

FREE COINAGE KNOCKED OUT.

The Stewart Bill Receives Its Death Blow.

A Test Vote in the House Relegated It to the Rear.

The Measure Defeated by a Majority of Eighteen—Quay and Peffer's World's Fair Amendments Pass the Senate.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, July 13.—The attendance in the house was large this morning. The anti-silver Democrats were full of confidence; the Republicans alert; the silver men determined, but evidently with little hope of success. Their programme was suddenly changed this morning. They resolved to force the fighting and make the engagement decisive of the silver question. So they resolved to adopt the usual course, voting against the previous question on the adoption of a special rule allowing the bill to be called up. If defeated, it would be regarded as a test vote. If they succeeded in defeating the previous question, the plan would be to offer an amendment to the rule permitting the amendment of the bill to cure the objections made in the caucuses and also the closure, so as to insure a final vote on the passage of the bill as amended.

The ball was opened by Catchings, Speaker, Crisp's lieutenant, who reported from the committee on rules a resolution to make the silver bill the special order of the day. Ex-Speaker Reed, as the representative of the Republicans, was on his feet instantly, at the conclusion of the reading of the motion by the clerk, and moved to lay the resolution on the table. The speaker declined to recognize Reed, ruling that Catchings had the floor. Reed insisted on his right to make the motion in advance of the one from Catchings, who was in control of the resolution, and disclosed the purpose of his motion. It was to kill the resolution, and with it the silver bill. The speaker maintained his position that Catchings had the floor.

Catchings yielded the floor to Chairman Bland of the coinage committee, who offered an amendment to the resolution, having for its object a pathway to the amendment of the Stewart bill, to meet the alleged defects in it, and apply the closure rule to the bill.

Bland spoke fifteen minutes and was followed by Bartine, of Nevada, a leading free-silver Republican, who spoke in the same strain.

Clark, of Alabama, spoke in opposition. Though in favor of free coinage he recognized the impossibility of making the present bill a law.

Patterson, of Tennessee (Democrat), heretofore classed as a free coinage man, spoke against the bill, saying he did not want another issue. He would march under the banner, "A public office is a public trust."

Reed then delivered a philippic against the change of front by the Democratic party on free silver.

Reed was followed by Abner Taylor, of Illinois, against the bill.

Pierce, of Tennessee, and Culbreton, of Texas, spoke in favor of it.

Bland closed the debate. Then Catchings called for the previous question on his resolution.

On motion of Tracey, the yeas and nays were ordered and the vote resulted in the defeat of the free coinage men, the previous question being ordered—163 yeas to 125 nays.

Catchings was again recognized and moved the adoption of the resolution. This time the silver men voted "yea" as the defeat of Catchings's motion meant the death of free coinage this session. The silver men were less than ten votes stronger on the direct proposition, and the resolution reported by the committee on rules was defeated by 136 yeas to 154 nays, a majority against the consideration of the Stewart silver bill of 18.

The negative vote was cast by 94 Democrats and 60 Republicans.

This vote is the death of silver legislation at this session. The Stewart bill remains at the foot of the long roll of bills sleeping the sleep of death on the overcrowded calendar.

Tracy of New York made formal parliamentary motion to reconsider the vote, and to table the motion, and the house proceeded to consider other business.

The house then proceeded to the consideration of private pension bills. Fifty-seven were passed and the house adjourned.

Although feeling very much dissatisfied, the free coinage men accept their defeat philosophically, with the consciousness that they made a strong fight, and in the belief that they have done their full duty. Now that the bill is practically shelved, the free silver men are not slow to admit that they believe the bill to be in a critical condition before the vote was taken, were therefore not surprised at the result. The general opinion of the members of the house this afternoon was that the prospects of silver legislation during the present session have vanished.

Particulars of the Wreck of the Frankie Folsom.

The Vessel Capsized by a Storm in Deep Water.

Ten Bodies Recovered and Four Under the Wreck—Several Others Missing—A Destructive Cyclone at Springfield, O.

By the Associated Press. PEORIA, Ill., July 13.—The following is a connected story of the disaster here last night, an imperfect account of which was sent late last night: The steamer Frankie Folsom came up from Peoria last evening with an excursion party to attend the production of the Last Days of Pompeii, at Lake View park. The performance was over at 10 o'clock, and the passengers hurried back to the boat, as a storm was coming up. There were thirty-two on board, and two got on at Peoria. The crew numbered five. When the boat reached the middle of the stream the storm burst with great violence. Capt. Edward Loesch attempted to head the boat for the shore, and in doing so turned a full broadside to the wind and the boat capsized. Most of those on the deck rushed to the upper side of the vessel. Captain Loesch assisted in distributing the life-preservers. Breaking in the windows of the cabin, in which all the women were imprisoned, having taken refuge there from the storm, he drew out three women, one of whom died very soon afterwards.

SETTLERS' HOMES THREATENED.

Great Excitement Over Ejectment Suits at Nogales, Arizona.

TUCSON, Ariz., July 13.—Advices from Nogales say great excitement prevails on account of all the settlers in the town being served with notice to quiet titles in a suit brought by the claimants of the Nogales Mexican land grant. The people held a mass meeting last night. Cameron, one of the grant claimants, was burnt in effigy. Service was also made on the settlers on the San Rafael and Calabassas land grants. In all 250 services were made. There are about seventy-five settlers on each grant. It is said the suit is brought at this time to save the limitations of the law. Vengeance is threatened against the land grant claimants.

THE ALPINE DISASTER.

PARTICULARS OF THE AVALANCHE AT ST. GERVAISE.

The Dead Estimated at 130—Bodies Horribly Crushed and Mangled by Masses of Rock and Ice.

PARIS, July 13.—The work of searching for the bodies of those who lost their lives in the disaster at St. Gervaise les Bains yesterday, was continued today. The bodies already recovered were torn and mangled most horribly. In many cases the heads were torn from the bodies. In other instances legs and arms were cut off by the huge masses of ice that passed over them. Some were crushed out of all semblance to humanity. When the glacier slid down into the Bonnant, on which mountain stream St. Gervaise les Bains is situated, the current was dammed and the water rose rapidly behind the wall of ice. Finally the pressure became so great that the dam was broken, and rearing, grinding, crushing, an immense volume of water and tremendous masses of ice started down the ravine. Many victims were overtaken in their sleep and instantly swept into the torrent and drowned, and their bodies afterward mutilated by the floating debris, or crushed. Of fifty-seven employees in the baths only nine were saved alive; seven of these are severely injured.

AFLOAT IN AILE.

The Ventura Balloon Crank Starts on His Voyage.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 13.—R. J. Woodward, the Ventura farmer who for several weeks has been preparing to make a balloon journey to New York, made an ascent at 9:16 this morning, in the presence of several hundred people. His balloon shot up like a rocket to a great height. It first struck a current of air that moved the balloon rapidly toward the ocean. Woodward threw out his edibles, ballast and everything else except the anchor, to make the balloon rise higher. Finally he struck a current of air which bore him rapidly inland, and at 10:15 he disappeared from view. A telephone message from El Cajon says he has passed over that valley and is traveling rapidly southeast. The signal observer says Woodward is in a current of air having about twenty-five miles velocity, and he thinks the doughty aeronaut will never be heard of again.

He made a long statement of the case in good English, and when almost through was asked by one of the board why the killing took place with such little ceremony. He drew himself up and immediately replied: "For the same reason that your people used to kill witches." This sharp piece of repartee took immediate effect, and in a short time the prisoner was a free man.

THROUGH THE DESERT.

The Perilous Trip of a Bold Hunter.

Borne by the Flood Water to the Salton Sea.

Six Hundred Miles in a Small Skiff. Hardships of the Journey—The Water on the Colorado Desert.

The San Francisco Chronicle prints a dispatch from Salton under date of July 10th, as follows: Charles Thielson will long be remembered as an explorer of the Colorado desert, for within the past few weeks he has made an involuntary trip from the mouth of the Colorado river to Salton, a distance of over 600 miles, and the greatest wonder exists how he lives to tell the tale. On May 10th he left Yuma in an 18-foot skiff, going down the Colorado river to the mouth of Hardy's Colorado to hunt for the plumes of the little white crane, which are plentiful there. Not meeting with success, he went up Hardy's Colorado to Volcanso mountain, there camped and hunted for plumes.

He then determined to follow up the New river, which comes into Hardy's Colorado, two miles north, west of Volcanso mountain, which place he left June 15th. Entering up the New river, he found a slow current running northwest, and after proceeding fifteen miles came to a laguna with an increased current; from that into a channel with quite a rapid current, and thoughtlessly went on, cutting his way through the mesquites until he came to another laguna. Then, realizing his dangerous position, he made camp and concluded that it was impossible to return by boat to Yuma through the channels on account of the rapid currents.

The thought then occurred to push on and endeavor to reach Salton. After passing through seven lagunas he came to a channel which he estimates to be seven or eight miles long, the water running from four to five miles an hour, but with no great depth or width to the channel. This distance, he says, he made in two days, arriving July 6th at the south end of Salton lake, about opposite Volcano springs.

Here he found the water to be two inches deep, and was compelled to push his boat some eight miles over the mud and shallow water, hunting for a channel that would lead to Salton, but was compelled to abandon the journey. He moored his boat and made for the railroad track barefooted and without water, walking the distance of eight miles through the hot mud and salt. He arrived at Durmid half dead and remained there one day resting himself.

The next day, thinking the water would rise, he went back to his camp and found to his own expression that "the water was being licked up by the sun." There being no sign of a rise he went back to Durmid, and not being treated kindly, started to Salton afoot to advise G. W. Durbrow of his trip. At Salton he was taken care of, and today he was fitted out with provisions and water to return to his boat for his gun and baggage. Mr. Thielson will return to Salton and will be the guest of Mr. Durbrow.

The water shows on the marsh about four miles from the track at Salton, but with the great evaporation there is but little increase to the water, which is accounted for by the fact that only one stream is running into the lake, and as the river will be falling every day it is not probable that the water will attain a depth of over six inches on the marsh, which Mr. Durbrow says "will be very acceptable."
