TENT VET OF SMALL

Evangelist Schiverea's Audiences Are Still on the Increase.

TRIBUNE IS WARMLY THANKED

Three Thousand Persons Assembled Last Night—Hundreds Stand Up to Attest Their New Faith—Interesting Object Lesson to Children—Twenty-two Hundred Women Listen to the Evangelist—Great Meeting at Dickson's Works.

Mr. Schiverea and his musical colleagues have addressed an aggregate of over 11,000 persons during the past two days and last night witnessed the greatest gathering of the entire mission.

During his address to the vast multitude last night the eloquent evangelist made pungent remarks as to the paucity of attention paid by city newspapers to the great work of salvation of souls represented by the mission. After a humorous remark that some of the press were too busy occupied with Jim Corbett and Fitzsimmons on their pugilistic work, he delivered a eulogium upon THE TRIBUNE, which paper, he declared, had been faithful from the commencement in supporting the mission in its splendid and successful efforts.

Commencing on Saturday at noon, the evangelist addressed five hundred men at the Dickson Manufacturing works, Penn avenue. The scene made a vivid impression on all present. Usually the scene of activity and bustle a holy silence seemed to pervade the vast building, while the eloquent revivalist spoke to an audience of workmen dressed in their working clothes and with the sweat upon their brow, just after ceasing their daily toil.

THE AFTERNOON MEETING

In the afternoon about 1,200 mothers and children assembled in the gospel tent when the evangelist demonstrated his capability of opening the minds of little children. He explained his various lessons by simple charts and described how the heart grew and was controlled by sin at various ages and reversed the picture by showing what Christ had done for children, showing the cross and his glory and on the top line appeared heaven. Then showing another chart with degrees of sin in black, he illustrated how the blood of Jesus wiped out all sin at the same time wiping out the black and leaving a pure white on the chart. Many have expressed the wish for repetition of the address.

Saturday night was a climax in the meetings for men and proved to be the most successful in apparent results. After a powerful exhortation brimming with telling anecdotes he made a proposition which seemed to penetrate every heart present, and at the conclusion of the meeting Schiverea had 300 men on his trail to the Y. M. C. A. rooms, where they boldly and fearlessly acknowledged Christ.

Yesterday four meetings were addressed to the revivalists. The first meeting at the Second Presbyterian church in the morning and address to the Sunday scholars in the afternoon. In the afternoon meeting at the tent for women, ladies of every age and position mingled together. Wealthy as represented by lines of carriages on Linden street and the array of well worn shawls spoke of the opposite element. Two thousand two hundred women were counted and hundreds were turned away. Again Schiverea made a great impression upon the vast audience and the attention of his women hearers was remarkable.

LAST NIGHT'S GREAT MEETING.

Last night's meeting, however, proved to be the greatest of all the meetings. Fully 500 people edged around the tent to hear the words of the speaker and double that number turned disconsolately away. The subject, "What Shall I Do with Jesus?" was treated with exquisite skill. The logic was crushing and as applied to those present it was clearly demonstrated by the hundreds who stood up at the close of the address and declared their allegiance to Christianity.

The theme of the address was the free will of man to declare for Christ, and he illustrated the trifling objections which men regarded as an obstacle to their salvation, and as an example he declared that when he was converted he wrote his sweetheart of his change of mind and hoped she would be of the same mind, but she wrote him her refusal, whereupon the evangelist turned to his wife, who was seated on the platform, and said, "God sent me a new one, fresh from the country." The quaint application of the illustration provoked great mirth.

The increasing attendance is more important when it is considered that all church going members are urged to attend their own churches, and the ordinary church attendance does not appear to be diminished, hence the important truth that the revival reaches the masses who hitherto did not regularly attend Christian worship.

At the Theaters.

A somewhat lurid melodrama called "Wife for Wife" was presented at the Academy of Music Saturday night. It is a son of a gun melodrama, but that does not prevent the usual number of picturesque, scowling villains from creating the usual havoc with loving hearts. Then there was the usual specialties. True, they were somewhat weak, but still there they were to round the production out into a perfect play of its kind, for no melodrama would be complete without specialties. William Nichols, J. B. Brown, Charles E. Bowen and Virginia Bray were competent actors, but the remainder of the company was simply filling.

"The Amazons," which proved such a decided success at the Lyceum theater, New York, last spring will be seen at the Academy of Music tonight. It is one of Finno's best efforts. Saturday night the piece was seen in Wilkes-Barre and of it Ed. Niven, the well known dramatic critic of that city, says: "It is safe to say that the critics were surprised at the exalted character of the entertainment. It is filled with romantic interest from beginning to the end and there is not a dull line or situation anywhere. The 'Tangle,' otherwise known as the name given to the garden of the Amazons, is a superb piece of scenic art. Miss Johnstone Bennett gave a fine presentation of Lady Thomsina, otherwise known as Tommy, while Isabelle Irving and Elaine Elson met the highest expectations. The play lacks in none of the essential belonging to a high class production, its incidents being lively, but always refined and sparkling. It held the audience with fervor, and when the curtains went down on the final act, the expressions of approbation that arose on all sides were sincere and enthusiastic."

C. H. Mead, lecturer, whose style is unique and original, will speak on the reform subject, "What and Which," in connection with the Silver Lake Quartette

THE TRIBUNE will soon publish a carefully compiled and classified list of the leading wholesale, banking, manufacturing and professional interests of Scranton and vicinity. The edition will be bound in book form, beautifully illustrated with photographs views of our public buildings, business blocks, streets, etc., together with portraits of leading citizens. No similar work has ever given an equal representation of Scranton's many industries. It will be an invaluable exposition of our business resources. Sent to persons outside the city, copies of this handsome work will attract new comers and be an unequalled advertisement of the city. The circulation is on a plan that cannot fail of good results to those concerned as well as the city at large. Representatives of THE TRIBUNE will call upon those whose NAMES are desired in this edition and explain its nature more fully. Those desiring views of their residences in this edition will please have notice at the office.
