Restriction of Anthracite Output Is Made Possible by Individual Operators.

AGREEMENTS ARE ADHERED TO

One of the Quick Benefits of the Anthracite Coal Operators' Association Is Seen in the Harmonious and Loyal Attitude of the Factors in Hard Fuel Production—Curious Mechanism Constructed by Joseph Mayhew, of West Pittston—Miscellaneous Pickings of News and Gossip Relating to Industrial Interests.

It is agreed on all sides among the anthracite trade that the prevailing good feeling which has made the present severe restriction possible and general, is due in no small degree to the association of individual operators. It is computed that these operators mine one-third or more of the total output of anthracite, and their readiness to assume their share of the duties of the trade has produced a wide impression. Heretofore when a plan for restriction was proposed it has often been said—and perhaps at times with a slight measure of justice because of the lack of a general understanding—the individual operators will continue shipping and spoil the market; but now these gentlemen are organized and are prepared as a body to follow the lead of the large interests in carrying out any proposition which looks toward the benefit of all concerned. This has made the present restriction possible; perhaps a more stable agreement for the whole trade may be the ultimate outcome.

Joseph Mayhew, of West Pittston, who designed the model breaker exhibited at the World's fair, is at work upon a model combination coal breaker and washer, which will be placed on exhibition at the Pennsylvania State college. We borrow from the Pittston Gazette this interesting description: It is a working model to show the process of preparing anthracite coal for market. It is constructed to handle all small coal from mine separate from coal that is broken by machinery. The structure is 7 feet wide, 10 feet long and 11 feet high, the material being red brick and cherry. Coal is taken into the breaker by means of a plane and is when it is dumped out of cars into the dump chute it passes over a tier of round iron bars placed sufficiently far apart to allow coal of the size of buckwheat to pass between bars. This is run directly to the washer in the washing tank. The washer is a conical screen provided with a spiral of iron rods. After the coal is washed it is hoisted by an elevator one story higher and enters a round screen. This screen sizes it, the small coal going to coal pockets and the nut and stone going to jigs to be elated and then conveyed and run into coal pockets. The coal that passes over the first tier of bars runs over a solid portion of plates and enters on a set of oscillating bars that are placed still wider apart and that allow coal from buckwheat to grate to fall between them. This goes to a square gyrating screen that sizes the grate, egg, stove and nut. Smaller sizes are hoisted by an elevator and enter the washer.

The grate coal from this screen would have to be hand picked. Egg is partially cleaned by machinery, stove and nut to jigs. The coal that passes over the oscillating bars is sized and immediately enters coal pockets without any picking. The coal that is picked out on plates is put into roll No. 2, then passes to a square gyrating screen that sizes grate, egg, stove and nut. Grate and egg are hand picked, stove by mechanical appliances and nut to jig. Roll No. 3 is for rebreaking grate and egg coal. This coal is also hoisted by elevator and screened in a round screen that sizes stove, nut, pen and buckwheat. This goes direct to the coal pockets. Roll No. 4 is for screening all impure coal from grate, egg, stove and nut pickings that are gathered into a conveyor and hoisted with an elevator into the slate room where all impure coal and rock is taken out. The screenings from loading coal are conveyed to an elevator and hoisted up into breaker, entering a screen to be sized. The entire plant is conveyed out of the building. There are seven outlets to receive coal and fifty-eight outlets or gates to draw coal into railroad cars.

The Reading railroad receives hopes to have the papers sufficiently advanced by today to make the application of the company for the first step toward reorganization, namely, the issuing of $5,000,000 of the Coal and Iron company's trust bonds. The bond has already been drafted.

MINOR INDUSTRIAL NOTES: A rumor is afloat that the Erie Coal company is about to establish a relief fund for all the miners in that employ, upon the same plan as that of the Reading and Lehigh Valley Railroad company.

Tyler, McKrack & Co., after drilling several weeks have struck the Buck Mountain coal seam, 55 feet thick, at their colliery near St. Clair. A contract to build the Lehigh Traction company's trolley road from Harrogate to the West Lake Electric company, of Philadelphia, which will employ 500 men. Work in all departments at the Lehigh Valley shops, Bethlehem, Pa., is continuing, and there is now enough to keep the shops running full time.

West Shenandoah Grant & Preston's No. 3 collieries will resume operations today after being idle for six weeks. Employment will be given to 1,500 men and boys. The Lynn (Mass.) General Electric company will start their factories today on full time, which means a 50-hour schedule and the employment of some 1,500 hands. The company has received several large orders recently.

An encouraging outlook for early resumption in all the departments of the Reading Iron company is reported. The two large blast furnaces, No. 1 and No. 2, which have been idle since July, 1892, are undergoing repairs and will be put in operation early next month. They will turn out 800 tons of iron a week, and employ 125 men. A tube mill of the company will resume today. It employs 30 men. The puddling department is running on double turn full handed.

They Want Work, Not Alms. The great army of the unemployed want work, not alms. They are unfortunate, but cannot bear the thought of being classed among the paupers or tramps.

Taste

has lost lives. In former years people wouldn't take Cod-liver Oil on account of its bad taste. Now we have the Cream of Cod-liver Oil, which is palatable and easier on the digestive organs than plain oil, besides being more effective. Physicians, the world over, endorse it.
