Any person who is unable to purchase the Herald on the railroad trains of Southern California or from the news agents of the principal towns, will confer a favor by promptly notifying us, giving, if possible, name and place. There now promises to be a genuine effort made on the part of the police, backed by the commissioners, to break up the dens on New High and Buena Vista streets where shameful exhibitions of the social evil nightly confront the people who have to pass those thoroughfares on their way home. The wonderful lowering of records on the Stockton track Tuesday is another proof of the matchless quality of California's climate for the breeding and training of race-horses. Just think of a 2-year-old trotting in 2:35 1/2, beating Sunol's time 2 1/2 seconds! When Goldsmith Maid, in the flush of her powers, first trotted a mile in 2:38, it was thought a marvelous performance. Many not very old men can recollect when Lady Suffolk ran against American over the Beacon course, Hoboken, that a mile accomplished below the thirties was considered the very utmost reach of equine speed. We are told that two of Chile's most distinguished citizens have started for Washington to lay before the government documentary evidence to the effect that Minister Egan was giving the secretary of his legation to men guilty of not only political but criminal offenses. If this is true, the government cannot remove Egan too soon. Indeed, we should like to know under what rule of international law or comity Mr. Egan offers sanctuary to men who have committed political offenses against the existing government of Chile? Chile, because she has gone through a successful revolution has not lost the right to her police powers. She is not a barbarous nation that these powers might properly be suspended in favor of persons seeking sanctuary from their enemies. Mr. Egan has no right to use his legation to protect his Balmaceda friends from their crimes. We have received the first number of the California Illustrated Magazine, published in San Francisco. This new venture is under the able editorial management of Professor C. F. Holder, a magazine writer of fine reputation, and a long resident of this city and Pasadena. The illustrations are an improvement on the crude cuts that have heretofore marred the pages of publications of this character on the Pacific coast. The opening article in this number is written by Hon. E. E. Spence, of this city, and is devoted to a rapid and graphically written sketch of Los Angeles. Indeed, a great deal of the magazine is devoted to Southern California subjects, and many of the contributors are identified with this part of the state. We have not had time to give the magazine a careful reading; but a cursory glance over its pages satisfies us that Mr. Holder has struck a literary mine and knows how to work it. A GENTLEMAN who is very enthusiastic about the sugar beet industry, sends us the following memoranda: "If sugar beets contain 16 per cent. of sucrose, one ton will yield 320 pounds of sugar. If the beet product reaches the reasonable yield of 20 tons per acre, 6,400 pounds of sugar would be the amount obtained from each acre. With the price of sugar at 6 cents per pound, and the government bounty of 2 cents per pound added, there would be a total value of $512 per acre extracted from the land. At these figures, a 20-acre farm would afford an annual yield of sugar worth $10,240—enough, one would think, for both farmer and sugar maker." But let us divide this rosy statement, and put the price of sugar, including the bounty, at 4 cents per pound, we would have then the very generous figure of $256 represented as the yield from each acre of land, or $5,020 from each farm of 20 acres. It would seem to any reasonable person that there was enough in sight here to insure success to both farmer and sugar maker. But certainly, if we add the bounty, there is a great amplitude of margin for that purpose. We do not believe that there is any danger that British intrigue can be successfully exercised in Honolulu to capture the Sandwich Islands in the event of the death of the reigning queen. It is true that Mr. Cleghorn, the father of the queen apparent, a mere girl, is strongly John Bull in his feelings and sentiments; but in a matter so momentous as placing the islands under the protectorate of the British government, the father of the future queen would find himself of as little account as fathers are generally considered by Kanaka custom. The fact is, the great commercial interests of the Hawaiian islands are mainly in the hands of Americans, and the American element predominates to such an extent that any attempt to pass the islands over to any other power than the United States would meet with determined resistance. Yet it is of the first importance that we should have a strong naval force at Honolulu. The British came within an ace of getting control of the islands once before on account of the indifference of the American government. Every year the Sandwich Islands become of greater importance to the Pacific coast. As a naval outpost of the United States they will be of prime necessity to us in the future.

EFFECT OF PARNELL'S DEATH. The death of Charles Stewart Parnell comes with stunning suddenness upon the public, for it was altogether ignorant of the fact that he had been seriously ill. With all his great strength of will and tenacity of purpose, Mr. Parnell's life was puffed out, when his time came, with the ease that a breath of wind blows out a lighted candle. We may see in the contrast of his terrible energy as a leader to the last, and the frail tenure he held upon life, that Parnell inherited an iron purpose and a dogged nature which nothing but death itself could overcome. In this respect he was no degenerate scion of his grandfather, Commodore Stewart, of the "Old Ironsides" seventy-four.

We do not intend to moralize on recent events when we say that it would have been better for Parnell's fame, and greatly to the advantage of the cause of Ireland if he had died two years ago. Up to the time of his battle against fate and the sense of decency of the Irish people, Parnell loomed up as the greatest leader that the Irish cause had ever had. He was greater than Daniel O'Connell, because he sought through constitutional channels the end that could only have been achieved by force of arms. O'Connell's "repeal" of the union could never have been achieved without successful revolution. Parnell's method, on the other hand, was to use the very medicines of the constitution as the daily bread in sustentation of the fight of the Home Rulers. Parliamentary obstruction, persistent opposition, and untiring presentation of the grievances of Ireland were the instruments used by Parnell with such consummate skill as to have united the Irish people in giving hearty approval to his methods and in creating a great and powerful English sentiment in favor of conceding home rule to Ireland. Never before was Ireland so near achieving success as she was under the leadership of Parnell. It makes one grieve to think that all this magnificent work and achievement should have been imperiled by the acts of the very man who had built up the grand and noble fabric; and it seemed at one time as if the spirit of discord, long so fatal to Ireland, having been, like the evil spirit in the eastern fable, bottled and sealed by the great leader, was about again to be let loose to resume its grim and malevolent mission to the ruin of the cause he had brought so near to success.

While we should be sorry for the premature death of any man, and especially of one who had filled so large a space in the world's eye, yet we must say that, under the circumstances, the elimination of Mr. Parnell from the Irish problem is one of the most fortunate events that could occur for its early and successful solution. With Parnell gone there is no one in his faction upon whose shoulder his mantle can fall. Without his great will-power, resourceful tactics and energetic leadership to hold it together, it is but a question of time when the whole of the Parnellite faction will fall back into the body of the Irish party, which will once more present a united and formidable front in and out of parliament.

Dr. J. W. GALLY died at his home in Watsonville on Monday. The doctor was well known in newspaper and literary circles on this coast. He was the type of a class of people that are becoming rare. Although a man of education and culture, he was in his element when keeping march with the first wave of frontier civilization. He wielded a ready pen, and had great success as a writer of sketches of frontier life. In Nevada he was better known by his nom de plume of "Singleline" than as Dr. Gally. His conversation was lively and graphic, and he could entertain a crowd for hours with his interesting reminiscences of frontier life. Whenever a new camp was started in a new mining district, one was sure to see "Singleline," with his Rosinanti team and canvas-covered Misouri wagon on his way to it. Reese River, Belmont, Pioche, Palisades, Robinson's, Wood's Creek, White Pine, Eureka and scores of other camps in Nevada and this state were honored with the doctor's presence. He was at his best as a writer of short sketches. He tried his hand at serial stories, of which "Sand" is the best, but he was not at home in a tale of length. As a companion, Dr. Gally was entertaining and instructive; and in all the walks of life he was a very sterling man.

The principal gas-well of Stockton—John Jackson's—has been purchased by the gas-light company of that city. The well has a daily flow of 100,000 feet, and this will be distributed in the gas-pipes to consumers at one dollar per thousand. It would be difficult for the scientist to determine, from any surface indications in the vicinity of Stockton, that natural gas could be found there; yet it has been accidentally discovered and is now an important factor in the motive power, the heating and lighting of that city. If natural gas exists in great quantities in a city that gives no outward signs of its presence, it would seem absolutely certain that it could be found in a locality that abounds in manifold indicia of its existence. We should surely expect to find gas in commercial quantities at ample depths in a place where it escapes in considerable volume at the surface. We shall never despair of the discovery of natural gas wells of great value in Los Angeles until a thorough system of deep-well prospecting has proved to the contrary.

AMUSEMENTS. Managers Davis and Keogh, of The Hustler, are making active preparations for the starting tour of John Kernell, which is to begin next September. What they have been vainly seeking the past few months is a brand-new Irish-American comedy suitable for the display of Brother Kernell's varied talents. Numerous plays have been submitted to them, but none, thus far, possesses sufficient novelty and other important qualities.

Messrs. Davis and Keogh now propose to follow the "prize play" plan of the New York Herald and World, and allow everybody to compete for the job of furnishing a play for Colonel Kernell. The author of the play that comes nearest to the standard required, and is accepted, will be paid the sum of $2,000 outright for the work. No arrangements for producing it on the royalty basis will be made.

A committee comprising a half dozen of the leading dramatic critics of New York will formulate a plan of procedure to govern the literary combat, which will undoubtedly enlist the pens of some of the most famous and fertile of American playwrights.

The general Kernell will continue to impregnate the irrepressible "Con" Madden in "The Hustler" throughout the present season. Among the other noted fun-makers in "The Hustler" are Barney Reynolds, Gus Mills, John N. Marr, Lee Harrison and Leonard Somers. The subreptitious and pretty-as-a-picture girls includes Mollie Thompson, Zelma Rawlston, Virginia Lampert, the Laporte sisters, Steve Stevens, Agnes Howard, Carrie Norton and Mlle. Stacione, the Italian ballot premiere. There is a sextette of Parisian duster dancers, and the celebrated "Hustler" male quartette.

IN SOCIETY

Miss Sarah Lavalent was united in marriage last evening to Jacob Stern, of Fullerton. The bride, a pretty brunette, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lavalent. The Lavalent residence at 151 South Hope street, was brilliantly illuminated in honor of the event. The parlors were artistically decorated with smilax and evergreens. Cut flowers and exotics added to the beauty of the rooms. The ceremony was performed at 8:30 by the Rev. Dr. Blum. The bride was attired in white faille silk, diamond ornaments. The bridesmaids were Miss Hannah Lavalent, in light-blue silk; Miss Stella Ancker, in white silk with pearl ornaments; Miss Mamie Meyer, in blue silk, and Miss Rosie Harris, in white studded with gold. The groom was Joe Goodman, Isadore Lavalent, Ed B. Lavalent and Carl Rais. Mrs. Lavalent, the bride's mother, wore black brocade silk. The wedding march was played by Aren's orchestra. After congratulations and hand shaking, several hours were spent in dancing, when the invited guests sat down to an elaborate supper set in a pavilion in rear of the house and especially erected for the occasion. The table was superbly set, and the decorations were most exquisite and in elegant taste. The champagne was served by Robert Kern of the Nadeau. Soon after midnight the guests were serenaded by the Hungarian orchestra while at the supper table. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. N. Cohn, Mr. and Mrs. A. Feintach, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. B. Hirsch, Mr. and Mrs. M. Lowenthal, Mr. and Mrs. L. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. S. Frank, Mr. and Mrs. H. Frank, Mr. and Mrs. W. Kalisher, Mr. and Mrs. N. THE HUNSAKER AFFAIR.

Several New Phases Developed Yesterday.

Ben F. Hunsaker, who is now in jail under charges of embezzlement and robbery, in both of which cases Sarah J. Griffin Clark is the complainant, yesterday filed a petition for the appointment of a receiver and for the dissolution of the partnership existing between himself, Sarah J. Griffin Clark and O. W. Hunsaker.

The last named parties are the defendants in the action. The complaint recites that the partnership was formed for the purpose of conducting a saloon business at 243 South Spring street, of which the plaintiff was to be the manager. That the defendant, Sarah J. Griffin Clark, had him arrested on certain malicious and false charges connected with the business, and that by reason of his arrest the place was attached and closed up.

The complaint charging Hunsaker with embezzlement, which was filed in the township courts several weeks ago, was dismissed by Justice Stanton yesterday on motion of the district attorney.

The HERALD stated several days ago that this move was contemplated and that the prisoner would be taken before Justice Owens for examination, a new complaint having been filed in the city justice's court.

When the case came up yesterday morning there was a lively time. The prosecution asked that the complaint be dismissed and the attorneys for the defense vigorously opposed it.

The court appeared very much adverse to granting the motion, and stated that the court and the district attorney's office are being trifled with and imposed upon; that the complainant, Mrs. Sarah J. Griffin Clark, never intended to appear against Hunsaker.

During the argument between counsel a number of pleasant expressions were applied, such as "corrupt," "incompetent," "prejudiced," etc.

Justice Stanton finally settled the matter by exclaiming: "I am disgusted with the entire proceeding. The case is dismissed and the defendant discharged."

It is said that the attorneys for the prosecution were impelled to take the action they did in dismissing the old complaint and filing a new one by the position taken by Justice Stanton, who is said to have freely expressed his opinion on the case and its disposition.

TERM TRIAL JURORS.

The Supervisors Looking Into Their Illegal Claims. It would appear from facts in the possession of the board of supervisors that jurors have been in the habit of putting in demands on the county treasury for fees to which they are not entitled, and if the information gleaned by the board is true there is work ahead for the grand jury.

The suspicions of the supervisors were first aroused when they came to audit a demand of S. A. Waldron for $128.50 mileage fees.

Waldron served as a term trial juror in department one, and on May 6th he presented a demand for the amount named for six days mileage, claiming he resided at Neenah in Antelope valley. The demand was accompanied by the usual sworn statement that it was a true one.

The monthly allowance roll, presented by the clerk of the court, showed that the amount due Waldron was but $1.20, and Mr. Crane, the clerk, was summoned and questioned as to the discrepancy. He stated that Waldron had given his residence on Sand street in this city when under oath in department one and had accordingly been credited with one mile per day for six days.

The board then had Waldron's testimony transcribed from the reporter's shorthand notes, and when the manuscript was placed in the hands of the board there was no question of the illegality of the demand, as Waldron's testimony was precisely as stated by Clerk Crane. It was also evident that he had committed perjury in swearing to the demand, and a motion to deny it was adopted by unanimous vote.

Waldron appeared before the board and admitted that he had not traveled the distance for which he sought to obtain mileage, except on April 1st, and he could not state positively that he had on that day.

He stated that it was usual for jurors who resided out of town to remain in the city while on service, and to collect mileage as though the distance was actually traveled by them every day.
