A GREAT CONFLAGRATION IN MOBILE, ALABAMA.

Twenty Squares of Buildings, Three River Steamers and an Ocean-Going Ship Burned—Loss, $750,000.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 26.—One of the most disastrous conflagrations ever witnessed in this city began today about noon in Stewart & Batt's shingle mill, and was not gotten under control for five hours, and then only after a favorable change in the wind. The fire department and volunteers worked with the utmost valor. Three river steamers, one ocean-going ship, the Mobile and Ohio railroad wharf, cotton seed oil mills, eight warehouses, three cotton compresses with probably 10,000 bales of cotton, a big ice factory, a box factory and large coal sheds were destroyed. In fact, all the buildings bounded by the river from Knox street, the northern boundary of the city, to St. Louis street on the south, seven blocks, and from the river front to Royal street on the west, were burned out. The losses will reach probably three-quarters of a million, with an insurance of $400,000. There was no loss of life, although many firemen were overcome with heat and smoke and had narrow escapes from falling walls.

The alarm for the fire at Stewart & Batt's mill had scarcely come in, when a second alarm was sounded for the burning of the residence of Mosely F. Tucker on Dauphin street, near Broadway, which was completely burned. A residence adjoining was also destroyed. The two alarms being followed by a general alarm, caused the greatest excitement among all classes, and soon a report was spread that the entire business portion of the city was in danger, and thousands of men, women and children rushed to the scene. No one felt safe in the business portion of the city, and wagons, drays and all kinds of vehicles were engaged in carrying away valuable books and papers. More than twenty squares were burned. The tracks of all the railroads centering here have been obstructed by debris in the burned district, and trains are delayed.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Ex-Alderman William S. Whelan was shot and mortally wounded in a State-street resort, early Sunday morning, by George H. Hathaway, a gambler. Whelan died this afternoon. The story as told by eyewitnesses of the shooting was that Whelan and one McGinnis, an officer of the health department of this city, had been out drinking all Saturday night, and reaching this saloon sat down to have lunch. While they were eating and drinking Hathaway came in and was asked to join them, and soon after sitting down began to flourish a revolver. Whelan demanded that he put it up or he would be made to do it, and after some further words Hathaway shot Whelan, the ball passing clear through his body and striking his spine. Hathaway was seen in prison by several reporters and told conflicting stories, the last one being that he was attacked by McGinnis, and that in defending himself the shooting occurred. What his trouble was with Whelan he would not say; there is evidently a story behind it.

At 9:30 he received the officers, officials and members of the general staff, who came in a procession. At 11:30, in the presence of the emperor, the guards and cuirassiers, with their colors, paraded before Count Von Moltke's residence. The veteran stood on a balcony. The colors were afterwards taken to his room. Then all the German and foreign generals, including Chancellor Von Capri, General Kutusoff, of Russia, and an Austrian deputation bearing an autograph letter from Emperor Francis Joseph, assembled in the grand hall, where they were greeted by Emperor William. Count Von Moltke, led by Count Waldersee, now entered, followed by the staff officers, and there was a general offering of congratulations to the old hero.

In the afternoon the municipal officers, headed by Burgomaster Farkenberg, presented a testimonial and 50,000 marks as a gift, in Count Von Moltke's name, to the almshouse established by the late Emperor William. In thanking them the count described this as the most valuable of his gifts.

An Eternal Shame.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—In a letter to the Times on the Congo state, Stanley declares it will be to the eternal shame of the country if the decisions of the European powers remain ineffective, and they be not allowed to tax trade for its protection and expansion, as commercial companies in other parts of Africa do. He says unless a moderate duty on imports be collected, the suppression of slave-trading on the Upper Congo is likely to remain a proposition on paper only.

Minister Hirsch Demands Satisfaction of the Porte—The Porte Expresses Regret But Hirsch is Not Satisfied.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 26.—Trouble has arisen between Hirsch, the American minister, and the Porte over the arrest of an American subject on suspicion of being implicated in Armenian revolutionary plots. The accused is a graduate of Bowdoin college. He came to Turkey during the administration of President Hayes to found an American college, but the project fell through, and he has since remained here. Hirsch secured his release, pending trial, and sent an energetic protest to the foreign minister against the violation of the right of domicile of an American citizen, and demanded satisfaction and punishment of the official who ordered his arrest. He further declared that he would refuse to produce the accused unless satisfaction was granted, and until informed of the nature of the charge against him. A statement was sent to Hirsch that the accused had engraved a seal for a secret Armenian committee. Proof was produced that the man had no knowledge of the art of engraving, and had recently been acting as agent for an American firm engaged in the manufacture of photographic apparatus. The government then expressed regrets. Hirsch, however, still maintains his demand for satisfaction.

Starbears.

Georgia believes in confining her bad people permanently. The state penitentiary has 300 life-time prisoners. A Brooklyn woman wants a divorce from her husband because he snores, and she thinks the case is chronic and incurable. Western nomenclature of towns is often more peculiar than dignified. A new village postoffice in California is called Gimletville. A butterfly in the Brooklyn institute recently sold for $1000, who institute has a duplicate for which it would not take any price. Miss Emily Hays, the belle of the cotton field, aged 19, lives in a cabin fifty miles from Harrison, Ark., and earns $4 a day picking cotton. How they do live and hang on. Major William G. Moore, chief of the Washington police, was private secretary to President Andrew Johnson. A Gentle Reminder. Miss Summit—What a delightful dent there was in Mr. Dashaway's hat after my progressive euchre party last evening. Miss Palisade—Yes. I heard him tell some one in the hall that it was to remind him to say to you what a pleasant evening he had passed.

About three weeks ago, while the sheriff was taking Arnold to the penitentiary he jumped from a moving train in the Blue mountains and escaped. He wandered about that vicinity for some time, being furnished food by friends, and finally started for this city in a box car.
