ROYALTY AT CHRISMASTIDE

Excitement Across the Pond in a State of Relaxation—Morbid Minds Affected by Accounts of Murders—An Old Opera in a New Dress.

Special Correspondence of The Tribune.

London, Dec. 14.—The cowardly murderer Read, whose trial excited extraordinary interest, has been hung at last, thank goodness, and we have just ascertained the sickening details of "Read in jail," "Read's letters" and "Read's this and that." The evening papers have almost made a hero of the brute and "Read" has stared us in the face from every newspaper poster in the city. Even today when the holden wretches better part is taking knowledge of eternity, we are confronted with "Read's will!" But a murderer of a different nature now attracts attention. A woman, it will be remembered, was found dead outside an artist's house in the Holland park road, a quiet and beautiful vicinity where painters congregate. Some days after the tragedy a foreign artist came forward and stated that he witnessed the crime. He saw the man and woman in violent altercation and fearing violence hid not twelve yards away, when the man pressed his knife into the woman's stomach and struck her in the throat; he called out and the assassin made off and the artist started in pursuit, but eventually lost sight of the man. The police lost no time and Londoners were surprised to learn that a young Irishman, the name of whom is not given, had been arrested at Armagh, in Ireland. There seems little doubt that the unfortunate young man committed the outrage, and it is stated that he is not responsible for his actions. His father is a much respected justice of the peace in Ireland, his mother is the daughter of the Earl of Clonmell, and he has four brothers and four sisters. The Read case appears to have excited a morbid influence over him, and on the evening in question he carried a cherry wood walking stick, which he left behind in the woman's house in Kensington, and which has since been identified. It appears that on leaving London he borrowed some money from an old school-fellow and made his way to the house of his uncle, Colonel Sanderson, the well known and vigorous Irish Conservative. The man is evidently mad and altogether it is a painful affair. The residents of Kensington are very perturbed with this one thing and another, for there is a small individual believed to be a man in woman's dress and whose identity cannot be established, going about and asking women the direction to a certain place and then stabbing them in the face with a small knife. One woman has already lost an eye and another has an ugly cut on the cheek.

The Prince of Wales and his son, the Duke of York, have returned to town and received a most hearty welcome. They are looking well, and on the evening of their arrival they went on a visit to the Queen at Windsor and dined there. An interesting feature of their visit is the fact that within a castle walls there were four generations of the British royal family in direct line to the throne, namely: Ma. Teddy, of Wales; George, of York; and baby Edward. This, I believe, an unique record, and one not at all likely to be smashed for some time.

Most of the "big-pots" of society will either be away in lands afar or in their country houses this Xmas time, in fact, "society" is yawning over the not over brilliant promise of the New Year season. The absence of the Princess of Wales has a lot to do with this apathy, and people are commencing to learn that Princess May is a family bird, a bird that loves her nest, i. e.—home. She is not fond of publicity, but is fond of George and her baby. This infant is already attracting attention and pictures of his "first carriage" have appeared in several papers. It does not differ from most other "first carriages" inasmuch that it is not drawn by geese or white donkeys; it's just one of those affairs that suburban japs wheel the kids around in of a Sunday whilst ma makes the pudding, only in this instance it is not believed that Daddy will do any wheeling.

A strange "copyright" performance took place on Dec. 3. The name of the piece is the "Maid" and it is by Hall Caine, the author of the "Martyr." Mr. Hall Caine himself and Zangwill took parts, as did Mr. Heinemann, the publisher, and a capable dramatic critic. The first act went all right and then Zangwill acted all the parts for the rest of the performance. The whole affair was a regular farce and shows up the absurd laws of dramatic copyright. Still the one or two listeners saw and heard enough to tell us that we have here a powerful and dramatic play, which should still further enhance Mr. Caine's reputation.

The production of "The Contrabandista, or the Law of the Ladrone" on Monday next attracts unique interest owing to its having appeared in abbreviated form no less than twenty-seven years ago! It was at that time a short comic opera, in which an English tourist fell in with a band of Spanish brigands and was compelled by an ancient law to become chieftain of these lawless folk and also to marry his predecessor's widow. Burnand has polished up his tale and jokers and Sullivan has added considerably

STAB IN HIS HEART.

The Body of an Italian Laborer is Found in the Canal. By the United Press.

Trenton, Dec. 25.—Ferdinando Conlo, an Italian railroad laborer who lived in Fallsington, Pa., disappeared mysteriously on Nov. 10. Yesterday his body was found in the Delaware division canal for the winter and his body was found at the bottom in the borough of Morrisville, about three miles from Fallsington. There was a stab wound in his heart and his neck was dislocated. Bruises on his head and body were also found, but they, it is thought, had been inflicted by passing boats and other objects in the water. Condo spent the night before his disappearance drinking with an Italian friend named Frank Bogarro, and the latter is now being searched for in Trenton by the local police. Marks that are taken for blood stains were found in one of Bogarro's rooms. Frank Morelli, who was last seen with the dead man, is under arrest as a witness.

LAMBERT TO HANG.

Efforts in Behalf of the Colored Murderer in Va. By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 25.—Chief Justice Heasley has been applied to for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Theodore Lambert, the colored murderer, who is under sentence of death in Camden. Counselor Semple made the application urging the same grounds upon which he based the grant before Justice Garrison last Saturday, and the Chief Justice declined to grant the writ for reasons already advanced by Judge Garrison.

There's Ice at Troy.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Navigation is closed in the Hudson in this section. The river above the state dam is frozen over, ice is moving slowly in front of Troy.

INDUSTRIAL TOPICS.

President Cleveland is said to have given a personal friend assurance within a few days that as soon as the treasury gold receipts should be sufficient to cause special uneasiness among business men another issue of bonds will be made.

The Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal company has notified miners informing that 1,500 strippers miners that all work of this kind would be suspended for the winter. The miners have worked but two good months during the past season, and the suspension at this time will greatly distress the men.

Excitement continues in Monroe county over the find of coal. The place where the coal was discovered is on the farm of Daniel Kline, in Ross township, about a mile and a half from Baylorsburg. The shaft has been sunk to a depth of over 400 feet and is now being worked. It is estimated that the coal bed is about 100 feet thick and is of a high quality. The coal is being worked by a small party of men, and it is expected that the output will be considerable.

Some enthusiastic idiots, with a capital "I," have got up a "navy" fund, the object being to buy ships of war for the realm. Bosh! We pay our rates and expect the government to provide the same as required. It is necessary for England to maintain her prestige at sea, and England must pay for it, but a private fund is an insult to the nation. As regards the weather, it is well, it's "raining in London!"

TO RECOVER A BEQUEST.

Heirs of Abigail Moore Seek to Recover Money from Pennington Academy. By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 25.—A suit was begun in the court of chancery today to recover $5,000 and interest given to the "Pennington Academy" by Abigail Moore in 1832. The academy was abandoned shortly after the bequest was made and now the relatives of Abigail Moore are seeking to recover the money. The plaintiffs are William A. Green, of Trenton; Sarah Jeffries, of Brooklyn; Phoebe Sneed, of Virginia City; John Green, of Kansas City; Lewis Green, of Australia, and others, and the defendant is the Pennington Academy. The suit is based on the fact that the academy was established for the benefit of the poor of Trenton, and that the money was given to it for that purpose. The academy was abandoned in 1832, and the money was then distributed to the poor. The plaintiffs claim that the money was not distributed to the poor, but was used for other purposes. The suit is expected to be tried in the near future.

HAMBURG SUBMERGED.

Great Damage to Surrounding Country from Destruction of a Dyke. By the United Press.

Berlin, Dec. 25.—During the prevalence of the gale in Germany the dyke at Hamburg broke and a large area of land was submerged. Many streets in Geestemünde and Altona were inundated, and in Hamburg, the Hamburger Hof, on the Alster-Bassin, and the quays surrounding that sheet of water were greatly damaged. The water is now being pumped out by fire engines. The damage to the docks will, it is estimated, reach at least 2,000,000 marks.

LAUGHED HIMSELF TO DEATH.

Convinced by a Friend's Joke, He Burst a Blood Vessel. By the United Press.

Indianapolis, Dec. 25.—Franz Siegler, a hardware merchant, of Hirschyze, became convulsed with laughter last night over a joke of a friend, and could not be quieted until he had burst a blood vessel. Death was almost instantaneous. Siegler was an old bachelor of a jovial disposition, and was noted for miles around for his laughter.

CAUTION

TO OUR PATRONS: Washburn-Crosby Co. wish to assure their many patrons that they will this year hold to their usual custom of milling STRICTLY OLD WHEAT until the new crop is fully cured. New wheat is now upon the market, and owing to the excessively dry weather many millers are of the opinion that it is already cured, and in proper condition for milling. Washburn-Crosby Co. will take no risks, and will allow the new wheat fully three months to mature before grinding. This careful attention to every detail of milling has placed Washburn-Crosby Co.'s flour far above other brands.
