POWDERLY REPORTED EXPELLED

but secretly investigated, and as a consequence letters were mailed yesterday afternoon to any local, district, national and state assembly of the Knights of Labor, and that if within fifteen days they did not make satisfactory answer to the general executive board, they would stand expelled, and subject to appeal to the general assembly next fall.

THE LAW IN THE CASE. The charges against Powderly and his companions are based on the following laws of the Knights, contained in article 31 of the constitution: Any member of the order advocating its dissolution or the withdrawal of any local assembly or other assembly from the order, shall be that act stand expelled from the order.

The foregoing section was especially framed by Powderly when in power to meet just such cases as his own, where members advocated the withdrawal of local assemblies from the order.

Other sections read: The general executive board shall, upon satisfactory evidence presented to them, suspend any member who, in any local, district, national or trade or state assembly advocates or advises the formation of any club or other association not controlled by the laws of the order, unless an alliance exists between this order and such organization.

Any member of the order who shall malign any officer or member and who shall fail to sustain his assertion by preferring, within fifteen days, charges against said officer or member, and who shall fail to prove the same, upon conviction of the offense shall be expelled.

Whenever a member of the order uses the public press or takes to the public platform to name an officer or member in such a manner as to reflect on the name, or to bring into disrepute the name of the order, upon satisfactory proof of such act to the general executive board, said board shall declare the offending member expelled, and such other penalties as the magnitude of the offense may warrant, subject to appeal to the general assembly.

With these sections of the constitution as a basis, Messrs. McGuire, French and Martin, members of the general executive board, met in Boston, and after an investigation of the charges, expelled the three members as stated.

General Secretary-Treasurer Hayes was at once notified and letters notifying the delinquent members of their expulsion were at once mailed from this city.

Members of the order, who were aware that his actions and utterances would ultimately bring about his expulsion, has been casting about for a field for his peculiar talents, and falling with the Federation of Labor has hit upon the Prohibition party.

In an article published in the last issue of the Voice he denounces high license, advocates prohibition and flagellates the saloon keeper as a lawless violator of the law, the door-keeper to arson, forgery and all manner of crime, and the briber of the police, the municipal authorities and the ministers of God.

DENIAL OF THE REPORT. Mr. Powderly was seen last night at his home on North Main avenue by a Tribune reporter, who was the first to carry to him the reported action of expulsion by the new general executive committee. He pronounced the report a fabrication.

"The laws governing the Knights of Labor," said Mr. Powderly, "say that no member shall be dismissed from the order without first being given a trial at which to prove his innocence of the charges preferred."

"Do those laws apply to any charge," he was asked?

"They do, and I have not been notified."

When asked what part he played in the so-called national conference held last month at Philadelphia for the alleged purpose of handing over to his, Mr. Powderly's, instigation the Knights of Labor organization to the Federation of Labor, he said:

"Pursuant to a call issued by Joseph R. Buchanan of New York, a conference of representatives of organized labor met for the purpose of promoting a better understanding and greater harmony in action between the various organizations of labor throughout the country. This 'official' meeting was officially reported as being attended by nearly all the recognized labor leaders, representing all branches of trade unions."

"Did you at that meeting advocate the absorption of the Knights by the Federation," questioned the reporter?

"I did not, nor did I propose our alliance with any other labor organization."

It was suggested by the reporter that the object announced at the purpose of the April 15 Philadelphia meeting "to promote greater harmony, etc., between labor organizations"—might be construed to mean just what the accusations against him, Mr. Powderly, implied.

"That is impossible," he said, "because the men present at that meeting who were fully expressed; they are a matter of record."

DID NOT ADVOCATE ABSORPTION. "Will you state through The Tribune what reference you made at the meeting regarding any affiliation or absorption of the Knights of Labor by another body?"

"I said nothing about 'absorption,' I quickly replied the erstwhile labor leader.

"What did you say, please?"

"I said that the mass was gone and it was not my purpose to recall it. Man is the only animal who gobbles up his own species; the other divisions of the animal kingdom prey only upon other species. I saw in this conference the battle-scarred veterans of the labor movement, and said it might be fully true that it would be better to have the work of the conference carried on by the younger men who had been less identified with factional strife."

"I was there to build up both the Knights of Labor and trade unions. So long as dual organizations exist, trouble will ensue. Unity must be the local first. There is where most fights begin."

"Had just returned from Canada, where the members of District Assembly, 125, had been preparing to leave the order, I also know that they are going into the trade unions where the affairs of the trade could be better handled."

"I thought and advocated that it would be possible to get a confederation of all the great central bodies, and said that when this idea of union was carried out, general concentration of effort could be had in times of trouble. The union labels could receive a greater impetus, for men would work for the label in the hat, instead of, as now, for the scalp under the hat. I was sure that inspiration would come to the entire labor movement from the confederation."

DISBURTLED LOCAL ASSEMBLIES. "Since the general assembly of last November I have received fully a thousand letters from local assemblies asking if they should withdraw from the order. I replied invariably that if the order deserved their efforts in the past it deserved them now. In every case where I replied I urged the local assemblies to support and stand by the Knights of Labor with me out of office the same as they did when I was grand master workman."

To substantiate this, Mr. Powderly referred to his letter copy books, from which he read excerpts conforming to the statement given above.

When asked the meaning of the alleged substance from local assemblies and followers elected a delegate to attend the organized labor convention to be held at St. Louis June 11, Mr. Powderly said he had no knowledge of such a convention.

Referring again to the now famous Philadelphia conference, he said: "I recommended the conference to the grand assembly of the Knights of Labor because I believed openly action a necessity. I believed the moral influence of delegates would greatly aid the result of a conference between the Knights of Labor and other organizations which should not have been delayed nor frustrated. Although I did not speak as the head of the order, no man knew better than I the ardent desire and harmony with the trade union movement."

HIS PLEDGE TO COMPROMISE. "My pledge was given to work for this end and in token thereof my hand was extended to President Granger, of the American Federation of Labor."

Regarding a past charge preferred against him of having unlawfully retained property belonging to the office of grand master workman of the Knights of Labor, Mr. Powderly said: "During service in my late office of master workman I was not allowed to build an addition to my home, yet the demand for them is only one of the many matters brought up against me and is on a similar scale with the matter on which I have conversed with you."
