Postponement of the Next State Convention.

The time for the meeting of the next State Convention has been postponed until Wednesday, the 17th of May next.

"Let Us Have Peace."

The threatening clouds that hung over the leaders of the Republican party assembled in Congress at Washington are scattering, and the prospects of the party, and the country, as a consequence, are better.

The clouds have lifted. The threatened danger no longer exists. President Grant has risen with the crisis, as he often did before, in other trying times, and if he has not reiterated in words his famous saying, "Let us have peace," he has more forcibly expressed the meaning of the sentence in his late appointment of Col. John W. Forney to the editorship of the Port of Philadelphia, and in his late proclamations on Southern affairs, which we publish elsewhere.

The Picture Papers of the Free Traders.

The free traders are circulating pamphlets and pictorial papers, filled with cuts of the different kinds of articles manufactured in the old country, and duty on each marked in figures.

Caught in Machinery and Killed.

Last Wednesday Thomas Prebel was caught in the machinery of his father's planing mill, in Cincinnati, and killed.

ONE hundred women in the United States are now studying law.

REV. JAMES COLDR, D. D., of Michigan, was last week elected President of the Pennsylvania Agricultural College by the Trustees of the Institution.

AN old offender against law and order, named James Grandy, was hung at Washington, D. C., on last Friday, for the murder of an old woman last October.

SENATOR SCOTT'S speech on even San Domingo came too late to admit of even a synopsis of it in this issue.

THE San Domingo Commission has returned to Washington.

The Insurrection in Paris.

A portion of Paris has, during the last week, been under the control of what is styled a Central Committee, a committee created by a mob.

An election was held in Paris last Sunday for a municipal government.

Despatches announce that the Thiers government is preparing to attack the Paris mob.

The Present Rulers of Paris.

The Paris correspondent of the London Standard writes as follows: As I walked under the Column of Liberty, in the Place de la Bastille yesterday evening, I was attracted by a group of some forty or fifty Mobiles roaring at the top of their voices the plain chant music of the "Kyrie Eleison," which is so well known in all the churches throughout France.

As I heard near I was horrified to hear the blasphemous parody that was substituted for the original sacred words. Among other things, the name Garibaldi was used instead of that of the Divinity.

Now, therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do hereby command the persons composing the unlawful combinations aforesaid to disperse, and to retire peaceably to their respective abodes within a limited time.

The speech of Senator Scott on southern outrages is thus spoken of by the Washington Chronicle: "The speech of Senator Scott on southern outrages was a searching and convincing review of the Ku Klux Klan and its atrocious crimes in North Carolina.

The President's Message on the Condition of the Southern States.

It may be expedient to provide that such a law as shall be passed in pursuance of this recommendation shall expire at the end of the next session of Congress.

Proclamation by the President—A warning to the Klukks.

By the President of the United States. A PROCLAMATION. Whereas, It is provided in the Constitution of the United States that every State in this Union on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive when the Legislature cannot be convened, provided in the laws of the United States that in all cases of insurrection in any State, or of obstruction to the laws there of, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, on application of the Legislature of such State or of the Executive when the Legislature cannot be convened, to call forth the militia of any other State or States, or to employ such part of the land and naval forces as shall be judged necessary for the purpose of suppressing such insurrection, or of causing the laws to be duly executed; and whereas, I have received information that combinations of armed men are now disturbing the peace and safety of the citizens of the State of South Carolina and committing acts of violence in said State of a character and to an extent which renders the power of the State and its officers unequal to the task of protecting life and property and securing public order therein; and whereas, the Legislature of said State is not now in session and cannot be convened in time to meet the present emergency, and the Executive of said State has therefore made application to me for such part of the military force of the United States as may be necessary and adequate to protect said State and the citizens thereof against the domestic violence hereinbefore mentioned, and to enforce the due execution of the laws; and whereas, the laws of the United States require that whenever it may be necessary in the judgment of the President to use the military force for the purpose aforesaid, he shall forthwith, by proclamation, command such insurgents to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes within a limited time.

Now, therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do hereby command the persons composing the unlawful combinations aforesaid to disperse, and to retire peaceably to their respective abodes within a limited time.

Correspondence of the SENTINEL. Letter from South Carolina.

COLUMBIA CITY, S. C., March 18, 1871. EDITOR SENTINEL: Sir, First let me tell you that your correspondent has just laid aside the last copy of your interesting paper, and while perusing its columns it occurred to me that a few lines from this locality might, perhaps, be of some interest to your readers, as quite a number of you are doubtless, availing themselves of the State Legislature has adjourned, and the major portion of the members of that honorable body have returned to their homes, some doubtless, never to return, as it is currently reported that the "K. K. K." gentlemen are looking after some of them.

It was frequently asserted during the session that "big railroad jobs" were on the tapis; and, true, enough, a few days before the final ending, along they came; and with others was the Greenville and Columbia Railroad Company, with our old friend and fellow-townsmen, Col. J. J. Patterson in the lead, he being the Vice President of the above-named road.
