DOING HIS DUTY.

His Orders Were from the Superintendent, and He Meant Business.

During a strike on one of the eastern roads they had to pick up anybody they could to man what trains had to run.

"Now, boss," he said to the superintendent, "you just tell me what to do and you bet your boots I'll do it. Do you want any strikers killed?"

"No, no. Don't you meddle with them unless they meddle with you. You won't have very much to do unless something goes wrong with the train. Then you help as much as you can and do what the conductor tells you to."

"And if things go smooth, what do I do then?"

"Just about the name of the stations."

When the Chicago limited started out at 9 o'clock that night Boscome was on one of the sleepers. Everybody was in his berth trying to get to sleep, when Boscome put his head in the door and yelled:

"Breton's Corners?"

"To do land," cried the porter, agast, "you must call de names out in a sleeping car."

"You tend to your blackin boots and don't interfere with me. I'm a doin my duty and don't you forget it."

People put their heads out from between curtains and wanted to know what lunatic was abroad. The sleeping car conductor expostulated with Boscome, but every time a lot of lights flashed past the new brakeman yelled "Muggin's Junction" or what-ever name was next on his list.

The train conductor at last came along and said he would put Boscome off, but the stalwart brakeman asked him to try it on if he thought he could do it.

"I ain't got nuthin agin you, condue," said Boscome, "but I'm a doin what the superintendent told me to do, and you bet I'm goin to obey orders. Stiggen's Crossing."

The conductor pulled the bell rope and the train slowed up.

"Anything wrong with the train, condue?" asked Boscome anxiously.

"Yes. The airbrake's on fire. You run back there about a rod and you'll find a bucket of water beside the track. Bring it to me."

As the train started up again the conductor shouted to Boscome, who was trying to catch up:

"Next time you get on a train you do what the conductor tells you to. Quit running after us; you can't catch the limited. Tramp back and report to the superintendent."

Her Great Objection to the City.

She was a fresh looking young country girl, with rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes, and had come to visit her city relatives.

She took a stroll around the neighborhood and when she returned to the house she seemed troubled.

"I guess I'll go home to-morrow," she said.

"What's the matter?" Don't you like the city?" asked her city cousin.

"No, I don't," she said with decision.

"Do you miss the green fields?" queried the city cousin.

"Oh, no; it's not that," said the country girl.

"The noise of the streets troubles you, I suppose?" suggested the city cousin.

"I don't mind it at all," returned the country girl.

"Of course the air is not as pure and the soot ruins everything," admitted the city cousin.

"Oh, I don't care about that," said the country girl. "And the cable cars don't frighten me, and I don't get bewildered by the crowds, but I haven't seen a front gate to swing on moonlight nights since I've been here. How in the world do you city girls ever get married?"

Breaking It Gently

In the province of Holstein, noted for its superior breed of cattle, the country people are not only very thrifty, but exceedingly fond of their cows, as may be gathered from the following characteristic story:

Farmer Jan was walking sadly down the road one day when the village pastor met him.

"Why so sad, Farmer Jan?" said the pastor.

"Ah, I have a very sad errand, pastor," replied Jan.

"What is it?"

"Farmer Henrik's cow is dead in my pasture, and I am on my way to tell him."

"A hard task, Jan."

"Indeed it is, pastor, but I shall break it to him gently."

"How will you do that?"

"I shall tell him first that it is his mother who is dead, and then, having opened the way for sadder news still, I shall tell him it is not his mother, but the cow!"

Had the Bulge.

He was in no hurry as he went up the steps of the Elevated station on Third avenue. He took plenty of time to buy his ticket, and he carefully looked it over to see whether it was a genuine ticket or a dead head pass to a theater.

And as the train sped away he walked off down stairs, chucking and cackling over having the bulge on the Third avenue road. - M. Quad in New York Evening World.
