

GOOD DOCTRINE.

Preached Last Night by Prominent Democrats.

Coleman, Graves and Terry Given a Royal Reception.

Convincing Arguments Which Were Based on Facts and Figures.

Hon. James V. Coleman Makes a Splendid Address—He Argues for Both Democratic Principles and Candidates—Other Powerful Speeches.

Two carriages preceded by a band brought from the Nadeau to Turnverein hall last evening at 7:30 the Hon. James V. Coleman, Walter C. Graves and Reel B. Terry, accompanied by a number of prominent Democrats, among whom were Gen. Stoneman, Ex-Mayor Workman, J. De Barth Shorb, Lawrence Archer, candidate for railroad commissioner of the Third District, Captain Barrett and many others. The party was escorted to Turnverein hall by the Tammany club. Upon their entrance into the hall, which was filled to overflowing, the speakers were greeted with loud applause.

Following is the list of vice presidents who took their seats upon the stage: B. S. Euston, T. E. Rowan, W. R. Burke, M. T. Collins, W. J. Brodrick, George S. Patton, M. F. Stiles, E. C. Bowers, Fred Harkness, Dr. Jos. Kurtz, R. Bilderrain, C. F. Heinzenman, Richard Maloney, Dr. H. Nadeau, James Hanley, C. A. Bell, W. A. Field, A. Ramish, A. F. Mackay, Jos. D. Lynch, Albert M. Stevens, John Bryson, Sr., A. W. Barrett, Frank Sabichi, C. F. A. Last, Jos. Mesmer, C. Jacoby, J. T. Beardon, C. E. Thom, M. J. Nolan, Henry King, J. P. Moran, John Webber, P. Ballade, William Lacy, Sr., A. McNally, Thos. Kelley, Max Loewenthal, Ed. Gibson, Eugene Germain, Jas. R. Mathews, Ed. A. Preuss, W. L. Price, T. E. Gibbons, W. C. Patterson, J. J. Ayers, C. I. McIntyre, V. E. Fortson, H. C. Dillon, N. C. Bledsoe, Samuel Meyer and J. J. Mellus. After several selections by the city band, Hon. J. DeBarth Shorb, chairman of the Democratic county central committee, nominated W. H. Workman as the president of the evening and W. S. Waters as secretary.

Mr. Workman in introducing himself, said that he saw before him a great number of honest Democratic faces, who always voted for the right man. He was assured that Pond was as certain of his election as General Stoneman was in 1886. After the reading of the list of vice-presidents, Mr. Workman introduced to the audience James V. Coleman, who received a most enthusiastic cheering, which was prolonged for several minutes. The speaker stated that, without reference to politics, he desired to say how much he and his friends appreciated the hospitality extended to them in this lovely city. He had heard many kind remarks made concerning Los Angeles in the many places that he had visited. He believed that Los Angeles might not be better Democrats than those of the north, but they looked like better Democrats. In the speaker's opinion the time had come when the lines of demarcation between political parties was about to be obliterated. It has been the stock in trade of some Republicans to flaunt into our face the bloody shirt and tell us that it was still the banner of our country. But we Democrats can give them an array of Democratic names of men who fought during the war on the Union side, and helped to abolish slavery, such as we may well be proud of. That part of the Democracy who fought on the side of the Confederacy can come today and hold up the finger of scorn against the Republican malcontents. A pigmy occupying a throne is a more despicable object than a slave with a heart-beating beneath his rags. The Republican party, he did not intend to say anything derogatory about on this night. He believed, however, that there were Republicans at Washington who wanted to make people believe that their Republicanism was that of the whole country, but if a plebiscite were taken today, it was the speaker's opinion, that they would right then be thrown out of the positions they now hold.

Mr. Coleman referred very sarcastically to Mr. Reed, the speaker of the house, whose autocratic ruling, he scolded with withering effect. He next said that when General Hancock was running for the presidency he was asked what he thought of the protective tariff, and he answered that it was purely a local matter. It was thought that the general's defeat was due to this. But the political schoolmaster had since been abroad and the people are now alive to the fact that the tariff question is a local one. Mr. Coleman referred to the duty on tin as an instance. This might be good for localities in which tin mines may be discovered, but to what amount would this protective tax benefit those states who have no tin mines. He would tell the audience who it benefited. It was the hounds, called the third house, the lobbyists at Washington, who did the dirty work for Wall street and the trusts. The McKinley bill, which the house had passed by the aid of Speaker Reed's rulings, he proclaimed the greatest outrage ever perpetrated on the American people. The day is coming when the people will know that their ballot is more powerful than all the corruption of Wall street, he said. The speaker devoted a few more remarks to Reed and his re-election in Maine, where he had lost 1407 votes within two years. It was not shown by this result that his rulings in the chair had been appreciated by the people of Reed's state. The speaker compared the differences existing between the Republican and Democratic platforms of this campaign. The Republican party had forgotten all about the citizen soldiers of this state, but the Democrats had thought of protection for this commonwealth in case of foreign invasion. The Republicans had also forgotten the protection of the wine industry, the Democrats had not. The Republicans forgot to say a single word about the San Quentin abuses, but when the people put in nomination that great and brave citizen Pond, they chose a man who will not allow for criminal acts any political whitewashing. [Prolonged applause.]

The Republicans don't say, as we say, that education for the poor shall be free—the rich can take care of themselves; they don't say that school books shall be free. We, the Democracy, say that school books shall be printed by the state printer and that publishing companies shall have nothing to do with it, and that the children shall obtain them from the state without disbursement. The bar of Los Angeles passed a resolution, suggesting the name of Judge Vanduyke to the Republican convention at Sacramento and that of Colonel G. H. Smith to the Democratic one at San Jose. These resolutions stated that the southern part of the state is unrepresented on the supreme bench. Unless Colonel Smith is elected, after the retirement of Judge Works, the southern section will have no representation in our highest tribunal. It was imperative that Colonel George H. Smith should be elected. [Applause.]

The question of the election of United States senators by the people was also broached by the speaker, and his mention of Stephen M. White caused great enthusiasm. He even advocated the election of the president by the people. Mr. Coleman did not believe it necessary to dwell with weight on the question of retrenchment; it was not necessary, because the names of Pond and Del Valle meant economy, experience, integrity and chivalry.

The promise of the Republicans, limiting taxation to fifty cents on the hundred dollars, he proclaimed a chimera. The Democrats limited it to forty-five cents. That little nickel meant just half a million dollars saved to the people of California. The Republican promise had no reference to assessed property for any particular year. It was an invisible rat put on an imaginative body. Mr. Coleman showed by means of statistics the enormous difference between what taxation between the city and forty-five cent taxation clause would mean to the people.

The speaker referred to John P. Dunn, who had twice been elected as state controller, and whose re-election he advocated. He also spoke of John T. Gaffey in complimentary terms, asking all for their support in favor of his friend. Next he alluded to W. J. Curtis, candidate for congress. All these names were greeted with applause.

At the close of Mr. Coleman's speech he was presented with a splendid basket of roses by the Hon. T. E. Gibbon, on behalf of the Jackson Democratic club. Judge Walker C. Graves, candidate for attorney general, was the next speaker. He said that some of the Republicans were willing to stand by their party, even if it leads them to destruction. Col. Markham tells the people that he voted for Abraham Lincoln, and gives this as the reason why he should be elected governor. Mr. Graves urged the laying aside of all prejudices during this campaign, and referred to the magnificent platform of the Democracy in this state. One clause upon which Mr. Coleman had been silent was the Australian ballot law. The speaker advocated it. He had been very much astonished when told at San Luis Obispo that the Republican candidate for congress, Mr. Bowers, had stated that there was no difference between that ballot system and the federal ballot. The bill for the appointment of election commissioners for life the speaker opposed, as dangerous to the liberty of citizens. Mr. Graves next took Col. Markham in hand, whom he treated in a way that was laughingly appreciated by the audience. He then extolled Pond's qualifications for the position, as recorded in the past, he said, was a guarantee of what it would be in the future. He qualified him as a man of experience, whose knowledge of municipal affairs would make him a good chief executive, one who would be able to approve good and veto bad measures. He referred to an editorial in the Call, which said, that while Pond was mayor taxpayers would be safe. In the person of B. F. Del Valle he believed the people had equally as good a man as Pond, and he urged his hearers to be sure that on the 4th of November his name was on their ticket. He next referred to John T. Gaffey, who had saved Los Angeles county in taxation over $300,000. In conclusion, Mr. Graves referred to Pond's refusal to sign the franchise of a street railroad company because there was no clause in it giving the people at least 2 per cent of the gross proceeds of its earnings. He said that Pond was a man who could be relied upon—a man who never broke his pledges.

Mr. Workman now introduced Reel B. Terry of Fresno who, owing to the late hour, said he did not intend to take up the time of the audience very long. He believed that the people would elect Pond and Del Valle by even a greater majority than that which was given to Governor Stoneman. The protective tariff bill was vehemently discussed and opposed by the speaker, who showed how the trusts lobbied through congress their abominable steals, in which the people were the losers. The senate had recommended a reduction of the duty on whiskey, champagne and other liquors, because they themselves were users of them, but had tariff taxation been laid for the benefit of the artisan? The bill had been passed only for the protection of the millionaire producers of this country and never for the poor. Mr. Terry paid honorable J. V. Coleman a glowing compliment for the manner in which he is now supporting Pond, after having himself been a candidate for the governorship. The orator spoke of Lawrence Archer, candidate for railroad commissioner of the third district, for whom he asked the votes of the Democracy of this county. In speaking of the United States senatorship, he asked the audience if their preference could be with Stanford, who had no recommendation excepting his dirty dollars, or with honest, upright Steve White. At the conclusion of Terry's address, ex-Mayor Workman predicted a cyclonic Democratic victory on November 4th, and offered three cheers for Pond, Del Valle and the whole Democratic ticket, which were given with a hearty good will and a deafening noise.

PUBLIC SCHOOL MATTERS

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION'S MEETING LAST NIGHT.

A Number of Petitions Referred to Committees—Coal Still Too High—Resignations Accepted and Appointments Named—Too Many Insurance Policies.

The board of education met in regular session last night in the city hall. After disposing of the usual preliminaries a communication was read from H. Z. Osborne et al., asking the board to order cement sidewalks to be laid on Eighth street and Grand avenue in front of the Eighth street school building, and also that crossings be made at the intersection of Eighth street and Grand avenue, in order that the children attending said school may do so during the rainy season without wading through a sea of mud as formerly. The matter was referred to the building committee.

A communication was read from S. A. Waldron asking the co-operation of the board in the construction of a division fence between his lot and that of the Sand street school, which it adjoins, as he intended to build there. The matter was referred to the building committee. A number of applications for positions were referred to their respective committees.

A petition was received from the Alumni society of the high school, asking that it be allowed to conduct the exercises at the formal opening of the new high school building, and was referred to a special committee, Mr. Whaling objecting. The following bids for 190 tons of coal, as advertised for, were opened and read: New Mexico Coal company, $9.65 per ton; Crown Point Coal company, $9.60; and Black Diamond Coal company, $9.45. All the bids were referred to the supply committee.

Supt. Friesner reported that there were enrolled at the public schools on the first day 6105 pupils, an increase of 80 over the first day last year. A number of demands were approved in accordance with the recommendations of the finance committee, Mr. Whaling assenting negatively. The Telephone company's bills for the three months July, August and September were approved as to half the amount demanded, in spite of Mr. Whaling's insistence that by so doing the board was acting immorally.

In accordance with the recommendation of the building committee the clerk was instructed to advertise for bids for the construction of a retaining wall at the Collado street school lot, Mr. Whaling alone voting negatively. In accordance with the report of the teachers' committee the resignations of Mesdames Wilson and North and Misses Matthis and C. Bayman were accepted. Mrs. Haskell and Mr. Lawson were each granted leave of absence for three months without pay.

In accordance with the recommendations of the janitors' committee, the following appointments were made: High school building, C. H. Axtell; Castelar street building, Mrs. Ynez Tapia; Seventh street school building, W. McPherson, colored; Ann street school building, Mrs. Hattie Molton. The salary of the janitor at the new high school was fixed at $100.

D. Morris of the insurance committee, then offered a resolution stating that in consequence of contractors placing policies on school buildings the committee could not tell how the insurance account stood, and that no bills for insurance be paid unless the policy accompanied it. This was adopted, Mr. Whaling alone voting negatively.

The finance committee recommended that the bids of the three coal companies opened that evening be rejected, and that the clerk readvertise. Gov. Gosper objected on the ground that he had been informed that a coal famine was imminent. Messrs. Whaling, Woodbury and Powers had each been informed that the price of coal would decline in the near future, and that there was nothing in the rumor of the famine. After a discussion of the matter, the recommendation was adopted. Several other trivial matters having been disposed of, the board adjourned.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

"Myths that Pass for History," by J. M. Guinn.

At a meeting of the Historical society of Southern California last night a paper was read by the president, J. M. Guinn, on "Historical Debris, or Myths that Pass for History." The writer pointed out the myths of Pocahontas and Captain Smith, William Tell and others, and went on to comment in an original way on recent history, which he referred to as false and misleading in many particulars. The century papers, he said, were full of blunders. Poetry was responsible for many errors. Sheridan's ride was not one of 20 miles, but one of 12 miles, and Sheridan did not find the troops routed, but marching to victory. The charge of Balaclava had been immortalized by Tennyson and yet it was not such a great affair. Three members of this society, General Mansfield, Major Jones and the writer of the paper had been in engagements where the percentage of losses to their respective regiments were greater than that of the Light Brigade in two cases being nearly twice as large.

A paper on the late General Fremont, an honorary member of the society, written by Mr. H. D. Barrows, was read by the secretary. It gave rise to much discussion, pro and con, as to whether General Fremont deserved the credit generally accorded him in connection with the conquest of California.

Applications for membership were received from C. P. Fenner and C. P. Dorland.

The secretary reported that the society had received from Henry Hamilton of Los Angeles Star, a very valuable file of that paper covering the period from January, 1855, to October, 1864, and from May, 1868 to May, 1870.

W. E. HUGHES.

He Asks For the Nomination of Public Administrator.

Last evening Mr. W. E. Hughes announced himself as a candidate before the Democratic convention for the nomination as public administrator. Mr. Hughes is late in the field, but it is not always the early candidate who catches the nomination. The gentleman is widely and favorably known in this county. This was the first name on the membership roll of the chamber of commerce and in the organization of that body he took a very active part.
