FAST MAIL TRAIN WRECKED

Breaking of an Axle in Car of an East Bound Train the Cause.

TWO KILLED AND NINE INJURED

Engineer and Fireman Met with a Horrible Death—The Engine of the Mail Train Topped Over into the Canal.

Engineer and Fireman Met with a Horrible Death—The Engine of the Mail Train Topped Over into the Canal.

Newport, Pa., Oct. 24.—The breaking of an axle of a car of an east bound freight train on the Pennsylvania railroad at Trimmer's Rock, about two miles east of here, shortly after 2 o'clock this morning, threw several cars of the freight directly across the passenger track and wrecked the west bound mail train from Philadelphia for Pittsburgh that was speeding by at the time, causing the death of two men and the injury of nine others.

Engineer and Fireman Met with a Horrible Death—The Engine of the Mail Train Topped Over into the Canal.

The mail train wrecked off Philadelphia at 10:35 p. m. last night. Beside the passenger, sleeping and day coaches, there were six mail cars directly behind the engine. The train had already entered the block and was going at a high rate of speed, when the axle of a car on an east bound freight broke and threw several cars on the track directly in front of the rapidly approaching mail. Engineer Wolfkill had hardly time to reverse his lever, when his engine struck the freight cars and turning completely around, toppled over a high embankment into the canal.

The wrecking crew at once started to clear the track and within a few hours trains were again running as usual past the scene of the wreck. Down in the canal the bodies of Engineer Wolfkill and Fireman Haines were buried beneath the weight of the massive engine. The wrecking crew worked unceasingly and finally came upon the bodies of Wolfkill. The unfortunate engineer was found standing erect under the tender of the engine.

The body was only slightly bruised, but the man had evidently drowned like a rat in a trap. Wolfkill was killed this evening that the body of Fireman Haines was found. He had evidently jumped when the wreck came and had been caught beneath one of the mail cars, for he was found under a truck of one of the cars. One leg was cut off and the body was otherwise badly mutilated. Both men were married and leave a widow and two children each. Wolfkill was one of the oldest engineers in the employ of the railroad, while Haines was but 27 years of age.

With the exception of a few sacks directed to Louisville, St. Louis, Oregon and one or two other points, the mail in the wrecked cars were destroyed. The sacks were in the engine of the car that fell into the canal, but the letters in them are badly damaged from water.

Wreck on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. Hyde Park, Mass., Oct. 24.—A tail end collision today which two persons were fatally hurt, three or four seriously injured, and some twenty others more or less bruised, occurred directly in front of the Hyde Park station of the Providence division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad about 5:30 p. m. today. The passenger train which leaves Sharon for Boston at 5:18 was a trifle late and was standing at the Hyde Park station, taking on and discharging passengers, being directly on the time of the passenger train which left Providence for Boston at 4:15. The latter train came steaming down the track and crashed into the stationary train. The engine of the Providence train was forced through nearly half the length of the rear car, which was well filled with passengers and practically all the injured were occupants of that car. Two persons, one a brakeman on the Sharon train, the other a woman, were found to be probably fatally hurt, being terribly injured about the head and body. Their names are at present unknown. The passengers are mostly men and their injuries for the most part were in the nature of contusions or bruises.

Engineer and Fireman Met with a Horrible Death—The Engine of the Mail Train Topped Over into the Canal.

The signals are said to have been set against the Providence train, but as the track on this section of the road is perfectly straight for a distance of nearly seven miles, it is difficult to understand with the information already at hand, why the engineer of the latter could not have seen the train standing at the station in time to have prevented the collision.

Engineer and Fireman Met with a Horrible Death—The Engine of the Mail Train Topped Over into the Canal.

It is believed that the recent change in running trains on the right track instead of on the left, may have had something to do with the accident.

FAST TRAINS CRASH.

Fugitive Freight Cars Telescoped by a Passenger Train. Vincennes, Ind., Oct. 24.—A through freight on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern parted last night at Fritchton. A passenger train close behind ran into the rear of the freight, wrecking the passenger engine and telescoping the coaches.
