

THE TEACHERS.

PROCEEDINGS AT YESTERDAY'S SESSION OF THE INSTITUTE.

Interesting Papers and Discussions—The Afternoon Session—A Full List of Those Who Are in Attendance.

The second day's session of the county institute was full of interest to all in attendance, and the number present was greatly augmented by crowds of visitors.

The rooms assigned to the various sections were all filled promptly at 9 o'clock, and the five speakers tackled their subjects simultaneously in the five rooms at the top of the bell. Forty minutes were allotted each speaker, then four of them changed rooms and repeated their talks to the new audiences thus presented, spending forty minutes more, then doing the change again, until the four rooms had each heard the four speakers.

Prof. Swafford, crayon in hand, gave an address on elementary drawing, showing how this branch of study should be taught to the children under the charge of the teachers. His particular branch of instruction is considered of such importance that he has been placed on the programme every day for four days. The idea of his talks is to make plain to the teachers the use of the various helps and paraphernalia furnished them by the board of education for use in giving instruction in drawing, much of which is now lying idle because the teachers are unfamiliar with their use. The lessons are very interesting, and will receive a large share of attention. Professor Swafford is the gentleman in charge of the manual training department of the Los Angeles college, and was formerly connected with a similar institution at St. Louis.

Mrs. J. Powell Rice, of San Diego, gave the first of a series of practical talks on how to teach vocal music in the primary department. She said that she would treat the teachers as little children, then proceeded to give the hundred or more teachers present a lesson in singing in her own way, interspersing her lessons with instructive remarks. The teacher need not be an accomplished vocalist in order to be a successful teacher of vocal music. In singing before the children the teacher should not sing too well, as the children should be encouraged to believe that they can do as well as their teachers if they try. The hand exercise, and the use of colors to designate the notes, were entered heartily. It is possible to build up the voice of all children, and the bright, musical phenomena of the home, the Sunday school or the stage are the most hopeless as far as the proper training of the voice is concerned. Let the children forget themselves and they will usually sing well. The foundation of the child's future voice must be established during the first two years of the school life, when the child is from 6 to 8 years of age. Short daily exercises in singing are better than longer exercises on alternate days. These are, among others, the points touched upon by Mrs. Rice. In putting the teachers through their musical exercises Mrs. Rice insisted on the removal of gloves, the assuming of an erect position in the chair and the unbuttoning of cloaks and coats. The teachers all entered heartily into the spirit of the lesson and responded earnestly to all the requests and suggestions of Mrs. Rice, and the 40 minutes devoted to musical instruction was much enjoyed.

Another interesting talk upon geography was given by Prof. Alex Frye of Hyde Park, Mass. The fact that he overstepped his time in every school speaks for his interest in his subject, and the applause bespoke the interest excited in his hearers. Prof. Frye is the founder of an entirely new system of geography teaching, and the author of a series of text books upon the subject that are becoming very popular in the east, and seem destined to take the place of the books in use in all parts of the country.

Superintendent Will S. Monroe was assigned the subject of Science, and proceeded to show how elementary science could be taught the youngest children. The good result of teaching science was shown to be in the cultivation of the habit of observation and the use of the reasoning powers.

During the progress of these talks in the four lower sections, the High school section had an excellent paper on Geology, by Prof. John Dickinson, who talks on English, or English history, as a study in the High school, by Mrs. T. Coleman and Mrs. E. A. Packard, and an address upon Civics, by Superintendent C. H. Keyes, of Riverside.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The afternoon session was a general one, held in the great assembly room. "Standing room only" might have been an appropriate sign to hang up outside the door several minutes before the meeting was called to order, and that notwithstanding the fact that a large number of chairs had been placed in the room since yesterday.

The teachers joined in singing America, under the leadership of President Molyneux, after which the first paper of the afternoon was read—Professional Reading—by Mr. Caspar W. Hodson, of Pasadena. His paper was well read, and received a round of applause at its close.

An address on Penmanship, by Prof. Keyes, of Riverside, followed. Prof. Keyes gave a very humorous but forcible arraignment of the present copy-book system of teaching penmanship, which he said was doing more than anything else to make us a nation of poor penmen. The present system taught the children how to execute pen and ink finger drawings, but not how to write. Good penmanship means: (1) Legibility; (2) rapidity of execution, and lastly, (3) beauty. Scholars should be taught to sit naturally, but not to devote so much attention to their position that they forget to take pains in writing. Freedom of motion should be insured, but all the scholars should not be compelled to assume the same positions of body or hand, as no two scholars are alike. Study of good forms is good, but the letters should be studied as a whole, not dissected and pulled to pieces. That is like studying a countenance by cutting off a nose, or chin, or a set of teeth. It is easier to write well rapidly than with such painstaking slowness as is usually exacted by the teacher of penmanship. The professor illustrated his remarks with the blackboard, and kept the teachers simmering with merit the entire time he was on the platform. Even those who evidently disagreed with him were compelled to laugh at the ridiculous figure the copy-book system presented as exhibited by him.

During the intermission which followed this address, Miss Clara Lillibridge sang a solo very effectively and was enthusiastically encored. Professor More, of this city, was the next on the programme with an address on Psychology.

General exercises under the management of Miss Mattie Reed concluded the afternoon session.

NOTES.

Today's programme includes talks on geography, music and drawing in the four lower sections, with forty minutes devoted to discussion in each room, while the high school section will hear the following addresses: Physics, Mr. James D. Graham; algebra, Miss Clara Lillibridge; elementary geometry, Miss Genevieve Sharpe; plane and solid geometry, Mr. James N. Pemberton, who in the afternoon there will be a general session, in the assembly hall, with the following programme: Foundations of pedagogical study, Superintendent C. H. Keyes; school room decorations, Miss Cora Slack; fundamentals in arithmetic, Superintendent C. H. Keyes; school organization and government: 1. Requisites in the teacher, Dr. A. W. Plummer; 2. how to begin, Miss Margaret K. Scott; 3. means to be employed, Mr. C. L. Ennis; 4. rules, Mr. James A. Foshy; 5. punishments, Mr. W. F. Bray; 6. discipline on the school grounds, Miss Janet Henderson.

There are numerous exhibits of the work of the scholars of the city and county schools in the halls and ante-rooms of the High school building, not the least interesting of which is that arranged by Mrs. W. Bradford, who has charge of the instruction in drawing in the schools of this city. There are specimens of drawing by every child in the city schools, and some most remarkable examples of drawing of objects from memory. There are also some fine specimens of clay modeling and paper cutting by the youngest children, between the ages of 6 and 8. Noticeable among the clay modeling specimens are some baskets of fruit, excellently formed and very naturally colored by the little ones of Ninth-street and Thirtieth-street schools, particularly a basket of halves of oranges from Thirtieth-street school.

There are 426 teachers on the register from this city and county, of which the following is a nearly complete list:
