days retire, and safe from the contact with friends and acquaintances fix up a patent kicker that will kick more sense into me than I ever had, for I am satisfied that if ever I do have any sense it will not be from an over-abundance of brains, or it may be possible that my brains have been shaken down, and the patent kicker will serve to work them back in place. The first day of the convention and the day before, the Ventura delegation were objects of interest. Old Pete Bennett, Noyes and myself were sought for, counselled with, and we began to think it was fortunate that we came, as they certainly could not have anything without us. We were for Morrow, and would not listen to any compromise, and marched up to the Capitol as if we were the main delegation attending the convention. I had been selected as the chairman of the delegation and the only regret I had, was that you could not see me as I rose before the six or seven hundred delegates and in my most impressive manner called out, "Morrow 5 votes, Markham 2 votes." I did it well, and old Pete Bennett's countenance fairly beamed. Todd had a smile that only a ton of Lima beans to the acre could produce. Gerberding and Noyes looked around the convention with the proud consciousness of having the boss chairman, while Harrison, who was a Markham man, felt or looked, (or we imagined he did) as if he would like to crawl under a carpet and peep in.

As soon as the tally was over, and before the vote was announced, some traitorous hound, who had been fixed beforehand, arose and wished to change one vote of their delegation to Markham. It was the signal, and in less than three minutes so many votes had been changed from Morrow to Markham that a number arose and moved that the nomination of Markham be made unanimous. It was done, and the Ventura delegation was the worst cleaned out lot you ever saw. I wished I was at home under the bed and the windows shaded. Old Pete Bennett looked like some tall pine that the lightning had struck. Todd, as if a blight had struck the beans, and Gerberding and Noyes were crushed. While Harrison stood up on a chair whooping it up as if he had struck a 2000 barrel well. Well, Mollie, such is greatness."—Ventura Democrat.

Not Built That Way. From the Elm-a Gazette. Woman may be a trusting creature, and all that, but she isn't apt to be deceived into giving too much credit to another woman.

The low, flaring collar is not a complete success. Worn by a thick-necked or fleshy woman, it gives her a hard look and makes her face hard. Like the cap and tarpaulin hat, the round, low collar is an institution for youth, grace and beauty. In brief it is girly, and not designed for maturity or bulk.
