LONG BEACH. The Cases Against the Obnoxious Chinamen—Notes.

LONG BEACH, Aug. 3.—A large number of citizens were present this morning in the court room when the ten Chinese, arrested last Monday night, were arraigned. The defendants were all present with their attorney, Jesse Hardesty, of Los Angeles. The charge against them of smoking opium was dismissed, but another one was sworn out against Ah Gee, Ah Ling and Ah Fook, charging them with conducting an opium joint, and the trio were immediately rearrested. They were released on $10 cash bail, and the case set by Justice Pittman for Tuesday, the 9th.

The authorities at this place have acted under the advice of Deputy District Attorney McComas, who is stopping here, and who will appear for the people in the case next Tuesday.

THE CAMP MEETING. The camp meeting continues as well attended as ever. The praise services in the morning were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Anderson. These were followed by the testimony services at 10:30, and at 11 o'clock Rev. Fowler delivered one of his customary practical talks. He spoke on sanctification or the new birth, and in his remarks he was attentively listened to and seemed to impress all of his hearers.

In the afternoon Mr. Reynolds, of Pasadena, held a young people's testimony service, at which a large number took part. They were also addressed by a converted Cherokee Indian, named Joseph W. Bass.

NOTES. The local band went over to San Pedro last night and received a hearty welcome from that place. The Terminal railway very courteously held the train for them to return to Long Beach. The dance comes off tonight in the rink and a large number are expected to be present.

ACTING SAVES LIVES.

COUNSEL FOR MURDERERS EMPLOY THEATRICAL METHODS.

How Lawyers Who Defend Criminals Strive to Make an Impression on the Sympathies of Jurymen—Some Notable Cases Where Lawyers Succeeded.

For years it has been generally known among lawyers that all sorts of desperate and theatrical devices are constantly resorted to in order to save the lives of accused persons. But Mr. Wellman was the first prosecutor to make the charge in open court and quote an instance to fortify his allegation.

Is the practice right or wrong? Perhaps the most moving part of Lawyer William F. Howe's elegant summing up on behalf of Annie Walden was where he besought the jurymen to consider her youth, her beauty and her helplessness.

When Francis L. Wellman, assistant district attorney, began his summing up for the prosecution, he urged the jurors not to be moved by his adversary's emotional appeals. He called Mr. Howe an actor. He said:

"If you had seen him, as I have, go behind a woman defendant and pinch her to make her scream and so arouse sympathy, you would not be so much influenced by his theatrical display."

"Whom did Mr. Howe pinch?" I asked Mr. Wellman.

"Ella Nelson," was his prompt reply. "You recall that she had shot her lover dead because he was packing his trunk and preparing to leave her. She was on trial for her life. Mr. Howe got her acquitted."

"When he had got to that part of his summing up where he called upon the jury to 'look at her,' Ella was sitting behind a table, her face toward the jury, but resting in her hands. She had been weeping for some minutes, but now she was composed."

"Look at that face!" pleaded Mr. Howe in impassioned tones. He strode rapidly behind her. Again he cried, "Look at that face!" and as he did so he setted Ella's soft wrists in his strong hand and wrenched her arms apart. The woman screamed with pain and terror.

"That scream was enough to freeze the blood of anybody who heard it. I cannot help thinking that it had much to do with the verdict."

"I do not say that it is wrong for counsel to employ theatrical methods in defending their clients. I think it is part of the duty of the prosecuting officer to expose this sort of thing to the jury."

"Frederick B. House was defending a man named Becker in the general sessions. Becker had a clothing store in Baxter street. He arranged a candle so that when it burned down to a certain point at midnight it would set fire to a lot of bagging soaked with kerosene, and so burn the store and earn Becker a big amount of insurance. Firemen quenched the flames and so saved the lives of seventy-six men, women and children who were sleeping in the tenements above the store."

"When Mr. House summed up he was in a quandary. Becker couldn't understand one word in English, therefore how could the poor devil weep at the proper moment? That little difficulty was solved all right. Becker rested his face in his hands and peeped through his interlaced fingers at his eloquent defender."

"Think, gentlemen," said Mr. House, "if you send this wretched man to prison you will punish those innocent little ones." At that instant Mr. House dropped his handkerchief.

"Wow!" came a shriek from Becker. It began like the scream of a catamount. It died away in a long drawn wail and choking sobs. Becker's tears were like a shower. Mrs. Becker's and the little Becker's tears were a cloudburst. Human nature couldn't stand it. Juror No. 3 was a nice old fellow, retired from business and living at home surrounded by sons and daughters and chubby grandchildren. He broke down at the second drop of Fred House's handkerchief. At the third drop of the cambic the juror's tears gushed out beyond the railing. Answering sniffles and gasps came from two other jurors.

"It seems hard to believe, but it is a matter of record that in the face of the clear evidence against Becker the jury stood three for acquittal and nine for conviction. The tears and howls and the little Becker's saved the guilty man. And in proof of his guilt let me add that Becker was released under $2,500 bail, but he ran away, although the case was soon brought up for retrial."

"Often the question of makeup tests the counsel stage manager's ability and ingenuity. There was Alphonse Stephani, the young man who deliberately murdered Lawyer Clinton G. Reynolds for not surrendering Stephani's father's defense was insanity."

"Perhaps you recall the Stephani who came to trial. Instead of the handsome, neatly dressed rich man's son, the jury saw a wild, unkempt creature, a Caliban in ugliness. Stephani's hair had been untouched by shears or brush for months. He had not bathed or shaved. He still wore the clothes he had on when arrested. His linen was in tatters and almost black. His outer garments were greasy and crusted with accumulations of spilled food. Stephani was a good actor. Not a word did he speak to any one. With large black eyes, as deep and mournful as Edwin Booth's, he stared gloomily at nothing. Lear was a model of sanity beside him. There was more or less testimony to show that Stephani had fallen off a pony very many years ago and hurt his head, and that he had always been high tempered, like any spoiled child. No one had bothered about his alleged insanity, though, until after he had killed his father's old friend."

"Insane," was the jury's judgment after listening to the testimony and watching the gloomy makeup of the prisoner. They found him guilty of murder in the second degree, and he was sent to prison for life. Today he is a neat, well behaved and short haired convict.—New York Herald.

How They "Saved the Nation."

A correspondent writes that his Republican neighbors say that the "national banks and bondholders saved the nation during the war." He also asks us to publish the national bank system.

It is hardly worth while to publish the national bank system now that it is on its last legs. It has but a few breaths in its body. Let it die in peace. It has been a robber system and will always be remembered as such.

To bondholders saving the nation, they "saved" it just about as a hawk "saves" a chicken when he catches it. There were only about $500,000,000 of bonds taken till the war was practically over. These were taken in small quantities by patriotic people who wanted to help the government. Probably not one bond in a thousand thus purchased is now held by the original purchasers.

The national banks hardly "began business" till the war was practically over. They did not want to take any chances till they were sure the danger was passed.

It is true the law was passed with the hope that the bankers would rally to the relief of the nation and purchase bonds with which to open or enlarge their money shops.

To be sure that we are correct, we state (from statistics and official reports) that up to Jan. 1, 1905, when the war was practically over, only $63,709,875 of national bank currency had been issued. This shows that the "patriots" had only purchased of the government about $75,000,000 of bonds! Just about enough to carry on the government thirty days.—Chicago Express.

AN EXPLANATION AND ANSWER.

WHAT IS WINTERILLA?

Why, it is a pleasant and effective remedy for the positive cure of Chapped Hands, Poison Oak, Salt Rheum, Eczema, Sun Burn, Tan; positively removes Freckles, and is one of the grandest luxuries for gentlemen after shaving.
