BATTING WAS WEAK

After the First Five Innings Providence Played with Scranton.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 5.—Providence defeated Scranton today in a closely played game. The visitors seemed likely to win out by more effective batting in the first five innings. Then the Grays found Quarles, and by bunched hits and fielding errors piled up more than Scranton lost chances to make runs by the weakness of Whitehead at the bat. Poor support handicapped Quarles. WHIRLS OF THE WHEEL.

The somewhat foolhardy individual who attempted to ride across the English channel on a water bicycle, and was only saved from drowning by a lucky accident, has not been disheartened by his failure, and is preparing to make a second effort of the same kind.

Monte Scott, the cyclist who recently broke the world's five mile record at Asbury Park, and also won about half of the bicycle races given by the Green Ridge wheelmen at their last meeting, passed through the city last evening on his way to Birmingham where he will race today.

Champion Arthur Zimmerman gives the following good advice: "If caught in the rain and soaked do not stop riding until you reach home or shelter, where you can take your clothes off. Colds are never caught by continuous movements in wet clothes, but only by sitting or standing around in them. Get them off, put the feet into hot water, if possible, rub the entire body, and feet especially, with whiskey. Then put on the dry clothes, or, if at a hotel, get a hot bath, and change until the clothes are thoroughly dry."

Many Scranton wheelmen will attend the races of the Binghamton Athletic club today. Among those who left for the Parlor City last evening on the 6 o'clock train were: Ernest Gilmore, Harry Newman and Frank Whittington of the Scranton Bicycle club; also Henry Hitchcock, Everett Howe, Del Foot, Charles Coleman, Charles Carr, Larry Rowleson and Richard Wambold, of the Green Ridge wheelmen. Gilmore and Coleman have entered several events and it is the general opinion of the wheelmen of this city that they will have something to show for their work when they return.

GENERAL SPORTING NOTES.

Three prominent business men of Sioux City, representing the Sioux City Athletic club, left for Chicago Tuesday night to endeavor to get Jackson to sign for the proposed fight here.

Johnny Gorman, the ex-champion 135-pound pugilist, and "Jack" Shelly have been matched to fight ten rounds. The contest will probably take place before the recently organized Atlantic Athletic club of Coney Island.

"Tommy" Ryan, the welter weight champion, and "Billy" Layton have signed articles of agreement to fight to a finish for a purse of $2,000 before the St. Joseph (Mo.) Athletic club. The fight is scheduled to take place on Sept. 15.

A cablegram from London to the Police Gazette says that a match has been made between Fritzenard and Birge to box ten rounds for $2,000 a side; also that "Pop" Moore has offered to match an unknown against Slavin for $2,000 a side.

Lieutenant J. L. Douvan, making a run on a bicycle from Cheyenne to Omaha to demonstrate to the war department the usefulness of the wheel, arrived at Sidney, Neb., yesterday, having made the 109 miles in nine hours and thirty-five minutes, with heavily equipped.

Billiardist Frank Ives will leave Carlsbad tomorrow and is expected to arrive in New York about Sept. 14. He writes to Maurice Daly that he will have something of interest to the American billiard public—meaning, probably that he will bring one of the French experts back with him.

E. N. Atherton, manager of "Tillie" Ashley, who claims to be the champion female sculler, said yesterday that he would accept the challenge of the St. Louis woman who wants to row. He received word from New Haven parties who want the race rowed there, saying they would offer a suitable prize. It is probable that the match will come off at St. Louis.

Four Big Successes. Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Balm, the great remedy for Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Buckle's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect cure for all the ailments mentioned, and so just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold by Matthews Bros' drug store.

FOR RHEUMATISM.

Old remedies for diseases were of a fearful and wonderful nature. It is to be hoped that the world's growing wiser in the regard to these still those who apparently have firm belief in strange specifics. The author of "Wild Life on a Tidal Water" became acquainted with the watermen of Norfolk, England, and gives the following specimen of their various remedies for rheumatism:

"The conversation turned on 'rheumatism,' the common ailment of watermen. 'Wal, I hev carried a tater in my pocket since Christmas, an' it fars ter me it dew no good. The tater water, but the rheumatism dewt go,' said Lavin, a swarthy, determined looking young shrimper.

"An' them magnetic stones fars ter me to be fooleries," continued a stout old cat-catcher.

"Them magnetic belts work better," broke in Horrage dogmatically, "but arter all, fars ter me no nothing like the fat of a good silver eel. Jest prick 'im an' let the fat run out after the fire, an' rub it inter the joints. I have cured myself like that, an' so hev my missis."

"Wal," rejoined the shrimper, "I hev found a little black turp, as much as you can hold on a shillie, twice a week, do good. Wenus turps rubbed on the joints do good, but carrying pigs' left fore trotters an' latters an' brimstone fars ter me sally."

"Wal, old matey, what dew you think about these cures," asked Lavin, turning to an old sailor who had served on the coast guard.

"What dew I think? Only wiper's oil will cure all yore arthriticities."

"Fars ter me hosses' oil cures quickest," interrupted a little gunner who had just come ashore.

"Hosses' oil is good stuff, ah! werry good stuff!" acquiesced each patient, gravely shaking his head.

Evolution and Morality. Evolutionary philosophers give excellent precepts for healthy and comfortable living. But these precepts apparently the man fulfill, and thus he fulfills all righteousness. They may talk to him, indeed, of a more perfect state of society to be some day brought about by ethical science, in which he would be out of place; but he, having only one life, takes the world as he finds it and makes the best of it for himself. Why should he sacrifice himself to the future of humanity? Evolution, being a quasi-mechanical and necessary process, will fulfill itself without effort or sacrifice on his part.

And the perfect state, after all, will be attained only to pass on to the following round of integration and disintegration, or whatever the wheel of existence may be called. Men of greedy and daring character who feel their force will not be hindered from using it for their aggrandizement by arguments of the tea table. They will grasp, by all the means in their power, the largest share attainable of such enjoyment as may fall to the lot of beings always on the verge of annihilation—a drawback to which, by the way, in pictures of a secularist millennium reference is seldom made.—Professor Smith in Forum.

The Dead. There is a subject in relation to the dead very vital to us all—that of burying their memories away in unbroken silence. We all know those who, when they lie themselves so closely in with their grief that no one dares speak of the dead in their presence, who rob themselves and think it is the grave that defrauds them. For the dead are indeed twice dead to us when their names are never on our lips, when nothing that they did or said in their lives is recalled, not with sentimental and false eulogy, but naturally, as we would speak had they but just gone somewhere for a little while. For we make the dead live again when speech of them and thought of them become part of our daily life.

The greatest grief of the bereaved touch may be no longer ours, and the voice may be still, but the abiding part remains. There is the love that we knew; the gentleness or grandeur of nature; the nobility, the beauty, the strength, the tenderness of the sister's smile; the generous, grateful action of the child; the undaunted candor of the child. The spirit of none of these can die. If we banish them, it is we who bereave ourselves, burying the immortal with the mortal remains of those whose presence gladdened and enriched our days.—Harper's Bazar.

A Good Way to Keep Flowers. There is nothing better than a common potato to keep flowers fresh. Cut one into halves and insert the stems into holes in them bored for the purpose. Then arrange them in a low basket or shallow dish and conceal the potato vegetable with leaves or moss. This is moist enough in an average sized potato to sustain a flower for two weeks. Don't keep the potato bouquet in too warm a room, however. This is also an excellent method for mailing a flower bud. After it is inserted in the potato cotton should be put about it for support and the whole placed in a box with a slit for air.—New York Times.

Education in Art. To know great works of painting or sculpture, and to distinguish them from the false and trivial, is almost the business of a lifetime. The mere light of nature carries us but a little way, and that often in a wrong direction. To see the plain man toiling through a picture gallery, catalogue in hand, and trying to admire what he would at least neglect if he dared to be honest, is no doubt enough to make a painter or a student of painting despair of any possible capacity to enjoy great pictures.—Gentlemen's Magazine.

A Valuable Pug Dog. A Chicago pug dog arouses the family every morning, fetching kindling to start the fire, rousing the servant girl by scratching on her door, and then goes out after the morning paper. This is better than a whole household of the "big" healthy, hard some girl, with no ambitions, intellectual, aesthetic or athletic; who is so greatly admired by people who have never tried to live with her. Those who have chosen the pug dog every time.—Boston Commonwealth.

An Instructive Toy. An instructive scientific toy sold in Paris consists of a map, with metallic pins inserted to mark the chief towns. Questions at the sides of the map are answered by the chief towns of the different departments and also have a metallic plug for each. A small electric bell and a dry pile are provided. The child puts one end to the conducting wire over any question plug and moves the other end over the town plugs until the bell rings, when the town is correctly indicated.—Boston Transcript.

In the English army there are at present nearly two hundred officers of the highest rank who are unemployed. One-half are colonels and the remainder lieutenants colonels.
