

MARRIAGES.

In this county, on Tuesday evening, the 26th Nov., by Rev. Geo. R. Barr, Capt. THOMAS M. GOBBLE, of the 48th Regt. Va. Vols., and Miss SALLIE A. MEHAFFY, daughter of Mr. Hugh Mehauffy.

On the 31st inst., by the Rev. Mr. Queen, Mr. S. S. MAIDEN and Miss SARAH A. V. BUTT, all of this county.

OBITUARIES.

LIEUT. CONNALLY T. LYON.

It is with feelings of the deepest regret, that I announce the death of CONNALLY T. LYON, son of Harrison and Margaret Lyon, of Scott county, Va., and Lieut. of Co. A, 48th Regt. Va. Vols. Lieut. Lyon entered the service as a private in Capt. Vermillion's Company in July, 1861, when he was not 16 years of age, where he remained until he was killed instantly by a shot through the body, in the battle of Antietam, near Sharpsburg, Md., on the 17th Sept., 1862, whilst gallantly commanding his company. He fell in a foreign land, but his friends as a testimonial of the esteem in which they held him, removed his body within the limits of his native State, where it was decently buried. Belonging to General Loring's command, he suffered the hardships and privations of the Valley Mountain Campaign during the summer and fall of 1861. In Dec. of that year, Gen. Loring joined Gen. Jackson at Winchester. After that, his Regiment became permanently attached to Gen. Jackson's Division, and was with it in the winter campaign to Bath and Romney. At the re-organization in April, 1862, young Lyon was elected third Lt. of his company. From that date, down to his death, he was in all the movements of General Jackson's Division of the army. His kind and gentle manners made him friends wherever he was known, and his cheerfulness and fidelity in the discharge of his duties, won for him the respect and confidence of officers and men. Modest and retiring in the social circle, when the time for action came, this boy-officer was ever found at his post. At the battle of Cedar Run, he commanded his company, and so signally did he distinguish himself, that Gen. Jackson in passing, halted in admiration, to inquire who that "young officer" was. He gave his young life to the cause of his country, in one of the fiercest battles of the war, and as he lived beloved, so he died lamented by his Regiment.

"The brightest flower soonest fades," is an oft-repeated phrase, and sadly was it verified in the case of MARY ELEAN, only daughter of H. J. and E. J. Dickenson, whose earthly existence was terminated by a combination of erysipelas and diphtheria, Oct. 24, 1862—aged 4 years and 5 months.

Ellen was a loving and intelligent child, and soon won the affections of all around her. Her loss is acutely felt by her affectionate parents and devoted brother. Though the joy and pride of the family circle is gone, she forms but another link in the chain which binds the hearts of loved ones left to heaven. Mourn not for her.

Weep not for her—in spring-time she flew To that land where the wings of the soul are unfurled;

And now like a star beyond fleeting's cold dew, Looks radiantly down on the tears of this world. E. T. G.

Died, in this county, on the 29th of August, 1862, of scarlet fever, JOSEPH H. M. WILKES, only son of Mrs. M. E. Willis, aged 9 years, 2 months and 7 days. After a short illness of six days, he fell asleep in Jesus. "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Died, in this county, on the 25th August, 1862, of Erysipelas, SARAH E. L. A. WILLIS, only daughter of Francis and Mary E. Willis, aged 1 year, 2 months and 11 days. "Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Virginia weeps her murdered sons, On many a battle-field.

Died, in defence of his country, on the bloody field of Sharpsburg, Md., Sept. 17th, 1862, EDWIN I. HORTENSTINE, son of Capt. John Hortenstine, of Washington county, Va., and 1st Lt. commanding Co. B, 37th Regt. Va. Volunteers, "Stonewall Division," in the 24th year of his age. When the tocsin of alarm first sounded on the borders of this proud State, our high-souled hero, Col. Fulkerson, gathered around him a band of gallant spirits, composed of the best blood of Southwestern Virginia; and May 1st, 1861, the subject of this notice, as "Mountain Boys," in the strength of his brave young manhood, buckled on his armor and went forth to do and die for his country's freedom. Nobly he did his whole duty on all the battle-fields where the immortal "Stonewall Division" shewed the road to victory. Fearlessly leading his men in the thickest of the fray at Sharpsburg, he died; and though it fills the hearts of father, brother and sisters with anguish that Edwin fills a nameless grave, unmarked save by the pitying eye of God, they should remember he sleeps not alone in his glory, for very many bold-hearted comrades, "Like warriors taking their rest, their armor girded round them," have lain down with him, to sleep till judgment. Then weep not gentle sisters, for he who has thus far covered this beautiful Confederacy with the hollow of his hand, is watching your brother's patriot dust, and together, with all our martyred heroes, will one day call Edwin up to His bar above, to receive a reward for all his actions here.

Lt. Hortenstine possessed a naturally vigorous mind, enriched by study and extensive reading, rare powers of conversation, a character manly, brave and self-relying, combined with all a woman's gentleness and amiability, and it is with sad pleasure, one who knew him well and long before this cruel strife began, pays this public tribute to his memory.

Virginia, by his fall, loses one of her boldest defenders, the 37th Regt. an intrepid, skillful officer; a once happy home circle—but we draw a veil over the sacredness of their grief, only adding in these touching lines, from one of Georgia's weeping daughters,

"A father mourns his loved one, He had not seen of late; A brother and three sisters Weep o'er his early fate, And friends who meet together, Rehearse again the tale Of his many deeds of valor, And his early death bewail."

Nov. 14th, 1862.

Died, at his residence, in this county, of Pneumonia, on the 22d ult., Mr. WILLIAM FIELDS, in the 52d year of his age. On the death of his father, he being the oldest son, though a minor, took the charge of a large family, and in order the more effectually to aid his mother in the support and education of her younger children, he bound himself an apprentice to a bricklayer, and while an apprentice, all his earnings by extra night work he scrupulously devoted to that object. As soon as he became free and master of his art, he at once obtained employment; and such was the confidence which he early secured, and which he retained through life, in his integrity of character, diligence in business, and fidelity, that he had no difficulty in obtaining as much work as he could perform, not only in his own and neighboring counties, but also in Tennessee, and uniformly fulfilling all his contracts to the entire satisfaction of his employers, whether these employers were private individuals or corporations, or Churches. And this is evident from the fact, that in all his transactions with men he never had a litigated case in any of our courts. As a husband, father and master, neighbor, friend—in all these relations, he was affectionate, faithful, considerate, rendering to all their dues, never rigid in his exactions—aiming always to render to others in full measure all that they could justly claim. He was charitable to the poor, a public benefactor, a liberal supporter of the institutions of the Church, and a regular attendant upon its worship. His death was peaceful, and not without hope of a blessed immortality through the merits of the Redeemer. B. G.

Bristol Advocate will please copy. Died, of Diphtheria, at the residence of her father, Oct. 4th, Miss BETTIE WORLEY CRABTREE, in the 18th year of her age. This interesting young lady was called away in the morning of youth, when all that was most desirable to make life pleasant and happy was before her. Her death, like her life, was gentle and peaceful.—Weep not ye stricken ones. Bettie is not lost but gone before, to await you in that blissful sunny clime, where pain and parting are no more. C.

Died, at the residence of her son-in-law, in this vicinity, on the 16th ult., Mrs. MARTHA SAWYERS, in the 65th year of her age.

Died, in this county, on the 8th ult., after two days' illness, JAMES DAVID, son of Mr. Robert Berry, in the 16th year of his age.

I started to Jackson's command, but a relapse of the disease compelled me to return home, where I expect to remain until my health is restored, and then join the army in Northern Virginia.
