MINOOKA.

One of the largest cases that has been heard in the Minooka court house since its opening was tried last evening between John Dronch and Mrs. Frank Battollo.

The trouble was occasioned by an unattended bill, due Mrs. Battollo from Dronch, who failed at her house last spring for three months, during which time he was sick and unable to work. The case was decided in favor of Dronch.

Then Mrs. Battollo entered proceedings against Dronch for assault and battery. Attorney McGinty, of Scranton, acted for the prosecutrix, and Attorney Charles H. Soper for the defendant. Mrs. Battollo alleges that while trying to collect the bill the defendant handled her roughly. The prisoner denied the charge. Mrs. McGinty, attorney for the prosecutrix, made a strong plea for his client stating that the evidence in the case was sufficient to prove the guilt of the prisoner and asking that he be held to bail. After a short plea in behalf of the defendant by Attorney Soper, Judge O'Hara held Dronch in $500 bail for his appearance at court. Not being able to furnish bail he was taken to the county jail. He was released yesterday morning, one of the Polish residents of Greenwood furnishing the required amount.

Amy Bellus, of No. 4, called at the Squire's office yesterday and wanted to enter proceedings in a slander suit against Charles Gardner, of the same place, but was instructed to go to the probrotonary's office with his charge. Gardner is now in the county jail pending a hearing in the case of assault and battery with intent to injure.

After about fifty ballots had been taken Miss Kate Jeffers was appointed. The contract of supplying the various schools for the ensuing year was awarded to Reynolds Brothers, of Scranton.

AVOCA.

Patrick Farrell, aged 45 years, boarding at the house of Michael Calvert, was mangled and killed Tuesday night on the Jersey Central tracks a short distance above the depot. Farrell had been visiting in little York and was on his way home, walking along the railroad tracks, when the 9:30 passenger train struck him and dragged him nearly a hundred feet before the train passed over his body. His remains had to be collected in a basket. They were taken to his boarding house, where the funeral will be held at 8 o'clock this afternoon.

Specimen Populistic Platform.

Adapted by S. J. S. P. It demanded a national currency of $50 per capita, issued direct to the people in payment of the principal of the government debt and for public improvements; the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the rate of 16 to 1; the government savings banks; a graduated income and inheritance tax; government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; reclamation of unimproved lands held by corporations; election of president and vice president and senators by the people; the initiative and referendum; the enforcement of laws against trusts and unlawful combinations; and such new legislation as may be needed to break them up; rigid economy in public affairs and semi-annual payment of taxes; woman suffrage and the nationalization of the liquor traffic.

REGARDING AN OLD TIMER.

Henry J. Brennan, one of the old time politicians of the days when Lackawanna and Luzerne were united, was a visitor in our city yesterday. Time is dealing very gently with him, for he does not appear to be a whit older than in the days when he led the Carbonade delegation to the support of their favorite in county conventions gone by. Mr. Brennan has large interests in one of the new western territories, and his calculations and reckonings are not upset, is destined within the next decade to be one of the millionaires of the country. His old-time friends wish him every measure of success, for he is one of the kindly spirits to whom all good things of this life are deserved.

GOOD OUT OF EVIL. Women's Extravagance in Hard Times Puts Bread in the Mouths of the Poor.

Just so often as "hard times" recur, just so often comes an increase in the volume of the outcry against women's extravagance as exhibited in the indulgence in personal luxury, either in the way of clothing or surroundings. It has been said that the poorer shall have always with us, and the innate truth of the saying must be apparent, in spite of the theories of altruistic dreamers, as long as nature herself is partial in the distribution of health, strength and native ability. Nature having set us a bad example of inequality in vital matters, we cannot hope to ever establish perfect equality in superficial affairs. Not to wander from the point, the very poor who are embittered by the extravagance of the rich earn their daily bread by ministering to it.

If in a time of financial depression everybody refused to buy silk, furniture, carpets, china and the thousand and one unnecessary articles on which wealthy persons spend their money, an incalculable number of workers would be thrown out of employment and reduced to the condition of paupers. Every garment, carpet, piano, mirror and roll of wall paper represents a number of branches of labor upon each of which men and women are dependent for the means of living. If the demand for these articles stops, they will cease to be manufactured and will no longer afford occupation to the wage earner. The rich persons who are the real enemies of the poor are the miserly class who hoard their wealth instead of scattering it and do no more to encourage trade and keep money brisk circulation than does the poor artisan himself. This is a comparatively small proportion of the wealthy minority, however. Most persons who have money spend it freely in every direction.

A sketch is given of a rather odd bodied of two materials. The vest and sleeve puffs are of figured goods, while the full surplice collar and cuffs are of plain stuff. The end of the left side of the bodice is carried around the waist and buttoned in front to form a girder.

White Perch. Not every angler knows that one of the best ways to take white perch is with an artificial fly. It is not only a good way to make the catch, but it gives more sport than other ways, and you get bigger fish.

The first time I ever knew that white perch would take the artificial fly was three years ago, while my family were spending the summer at Ashbury Park," said an old fisherman recently.

"My boys had a boat on Great pond there and had caught some of each kind of fish there were in the pond. They had a few trout flies in their fishing kit, and one day, just for lack of something else to do, one of the boys put a gray hackle fly on his line and skittered it along. They were rowing slowly along the lakeside under the shade of the big trees that line the upper part. All of a sudden there was a sharp bite, and the boy pulled in the biggest white perch he had ever seen. The boys woke at once to the fact that a new field was open for sport. They continued the skittering and brought home the nicest mess of big perch that up to that time I had ever seen. Day after day they kept up the fishing until that fall and never failed to get a mess. They tried other flies, but the gray hackle proved the best."—New York Sun.

He Refuses to Move. Nobody likes to move, but there is one man in San Francisco that won't move. He lives in a tenement house down on Rausch street, and every few months his family move. They pack up all the household goods while he is at work and transfer them to some new abode. He has got used to it and is never surprised to go home and find his bed missing. He just buys some crackers and cheese, goes to sleep in one corner and waits for the folks to come back. They always come in a short time. The other members of the family cannot support themselves without the old man's help, and when they move they don't get it.—San Francisco Post.
