The attention of Republicans should be called to the inconsistency of the men who, only a little while ago professing to be Republicans to the backbone, are, since their defeat in convention, working night and day to stab the Republican ticket in the back. These malcontents claim they were knocked out by "slated" candidates; if they had only been "slated," it would presumably have been all right.

Speak Out, Like a Man!
What does Michael T. Burke intend to say, now, about the free text-book bill? Is he willing to stand out as a self-confessed falsifier concerning his vote on that salutary and beneficial bill—as a man who deliberately tried to deceive a reputable committee of citizens into signing their names to a false statement of facts? Or will he try some new squirm and croak his supple back into a new posture of public deceit?

We have no quarrel with Mr. Burke which is not of his own making. We hear him, in a personal sense, not the slightest bit. He may possibly be elected, in spite of his record. But he certainly owes it to his reputation as a man, and to the friendship of those who yet honor him with their confidence, to make some explanation of his trickery in this campaign—either to brazen it out, with a new misstatement or else to frankly confess his wrongdoing and sue for forgiveness.

This is the time for Burke to speak. His voracity has been impugned; and his own witnesses have gone squarely against him. The occasion is one which calls for decisive action. Further silence will mean cringing confession; further evasion will simply tighten the coils of his duplicity around his own head. Come, now, Michael T. Burke, speak out, like a man.

Did you lie or did you not lie when you testified that you voted for the free text-book bill on its final passage (March 25, 1893) in the house?
It is every man for himself among the defeated Democracy; and perdition seize the hindmost.

If Mr. Slingerly desires to be thoroughly fair in this campaign he should, during tonight's joint debate at Norristown, explicitly repudiate and discontinue the effort of Lawyer O'Connor, of Johnstown, to slander General Hastings. Let this be a clean state campaign, even though fifth seems to be the doom of the Democracy of Lackawanna.

The "last card" will have to be quick about it or it will get lost in the shuffle.
Where Are His Principles?
The following is the full text of the circular which is being distributed in the Fourth legislative district by the Liquor Dealers' association of Carbonate, over the signature of John P. McDonald, of Carbonate, its secretary:
"After due and careful consideration of both candidates for the office of representative for this district, it has been decided to be for the support of the liquor dealers to support the candidacy of Michael T. Burke, of Carbonate, because he is an advocate of low license, and supported it at the last session of the legislature. It is our interests to see that he receives the support of every person engaged in the liquor business in this district, regardless of whichever party we may have been in the habit of voting with. We want the license reduced. Mr. Burke is for low license. We know it because he has advocated it in his public speeches, and we hereby ask you to do all you can for his election. When in the interest of low license, I visited the state capitol during the last session of the legislature as the representative of the Liquor Dealers' association of this city. I found Representative Burke to have great influence there on that question, and if we support and elect him by our influence, we know he can be relied upon to help reduce the high license we now have to pay. Every man in the business knows the license is too high. We want it reduced. Mr. Burke voted to reduce it at the last session, and will again. This circular is sent to you confidentially, and you are confidentially and earnestly requested to do all you can for the election of Michael T. Burke to be our next representative. By doing so you will be supporting your own interests and the interests of all who are engaged in the liquor business."

This is a peculiar endorsement to come to a man who has for more than twenty years posed as the special champion of temperance reform in the upper end of Lackawanna county; but it is of a piece with his double dealing on the Farr free text book bill, the evidence of which is yet ringing in his constituents' ears. We do not wonder that the liquor dealers of Carbonate should try to re-elect Burke, seeing that he is not burdened with scruples; we are merely staggered at the effrontery of a man who can, without blushing, play such desperate tricks as these with his own conscience.

The offers to trade three votes to one for Smith still continue; but the Republicans of Lackawanna county fortunately are not in a trading mood.
The conduct of Hon. Morgan B. Williams, of Luzerne, is in striking contrast with that of the defeated Republican nominee for congress in the Eleventh district. Mr. Williams is not nursing a sore toe, nor asking loyal Republicans to poultice it with a "bolt."
It is something, Brother Hines, to have a $100,000 character to lose.

Elect Vaughan Senator.
The Republican senatorial candidate from this district, James C. Vaughan, whose portrait and biography appear on another page, has made, from the beginning of this canvass, a clean-cut, straightforward fight. Representing as he does a class of young men who have, from humble origin, made the best of their legitimate opportunities, he appeals with especial earnestness to those who by their votes are willing to encourage merit and quiet ambition. Mr. Vaughan is not ostentatious, either in politics or in other relations. He has not deemed it necessary to his own success to abuse his opponent or to quarrel with those who may have differed from him in their political, religious or social opinions. He has simply appealed to the voters of this senatorial district to consult their best interests by the election of a Republican senator, who shall be in harmony and in close affiliation with the incoming administration of Governor Hastings; and along this common sense line he ought to win.

The present senator, Mr. McDonald, was chosen under particularly auspicious circumstances—for him. He had the unexpected, indeed the almost unprecedented, assistance of a Democratic chief executive at his back; an executive who had good reason to be grateful to Scranton, the city in which he was nominated, and to Lackawanna county, the county which supplied one-eighth of his total plurality. Entering the senate almost at the same moment that Governor Pattison entered the gubernatorial mansion at Harrisburg, Senator McDonald, we repeat, had exceptional facilities to demonstrate the existence within himself of any undeveloped resources in the line of aggressive statesmanship; but the four years of his term have rolled around without, as yet, bringing to light any striking achievements which should influence a Republican to desert his party's nominee and to vote for Senator McDonald's return.

Upon the contrary, the election of General Hastings governor will take away from the present member his one means of political support, and, should he be returned, leave him adrift without chart or compass in a hopeless minority. The only service which he could perform for his own party would be to vote against a first-class Republican for United States senator in 1897; and the only service he could render his Republican constituents would be to see that the pop-gun bills of the Democratic minority might occasion more noise than harm, and this service would be almost unnecessary in a Republican senate. Looked at from any rational standpoint, Mr. McDonald's usefulness to this district seems to have run its course; whereas not to elect his Republican competitor, James C. Vaughan, would be simply to throw the district's influence away, without getting an iota of benefit in return.

It seems to us, therefore, that every Republican is in honor bound to vote for Mr. Vaughan; and the same reason ought to win for him. In addition, the votes of many Democrats, who put legislative usefulness above mere partisan sentiment.

If Representative M. T. Burke will make an affidavit that he voted for the Farr free-text book bill on the occasion of its final passage through the house, March 25, 1893, we will agree to supply a fair legal test of this question by having him arrested for perjury. This would lead to an authoritative answer of the question, "Who is the liar?"

The city superintendent of schools is a public official. He should not be possessed of the idea that he is under no reasonable obligations to impart information concerning the schools to the public which by taxation supports those schools.
No, indeed, neighbor Slimes, The Tribune is not trying to "run you out of town." At your present gait you will run yourself out, in sheer momentum of unappreciated mud-throwing.

President Judge Archbald.
Judge Archbald was the unanimous choice of the Republican county convention. His nomination came unopposed and his course throughout the campaign has been conservative and dignified. He is a man of conceded ability and long experience, and is qualified to preside over the courts with fairness and intelligence. It is men of Judge Archbald's character who elevate the judiciary of the state, lie unassuming in manner and courteous to the most humble petitioner, this popular jurist uniformly retains his dignified bearing and unflinching demeanor, often under trying circumstances, giving abundant evidence of his fitness for the bench.

John P. Quinnan, it is true, was unseated from his legislative position. After a careful inquiry into the returns, a special house committee decided that the seat belonged by right to Mr. Okell. But it is not true that Mr. Quinnan was cheated out of his pay or that he has any reason whatever to complain. He was given his full salary of $1,500 for the entire term; he was paid another $1,000 for personal expenses and counsel fees, and he was awarded $250 additional for miscellaneous items and perquisites. It therefore scarcely becomes friends of Mr. Quinnan to weep and wail over his sad fate with a view to creating sympathy for him.

We do not quarrel with the Liquor Dealers' association for urging its members to vote and work for the re-election of M. T. Burke. That is a part of their business, no doubt. What we are interested in is whether this M. T. Burke is the same M. T. Burke who has for the past twenty years or more palmed himself off as an uncompromising friend of temperance.

A Democratic senator from this district at Harrisburg for the next four years would be like a fifth wheel to a wagon. The people will consult their own best interests and elect James C. Vaughan.
A vote for R. W. Archbald is a vote to re-elect an honest, conscientious, capable jurist to a position from which his Democratic opponent's insatiable personal ambition would ruthlessly pull him down.

On Wednesday morning it will be in order for the Republican victors to extend a vote of thanks to the lessees of the Slimes smut shop for its able efforts in defeating the Democratic ticket.
The Lebanon Report, one of the best daily papers in the state, has begun the fifth year of its prosperous existence with a smile and a wink that show it is feeling first rate.

A last desperate stand has been made by the defeated Democracy in favor of Smith, but Republicans are in no mood to break ranks when victory is certain all along the line.
Every Republican candidate will win next Tuesday, from congressman to jury commissioner, and the average plurality will be expressed in not less than four figures.

A vote for Joseph A. Scranton is a vote for honest protection to honest American industries. It is a safe vote against free trade panics and free trade times.
Judge Archbald has proved himself too able and too clean a jurist to be sacrificed to the personal ambitions of a comparative newcomer to our county.

MR. WILSON'S LONDON SPEECH
From the Philadelphia Press.
The speech of Hon. William L. Wilson at the banquet given in his honor by the London chamber of commerce has naturally excited universal interest and been the theme of universal comment. Mr. Wilson spoke with careful preparation. That he honestly meant to make a "plain statement" is further demonstrated by the following words which, while only the simple truth, constitute a confession as astonishing as it is candid:
"THE TARIFF REFORMERS HAVE BEEN TEARING DOWN THE PENS WHICH THE PROTECTIONISTS HAD PUT UP TO KEEP GREAT BRITAIN OUT OF AMERICA.
True, indeed—tearing down the protection fences in order to let the British manufacturers take possession of the American market. The whole intent and result honestly admitted to the British audience. But let us be altogether just to Mr. Wilson. In his extraordinary confession he added the following statement as an explanation:
But we have done so in order to compete with you and other nations.
That is, we have torn down our protective fences and invited our American market to the British in the hope of competing with them in foreign countries! Like the silly dog of the fable, in the distance of the meat for the shadow in the water, we have dropped our control of the greatest and best of all markets in the hope of catching the shadow of a foreign trade which, if we had all there is in all the world, would be less than one-twentieth as much! And what is no less remarkable, Mr. Wilson proposes to win that foreign trade by lessening the one-effective means of securing it in over-throwing and abrogating all reciprocity! Such is Democratic statesmanship.

HAD A FAIR CHANCE.
From the Commercial Advertiser.
The Democratic party, with an overwhelming majority of representative senators and a small majority in the senate, aided by the Populists, has had ample opportunity to keep faith with the people. It shouted itself hoarse to turn out the Republican "rascals" and give the "honest" Democrats a chance. They have had their chance, but it availed them nothing. Instead of stepping boldly forward to maintain their pledges and retain the confidence that was placed in them by the people, they preferred rather to be true to the doctrines of Democratic history—falsus in omnia, falsus in omnibus.
The importance of retaining every vestige of Democratic power is the paramount question of the day. It involves not merely a local or a state issue, but an international issue. The advancement and prosperity of the United States are at stake. The overthrow of the Republican institutions is involved. The honor and integrity of the American people are concerned in this great issue of a Republican or a Democratic administration, because an endorsement of the latter will imply a tacit agreement on the part of the people to the continuance of a national policy of deception and broken promises, making the people equally guilty with those who violated their pledges in executing a policy that even their own Democratic president was constrained to resent as "perfidy and dishonor."

THE LAW OF LIBEL.
Judge Livingston, of Lancaster.
The law of libel differs in its application to private individuals as from those who occupy public stations, such as legislators, officers or candidates for public office. The official conduct of men in public life and the fitness and claims for consideration of candidates for official station are fair subjects for review, and honest criticism in the public prints, and such honest criticism, although it be unfriendly and severe, can give no occasion for suggestion that it proceeds from unworthy motives. Whoever fills a public position, renders himself a national and discussion and must accept an attack as a necessary though unpleasant appendage of the office he holds. No criticism of a person holding office is libelous unless it is malicious; but at the same time falsehoods are not privileged, although the matter contained in a newspaper or otherwise is proper for publication. It loses its character of libel when it contains untruths, or if it falsely mentions names and deals with rumors simply.
The liberty of the press consists in publishing truth from good motives and for justifiable ends. Though it reflects on governments or magistrates,

HE NEVER SAID IT.
From the Scranton Truth.
We have been asked what we think of the statement that Frank H. Clemons, candidate for sheriff, said "a dollar a day was enough for a workman." Our opinion of it is that it is a campaign lie, and that Mr. Clemons never said it. It will be remembered that he was accused of making this statement while serving as a member of the select council. The present city clerk, Mr. M. T. Lavell, who was clerk of the select council, and is thoroughly familiar with the utterances of Mr. Clemons, declares that he never heard him make use of such words, and never heard him accused of it until after he became a candidate for sheriff. Mr. Clemons is not that kind of a man, and it is simply shameful to attribute such statements to him for the purpose of gaining a party advantage in a political campaign. So far as the Truth is concerned it does not believe in making accusations against men in a political campaign. It would not make at any other time, and if ever Mr. Clemons had uttered the words attributed to him he would most assuredly hear from this journal without delay, and without waiting until he became a candidate for office. But we feel confident that he never said it.

Watch the Legislature.
From the Philadelphia Times.
The state senators to be elected this year will also be called upon to perform a very important function in the legislature which will follow the next one. This will be to take part in the election of a United States senator in 1897. Under the first administration of President Cleveland the nation was saved the terrible business troubles it has experienced under the present one because of the fact that the United States senate was Republican and stood as an effective block in the way of all inflated tariff legislation. The importance of the Republican party regarding and retaining control of that body cannot be overestimated. If, for any untoward cause, the next president should be a Democrat, the Republican control of the national senate would be a bulwark against further ruinous tariff legislation. It is, therefore, vitally important that as many Republican members of the legislature, both senators and representatives, be elected next Tuesday as possible.

The Jermyn "Revolt."
From the Carbonate Leader.
The spectacle of a man like "Captain" Morris, of this city, who is a rock-ribbed Democrat from away back, advising Republican voters of Jermyn to desert their party, must amaze the gods. "The captain" will not, Tuesday, deposit a ballot for the straight Democratic ticket as he has done many times before, and he is a zealous enough partisan to be able to find out what your enemy wants you to do and then—don't do it; and acting upon the words of political antagonists like Morris, and disunited office-seekers like House and Fellows with a good many grains of salt, and vote as their political convictions dictate.
