HUMOROUS ITEMS.

Everybody is anxious to go to heaven; but nobody is in a hurry about it.

A sentence of forgiveness in five letters.—I x q q u.

If you eat a ham in three days, how long will it take you to eat a couple of hammers?

An Illinois grave-digger who buried a man named Button, sent a bill to his widow as follows: "To make one Button-hole, $2.50."

Drinking-glasses were made for men, and looking-glasses for women.— Both make the head unsteady, one with liquor and the other with vanity.

"Blood relations? Why, they are near relatives, my son."—"Then, mother," replied the boy, after musing a while, "you must be the bloodiest relative I've got."

A poor man being ill, on being asked by a gentleman whether he had taken any remedy, replied, "no, I ain't taken any remedy, but I've taken lots of physic."

A certain doctor used to cook into medicines all sorts of roots and herbs and then try them on his wife. If they didn't kill her, he was ready for his other patients.

"That bed is not long enough for me," said a very tall, gruff old Englishman, upon being ushered into his bedroom by an Irish waiter at one of our hotels. "Faith, an' you'll find it is plenty long, sir, when you get into it." was the reply; "for then there'll be two feet more added to it." Exit Pat, with a boot fetching up the rear.

"Now, then, Joseph, parse courting," said a teacher of a rather slow boy.
"Courting is an irregular active transitive verb, indicative mood, present tense, third person, and singular number, and so on," said the boy. "Well, but what does it agree with?" demanded the teacher. "It agrees with all the girls in town," Joseph exclaimed triumphantly.

A gentleman was chiding his son for staying out late at night, and said:
"Why, when I was of your age, my father would not allow me to go out of the house after dark."

"Then you had a deuce of a father, you had," sneered the young profligate.

The father vociferated, "I had a confounded sight better one than you, you young rascal."

An Irishman entered a photograph gallery in New Haven recently and wanted to get a picture of his wife. Not seeing such a personage present, the man in attendance asked where he had left his lady, to which he replied, "Shure, an' she's dead. But I'll give yer her description and yer can just take it from that.
She was five feet four inches high, had black hair, full cheeks, was bow-legged and had a most excellent disposition."

Extract from Josh Billings' Dia-ree.—Friday—visited my washerwoman, and blowed her up for sewing ruffles and tucks onto the bottom ov my drawers.— She was thunderstruck at first, but explained the mystery by saying she had sent me a pair by mistake that belong-to Miss O.—"I blushed like a biled lobster, and told her she couldn't be too careful about sich things. I might hev been ruined for life."

An honest old darkey, whose expectations of getting a forty acre plantation and a domestic jackass, for voting the Radical ticket, were entirely sincere, now goes back on his friends in this wise:
"Dem carpet-baggain' scallawag fellers; dey tell us dar war pervisions in the Constitution for we collad folks, but dat was a lie—dem pervisions didn't come. 'Fore God, massa, I ain't seen de fust mouthful."

An honest farmer in the State of Pennsylvania married a miss from a fashionable boarding-school for his second wife.— He was struck dumb with her eloquence, and gaped with wonder at his wife's learning. "You might," said he, "bore a hole through the airth, chuck in a millstone, and she'll tell you to a shavin' how long the stone will be goin' clean thro'.
I used for to think that it was air that I sucked in every time that I expired;— howsomever she telled me mo that she knowed better—she telled me that I had been sucking two kinks of gin—ox gin and high gin! My stars! I'm a temperance man, and yet have been drinking ox gin and high gin all my life!"
