

QUITE A ROW.

Another Chapter of the Soldiers' Home Fight.

Erdman Accuses Treichel of Being Full of Duplicity,

And Says He Was Nearly Bounced at the Board's Last Meeting.

The Major Claims That the Governor's Assertions Must Be Taken Cum Grano. The Whole Matter to Be Laid Before Congress—Erdman's Statement.

The Herald of Friday morning announced exclusively, as is its fashion, the news of a large-sized row at the Soldiers' home, near Santa Monica, between Governor Treichel and ex-Treasurer Major Erdman. The trouble was caused by Major Erdman's retaining the duplicate vouchers of his accounts, which the governor claimed were the property of the home. In consequence of the major's refusal to give them up, the governor had Mr. Zacharias, Major Erdman's clerk, arrested for grand larceny, got a search warrant so as to look for the vouchers in Mr. Zacharias's house, and in fact made a personal search himself of the baggage there.

The governor has backed down as far as dismissing the grand larceny charges against Mr. Zacharias, but the friends of the latter gentleman assert that things will be made very warm for the governor by means of heavy damage suits.

The Times of yesterday, after the Herald's publication, printed the story giving Governor Treichel's side and containing many serious allegations against Major Erdman. The matter was seen by a Herald reporter and expressed himself as follows:

"Yes, I have read the article in the Times and I judge that Governor Treichel inspired most of it. The assertion that I was arrested for grand larceny is a malicious falsehood. The only arrest was of my clerk, Mr. Zacharias, as stated in the Herald of the day before."

"There are some ugly assertions in the article mentioned, made by, as stated, a high official connected with the national home, but that official takes very good care to have his name suppressed, the inference being that he was afraid of consequences if his identity was known. However, I can guess at the fellow's name. I wonder if it was the identical governor of the Dayton home, who was dismissed some years ago for serious allegations against his management?"

"Governor Treichel's assertions regarding my official action should be taken cum grano salis. He is unscrupulous and full of duplicity. "One thing is certain, and in that Major Bonebrake will bear me out, and that is that Gov. Treichel came very near being bounced by the board of managers, at their recent meeting at the home."

"Although I have become satisfied that the board of managers has been systematically prejudiced against me by Treichel and his pals, I shall, in due course of time, submit my case for reconsideration, to the board, and I have no doubt that ample reparation will be offered for the wrong inflicted upon me. You can further state that it is more than likely that the whole matter, including the management of the home, and the composition of the board will be transferred to the consideration of congress."

It is stated that Major Erdman has a large following at the home, and the fact that Governor Treichel backed down on the criminal prosecutions, looks as if the old gentleman was not assured of the correctness of his position.

SANTA MONICA.

There will be a perfect carnival of fun at the seaside city today, which will undoubtedly draw a large crowd. Among the attractions will be a barrel race, there being over twenty contestants entered for six prizes, consisting of $20, $15, $10, $5, $4, $3, respectively. The race will commence promptly at 2:30 from the raft in front of the Arcadia bathhouse.

At Cowley and Baker's pavilion the Arend orchestra will give one of their concerts, and Douglass's military band will play at the stand in the esplanade.

All the girls are fixing up their wardrobes in great shape, evidently intent on a vigorous campaign on the militia boys; and, talking about young ladies, there are a multitude of them here, whose beauty and vivacity are unexcelled at any other resort.

Captain Morengo, the well-known whaler, has a yacht and several surf boats here in which he takes parties out. Last Thursday's mass meeting has caused several heated discussions. The opposition of Mr. Steere has become one of spite against three members of the board, he having said over his signature words to that effect. It seems to your correspondent that a broad minded view of the matter would lead one to act as his constituency desired, whether it pleased the majority or not. Mr. Allen says absolutely nothing.

The committee on race track held a meeting at Eckert and Hopp's pavilion last Thursday evening, when W. B. Willis was instructed to have the track put in first class condition. The next meeting will be held at the same place on Thursday next.

H. D. La Motte put in an appearance today after a ten days' absence, but knows nothing about the railroad project. Poor man, wish he did.

Mrs. Wilson and Miss Agnes Wilson are enjoying a few days here. Mrs. J. De Barth Shorb and family, of San Gabriel, have taken the Goetz cottage for the season.

James Tiernan of San Gabriel is spending a few days here. Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Severance and family, who have been spending the past few weeks at the Arcadia, leave for San Francisco today.

J. De Barth Shorb, Jr., is enjoying seaside life. Yesterday's arrivals at the Arcadia were Mrs. J. De Barth Shorb, J. De Barth Shorb Jr., Campbell Shorb, San Gabriel; H. B. Tenney, H. E. Lacy, Tucson, Ariz.; Mrs. C. E. Clarin, Miss Farman, Miss Shorb, Mrs. C. Farman, Miss Agnes Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Schaller, Mrs. E. B. Lindsay, W. D. Longyear, J. Harcourt, Mrs. W. B. Kenny, Leander Kenny, Mrs. Lazarovich, Miss Alice Parker, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. James K. Parcels, Misses Adelle and Gertrude R. Parcels; John E. Triot, Fred A. Hun, William Harper, San Francisco; Robert D. Malcolm and family, St. Louis; H. B. Everest, W. W. Wilson, J. P. Monroe and family, Riverside; D. McDonald, Temesca; Miss Zara Dewey, New York; Dr. H. K. Macomber, Pasadena.

THE BRIDE TOO YOUNG.

A Case Where the State Law Interfered With a Marriage.

William A. Cole appeared in the county clerk's office at the new court house yesterday with Mrs. Cram and applied for a marriage license for himself and the lady's daughter, Mary E. Wilkerson. The license was made out, but when Deputy County Clerk J. J. O'Neil learned that the girl was only 14 years of age he refused to issue the document on the grounds that the child was beneath the age of consent, and could not marry under the state laws.

Mrs. Cram said that she gave her consent to the marriage, and was very indignant when she was told that that did not make any difference, the girl could not marry under the law.

"Why," said the irate lady, "I married off my other daughter in May, and she was only 13 years of age. I got the license in this office, too."

The document was still withheld, however, and the couple left. After standing on the corner a few moments discussing the question with Mrs. Cram Cole returned alone and argued the question with O'Neil. He finally made an offer to "make it all right" with the deputy clerk, and named a sum which she thought would be worth the compensation, but he was disappointed in this attempt at bribery.

The license which Mrs. Cram said she obtained for her other daughter was hunted up on the records, and it was found that on May 16th last Charles Pinard, aged 23, was granted a license to wed Anna L. Cram, aged 18. Pinard swore that the girl was 18 years of age. Mrs. Cram says she will go to San Bernardino county for a license.

SHORB TAKES WATER

AS THE SUBJECT OF A GOOD SPEECH IN BROOKLYN.

He Tells the Easterners Something About the Results of Irrigation—Changes in the San Gabriel Valley.

A dinner on July 29th was given to Governor Irwin of Arizona at the Marine and Field club at Bath Beach, near Brooklyn, New York, at which Hon. J. de Barth Shorb, of San Gabriel, made an address, from which the following is taken:

"I have been asked to give my experience on irrigation of California and to relate some of the lessons of the said experience. This subject of irrigation is so wide, so full of inspiration, that it is difficult to wisely determine where to commence and where to end. The corner stone of the fabric of civilization was not laid in cement and mortar, but upon water itself. A surprising statement at the first glance, and yet we know, upon reflection, that water is the great non-condensable element that cannot be made to occupy a lesser space than nature's God allotted it, no matter how great the pressure may be.

"I remember well in the early sixties, when standing on the bill on which my home is now located, I looked back of me toward the high Sierras, over the plains where Pasadena is now located, and then looking in front of me over the valley of San Gabriel toward the broad Pacific, there were but three or four houses outside of the little village surrounding the old mission over this entire territory, a few small orchards of oranges and lemons, a few circumscribed acres of alfalfa, and a few scattered herds of cattle, whose long and wide-spreading horns suggested instantaneous flight rather than closer scrutiny, and then a few scattered herds of sheep, whose tread caused the dust to rise in volumes almost sufficient to obscure the sun. And this was all.

Now looking over the same territory from my piazza, what do I see? The thousand of homes, the hundreds of spires of churches, school houses of vast proportions, thousands of acres of well cultivated orchards and vineyards, a scene of peace, happiness and cultivation. The magic wand that has produced this wonderful change, like Aladdin's palace, is the fruiting waters of irrigation. From the small returns in the early sixties now hundreds of thousands of dollars reward the labors of the industrious man. It may not be an exaggeration to state that the income now derived from 100 acres of well-cared-for orchards is greater than the entire production of the San Gabriel Valley of that time which represents over 200 square miles of territory. This picture of San Gabriel valley, due solely to the results of scientific irrigation, the maximum utilization of its waters, may be taken as an object lesson of what can be done anywhere where the conditions are similar."

According to a report by Crane Bros., of Saticoy, the bean acreage in that vicinity is 6700 acres, which will yield from 700 to 900 pounds to the acre. S. L. Mack, of Hueneme, reports the acreage in that locality at 30,000 acres and the yield one-quarter of last year.—(Ventura Free Press.

A SEA MONSTER.

A Turtle Which Weighs a Thousand Pounds.

Over Seven Feet Long and Five in Width.

The Great Creature Captured Yesterday off San Pedro.

Louis Mascolo Shoots the Turtle Three Miles Out at Sea and Tows It Into San Pedro—Brought to This City.

"Is it a whale there?" said Louis Mascolo to his shipmate Antonio, as they were merrily bowling along in the natty fishing boat Il Duilio, about three miles off Point Firmin at San Pedro yesterday morning.

Antonio gazed at the curious object and crossed himself. "Corpo di Baccho! I think it is the sea serpent."

Both men watched the monstrous creature, about a couple of hundred yards from their boat. It would disappear beneath the water and then bound in the air, falling with a splash that made the spray fly for yards. Louis soon discovered that it was a turtle—a green turtle—the great grandfather of all turtles apparently. A turtle big enough to have made a tureen of soup for Gargantua, or enough for all the candidates for the postoffice, who fail to get it, to dive into.

Louis made up his mind that he wanted that turtle, and so the little Duilio luffed and bore down straight for the monster. When within about a hundred feet of the creature it dove. Louis could not follow it in its submarine sport, so the Duilio lay and the skipper made ready his rifle, which he always carries. In a few moments the turtle reappeared, bearing a big fish in its enormous parrot-like beak. As it came to the surface it stretched its long neck, rearing its head in a serpent-like way, and as it saw the boat it gave a distinct snort. Louis hesitated a moment as to whether he would shoot at the body, protected by its great shell, or at the head. He chose the latter just at the moment it was being turned towards him, and the bullet entered to the rear of the right eye, but so tough was the skull that it did not show itself on the other side. The Duilio was then driven close to the creature and a rope made fast to its head, and it was towed to the wharf at San Pedro.

All the town turned out to see it and wonder. The biggest turtle ever taken before was about half the size of this. There was considerable difficulty about getting the thing upon the wharf, but eighteen men manned the rope, and at last it was hauled up on the pier and placed on the railroad scales, where its weight was shown to be 966 pounds.

A Herald reporter saw the monster last night. It must be something over seven feet long and five feet across, and its flippers are at least two feet long. Its shell is corrugated and marked with spots.

The fishermen regard this turtle as something wonderful, nothing approaching it having ever been caught off this coast. Louis Mascolo had the monster in town last evening, packed all around with ice, and expects to place his catch on exhibition today.

ROBES AND CASKETS.

A New and Complete Undertaking Outfit.

It was an unlettered but enthusiastic man who called at an undertaking establishment where they had a new hearse, and as he looked at the highly finished vehicle exclaimed: "Save, there'll be suicides in town now."

While of no particular moment to the dead, it is of interest to their friends to know what arrangements can be made for the celebration of the last sad rites and the payment of a last tribute of respect to the departed loved ones and friends.

With this thought in mind a reporter of the Herald yesterday called at the undertaking establishment of the Peck, Sharp & Neitzke company, in their new and well fitted quarters at 140 South Main street. The company has but just occupied this place, which has been especially fitted up for the business.

The board then solemnly picked up their traps, walked up the hill and continued the meeting in their sumptuous new quarters on the second floor of the new court house.

The following demands for services as assessor's deputies during July were disallowed by a resolution introduced by Supervisor Forrester, because, as the resolution states, there is no "authority of law for the allowance thereof, the same being for extra services performed out of regular hours, and the said claimants having been heretofore allowed for their regular services during the same time as such deputies, on demands filed and warrants ordered thereon: Harry Lee, $43.10; P. T. Sargent, $47.50; J. E. M. Men, $42.35; O. C. Vail, $34.25; W. H. Whittemore, $50; L. B. Saxton, $45.77; V. A. Sernet, $32.72; Grace Farnsworth, $36; Sallie H. Hayes, $30; Elmer Teal, $52.55; F. M. Vanderlip, $43.10; Henrietta A. Miller, $33.30; A. B. Conrad, $15.45; E. C. Foster, $10.75; Josie Lambourn, $21.75; Louise Campbell, $11.50. Adjourned.

THE MASIAS EXAMINATION.

The Proceedings Enlivened by a Personal Discussion.

The examination of Masias for the murder of Yung Him, at Ballona, which has dragged along during the entire week, was taken up again in Justice Stanton's court yesterday. The testimony was not all in at the adjourning hour, so the case was again continued till 5 o'clock tomorrow. The following witnesses were examined: J. L. Tucker, Mrs. Masias, M. Masias and Antonio Masias.

When court adjourned Attorney H. H. Appel, for the defense, asked for a subpoena for Lee Langford, one of the hunters who were shooting near where Him was killed, on the day of the murder. The subpoena was made out, and Appel remarked, in a voice loud enough to be heard all over the court room: "I do not want Charlie Cruz to serve that paper; he is interested in the prosecution."

Cruz, who was present, heard the remark and retorted hotly: "I am not in the habit of influencing witnesses the way you are."

Appel replied, saying that if Cruz meant to imply that he was in the habit of tampering with witnesses, he told an untruth.

The deputy sheriff then gave the lie direct, and both men started for each other with blood in their eyes. It looked equally for a time, but friends got between the would-be combatants and a fight was averted.

Justice Stanton fined Cruz $10 for contempt, but both men apologized for their hasty words, and the fine was remitted.

How to Succeed.

This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient grit—want of nerve. They are nervous, changeable, easily get the blues and "let the spirits down" to keep the spirits up, this wasting money, time, opportunity and nerve force. Nothing like the Restorative Nerve, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervousness, headache, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. whose walls and roof are of cement, where bodies to be kept for a time are stored, and are safe from destruction even should the balance of the establishment be consumed by fire.

Mr. E. G. Peck, who conducted the reporter through the establishment is an Ohio man who came to Los Angeles in 1882, and has been in the undertaking business in this city ever since. He is the largest owner of stock in the company which owns the establishment.

Mr. Robert Sharp is an Englishman, but has been in Los Angeles eighteen years. Mr. Ernest Neitzke, who is the only German undertaker in the city, has lived in Los Angeles nearly twenty-five years, and is well known to the numerous German residents. An attaché of the establishment is Mr. Oscar Dahlstrom, a native of Sweden, and a popular member of several Swedish fraternal orders.

These gentlemen claim to have the most complete undertaking establishment and most varied stock of any place in this south country, and their stock of hearses and carriages is in keeping with the high grade of all the goods they handle.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

People Who Yesterday Secured Permissions to Wed.

Marriage licenses were yesterday granted to the following named persons: Francis T. Quinn, aged 22, of Los Angeles, and Julie Vignes, aged 19, of Los Angeles.

M. H. Wiggins, aged 26, of Los Angeles, and Louise Fogle, aged 20, of Los Angeles.

The grave of Oliver Goldsmith, in the crypt of the New temple, still remains in a neglected condition. The secluded little courtyard has recently been relaid with gravel, and the memorial tablet of the poet bears evidence of irreverent treatment. The engraved letters have not only become dim, but the tablet is scratched, evidently by unknowing feet. Surely here is a crying opportunity for some one to provide against further desecration.

ROBBERS' ROOST.

THE SUPERVISORS BID FAREWELL TO THEIR OLD QUARTERS.

They Adopt Resolutions of Regret and Occupy Their New Quarters—Assessor's Deputies Not to Be Paid.

The board of supervisors sat for the last time in the old "Robbers' Roost" yesterday. The meeting was called to order at 10 o'clock, and the clerk was instructed to notify J. A. Bullard, the purchaser of the old courthouse, that he could take possession on August 15th.

Supervisor Davis then offered the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted: Whereas, The hour of 10:55 a.m. of Saturday, the 8th day of August, 1891, has arrived, the same being the time heretofore appointed for quitting and abandoning this venerable pile that for so many years our respected constituency has so fondly designated as the "Robbers' Roost," and

Whereas, The county auditor, county clerk, county recorder and county sheriff have already forsaken the old building;

Resolved, That with regret at bidding adieu to the old court house so rich in historical memories, that we do now adjourn to our rooms in the finest court house west of the Rocky mountains.

The board then solemnly picked up their traps, walked up the hill and continued the meeting in their sumptuous new quarters on the second floor of the new court house.

The following demands for services as assessor's deputies during July were disallowed by a resolution introduced by Supervisor Forrester, because, as the resolution states, there is no "authority of law for the allowance thereof, the same being for extra services performed out of regular hours, and the said claimants having been heretofore allowed for their regular services during the same time as such deputies, on demands filed and warrants ordered thereon: Harry Lee, $43.10; P. REDONDO.

The regular Saturday evening ball at Redondo hotel last evening was well attended, and exceedingly pleasant. With merry hearts the light fantastic was tripped till the hour of midnight signaled the time to stop. The ladies' costumes were remarkably pretty and becoming, while the gentlemen looked handsomer than usual in the conventional black broadcloth. A special train leaving about the midnight hour conveyed the visitors to the beach back to Los Angeles. This train arrangement was made more especially for the convenience of those who attended the district convention of Good Templars held here last evening.

The Ideal Banjo and Guitar club, of Los Angeles, directed by Professor C. S. Delano, gave one of their best programmes in the music hall of Redondo hotel Friday evening. The selections by the club were all highly enjoyable, and elicited hearty applause from the large and appreciative audience. The San quartette made a decided hit, while the guitar duet by Professor and Mrs. Delano, and a solo by the professor were admirably rendered, the phrasing being absolutely perfect. Several vocal selections by a well-known artist merited the approbations received. Mrs. T. Masac delighted the audience with a number of piano solos in her usual brilliant style.

After the concert refreshments were served and then dancing finished the evening's entertainment.

Among the latest arrivals at Redondo hotel are included: S. H. Craft and family, Antonio Varala and sister, Sonora, Mex.; Robert Reynolds, Des Moines, Ia.; Mrs. L. H. Craft, J. W. Robinson, W. Smith, Los Angeles; James Banton, S. C. Solley, A. W. Stanton, San Francisco; O. P. Meyers, S. P. Rollins, Tacoma; J. C. Dunn and daughter, Arizona.

THE EARTH YAWNED

The Colorado River Region Badly Shaken.

Ground Which Rolled Like Waves of the Sea.

A Tidal Wave Eighty-Five Feet in Height.

Houses Wrecked—Volcanoes Spout and the Earth Opened—The River Said to Have Changed Its Course.

Colonel D. K. Allen, of Yuma, writes as follows to the San Diegan, of the earthquake recently felt at Yuma:

The earthquake which was so forcibly felt at Yuma on the 30th of July shook the country to the south of that place to its very foundations. At the ranch of Mr. Hill, eight miles south of Yuma, and at the boundary line twenty-two miles from here, the shocks were very violent, and although both are in the valley, having a deep soil of loam, the shaking was very severe. At the Lerdo colony, sixty-five miles south of Yuma, the ground was forced up, cracked and rolled as if imitating the waves of the sea. The walls of the houses were badly cracked, stables were thrown down, and the waves came with such force that no one could walk or stand. At C. R. Townsend's place, seven miles down the river, his house and stables were thrown down and doors and windows broken into fragments. The house was built of large cottonwoods, the ridgepole being a cottonwood eighteen inches in diameter. This was broken and the roof fell in. His place is forty-five miles from the mouth of the Colorado, and yet the tidal wave was eighty-five feet high, as shown by the banks of the river. It must have been at least 100 feet high at the mouth. Many of the Indian houses were thrown down.

The ground opened in places from four inches to four feet. Most of the cracks were parallel to the course of the river. The roar of the earthquake was heard some seconds before the shock came, and that of the tidal wave rolled up from the gulf was terrible. People left their houses and ran to the high mesa. The shock continued all day. At 5:30 p. m. another hard shock was felt. The Indians ran for their lives and did not return until the next day.

The volcanoes were very active, and have been since, and although twenty miles away in an air line, the reports of their almost constant explosions can be heard at times with a great roar, continued for several seconds, and with a force that seemed to shake the ground for miles around. The Indians say that they never felt such a shock or heard the volcanoes so noisy.

The river ran into and filled up some of the crevasses in the banks, in others the water still continues to flow. The report that the river was flowing into a break or crevasse forty feet wide and 1000 feet long, and that it had left its old bed and that it was dry, is not generally believed, although several reliable Cocopa Indians from below the Lerdo colony say that the earthquake changed the course of the river. The Cocopas build very good houses of large posts set on end, and the roof of dirt is well scattered. A large number of these were thrown down by the force of the shocks. Without doubt the shocks were the heaviest ever heard of in that section of country.

The geysers and all the springs are unusually active, and the action is intermittent. It is yet to be seen what influence these earthquakes may have had on the volcanoes, the Colorado river and the Salton sea.
