DEMOCRATS DON'T LIKE IT.

President Cleveland is largely a law to himself on politics, but looking to the largest measure of usefulness he could attain, which should be paramount with him, he has seriously erred in refusing to clear himself in favor of the party organization of the state.

By the United Press. New York, Oct. 31. Henry Frederick Schatzel lives in very humble surroundings above his little bake-shop in Brooklyn. Yet he may become the wealthiest man in the whole city. He is about to bring suit for property in Texas amounting to nearly 20 square miles of its territory, and worth at least $25,000,000. The story of his claim is full of romance, mystery and crime. Mr. Schatzel's uncle, John Peter Schatzel, played an important part in the early history of Texas. He fought as a private under Napoleon, was wounded at Austerlitz, became a paymaster, and after the disastrous Russian campaign of 1814 sailed from Antwerp to New Orleans. Here he went into business, and at the end of 11 years sold out his interest for $40,000. Then he joined Sam Houston in the revolt of Texas against Mexico, and was United States consul at Matamoros until the annexation of the Lone Star state in 1845. He invested largely in real estate, buying up almost the entire counties of Nueces, Cameron, Duval and Coryell. In 1847 he announced his intention of returning to France, and drew out $2,000,000 in gold from the New Orleans bank. Suspected He Was Poisoned. Before he could start he died suddenly and mysteriously. It was suspected that he had been poisoned. He had no relative save a brother living on the Rhine in the town of Kreutznach, knowing nothing of John Peter's fate or the fortune that awaited himself. Ten years passed. Then, according to the laws, the unclaimed estate was placed in the hands of administrators. From time to time they have sold portions of the property on quit claim deeds. Thus a large part of the estate has passed into the hands of strangers. The town of Corpus Christi and many smaller settlements have been built upon it. But the title of the purchasers is invalid as against the heirs, for the statute of limitation does not debar them if they are abroad or if no efforts are made to find them. Twenty years ago Henry Schatzel came to this county and finally settled in Brooklyn. Hearing accidentally of the fortune left by his uncle, he went out to Texas and employed lawyers to prosecute his claim. As almost all the prominent people in the counties named are interested he made no progress. He says his lawyers were brought off. Now he has placed the matter in the hands of a lawyer, J. Walsh, of Nassau street, in this city. Mr. Walsh will soon start for Corpus Christi. He is sanguine of success.

May have noticed a depreciation in trade during the past two months. If they have, we are greatly to blame. The way those Clocks and 100-piece Dinner Sets have been leaving our establishment you would think people were getting them for nothing. So they are. And in conjunction with the free gift of a Clock we give the best and greatest value for $50.00. Likewise with our Dinner Sets with $75 worth of goods of equal worth. We're busy all over the store in consequence. October proves to be the banner month in our career. "Easy Payments" have some claims on the improvement. Our object is to furnish at as low figures as possible.
