HUMOROUS.

A Shad Story. "Captain Charley" tells a good story of how a Tivoli mail carrier was "sold" a few days ago. It seems that this mail man is also a shad fisherman, about this time of the year, and they do say that he "draws the long bow" fearfully when narrating his exploits in the shad catching line. Well, some of the "boys" got their heads together on a little plan to get even with him by "selling" the man of mail and shad. So they told him that in Albany there dwelt a gentleman who would give twenty-five dollars for the sight of a nine pound shad. The name and address of this man were imparted to the Tivoliite, who carefully marked them down and "bided his time."

So did the fellows who were putting up the job on him. Not long after the Tivoli shadder caught a nine pound fish, and hastened to Albany with it, to claim the promised twenty-five dollars reward. He found the gentleman at his residence, and, placing the shad before him, the following conversation took place:

Tivoliite—"Mornin', sir, how d'ye do? Glad to see you."

Albanian—"Good morning, sir. Tivoliite—Are you the man that said he would give twenty-five dollars to see a nine-pound shad?"

Albanian—"Well, no, I didn't say so; but I would give twenty-five dollars, or even five hundred, for the sight of any shad, big or little. The fact is, my friend, I'm blind; and it looks as though somebody had been having a joke at your expense."

The man of mail and shad returned to Tivoli a wiser as well as a sadder man. He tells no more "big ones" about his shad-ding exploits, and when the train hands as they pass his humble door query, as they do quite frequently, in regard to that nine-pounder, he just "takes no pride" in what they say, but considers the source from whence it comes.

In one of the towns of Mississippi, two colored men were arrested on the charge of burglary. The jury, before whom they were tried were all colored.

After the case was tried, they retired and made a verdict, which was announced to the court. On being called, the judge asked for the verdict, which the foreman delivered as follows:

"Dis jury find dat one of de 'cuse busted in de sto' and stole dat bacon, and dat oder didn't do noffin'."

"Which one do you find guilty?" asked the judge.

"Dat's de question, boss," returned the foreman; "dat jes' what we can't find out, and we recommended dat de honorable coat jes' have a oder trial, and find out which ob dem two niggers stole de bacon."

A little four year old, residing a short distance from the city, was saying the Lord's Prayer a short time ago at his mother's knee, and after he had finished it his mother said: "Now, Sandy, asked God to make you a good boy."

The child raised his eyes to his mother's face for a few moments, as if in deep thought, and then startled her with the following reply: "It's no use, ma. He won't do it; I've asked him a heap of times."

The striking difference between a young man and a young woman is illustrated by a croaker, who says that the first thing a young man does when he sees a friend with a new hat on, is to take it off serenely try it on his own head; but when a young lady sees one of her acquaintances with a new bonnet she just lifts up her nose and serenely wonders "where the thing got that fright."

A little girl who had received a parental injunction to remember what the minister said returned from church delighted. "I remember something," she said.

"Ah! very glad of it," replied the father: "what did he say?"

"He said," she cried, "'A collection will now be taken up.'"

An eccentric temperance man says: "A champagne cork is a good thing in its place. Its place is a neck of a bottle. Anywhere else it is no longer useful. He who takes the cork from the bottle renders a useful thing useless, and the economy of the universe suffers."

Some are so delicate that they are afraid to ride, for fear of the horse rearing away; afraid to walk, for fear the dew might fall; afraid to sail, for fear the boat might upset; but they are never afraid to get married, which is more risky than all the others put together.

Not long ago a youth, older in wit than in years, after being catechised concerning the power of nature, replied: "Now I think there's one thing nature can't do." "What is it my child?"

"She can't make Bill's mouth any bigger without setting his ears back."

A youth stepped into a book store and asked, "what kind of pens do you sell here, mister?" "All kind, answered one of the clerks. "Do you?" said the little chap; "then give me ten cents' worth of pig pens."
