An Undertaker's Scheme to Raise I Clams and Lobsters in Crystal Lake. A Lausboro Man Sends Warning by the Chicken .- Susquehanna Boarders Are Awakened by a Tame Crow. Railroad and Other Personals.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Susquehanna, April 27.—One pleasant Sunday, a few weeks since, a clergy man near New Milford steed at his desk turning to the morning lesson in the prayer book. The congregation waited to live the responses, but he did not begin as soon as usual. Something curious had caught his eye, partly hidden under the Bible rack, a clanting ledge, slightly raised above the main desk. He looked more closely, and there, directly beneath the Bible, he saw a robin red-breast's nest, with two pretty blue eggs in it. Mrs Red-breast and her mate had found a hole left to a small, missing pane in the old-tashioned window and entered the sacred home, to make their little home, where the sparrow and the swallow did, as recorded in the eighty-fourth Psalm. The pastor could not resist so pretty an intrusion and did not disturb the nests and, when one of the birds flew in before the close of the service, nothing was done to frighten it, and the nest remained. The redbreasts are becoming so tame that the gathering of the worshippers and the music and noises of the service on Sunday does not frighten them away. The sitting bird would stay, quickly broading her eggs, while the paster was preaching almost directly over he head. After the robbins were hatched the male bird would fly in with worms in his bill to feed them, and his coming never disturbed the pastor's ser-This pleasant partnership will last until the full-fledged young are able to leave the church and trust to their own new wings. The people feel that the birds have brought a blessing with them, and will be sorry when they go away.

In Lanesboro there lives a man who s greatly troubled with chickens. This is not a malady of any sort, but fact -every day hens and roosters that belong to an adjoining neighbor, and they insist upon taking a daily walk over this man's premises. For several seasons he has endeavered to put in a garden, but, owing to the feathered pests, he has been unsuccessful. He threatened to slay those chickens a dezen times, and once did get a gun and do a little damage to their numbers, but still they came. At last he hit upon a plan. Going to a printing office he had the following printed upon eards, in black letters:

'It you don't keep your chickens nome I will murder every one of them." These cards he attached to a piece of string, on one end of which was a kernel of corn. He then distributed the cards liberally around his premises, and, as each chicken returned home with one of the warnings attached, the cards had the desired effect. The next day a wagon load of new lumber was delivered on his neighbor's lot, and the sound of hammer and saw told of Samuel Houser's Thrilling Ride Across a Burning Mountain.

Stroudsburg, April 27.—Says the Times: Samuel Houser, who lives on Foxtown Hill, had a thrilling experience on Sunday. He was driving home from Johnsonville, Northampton county, and while crossing the mountain which was on fire at some points, the and freshened into a semi-gale, causing the flames to make rapid headway upon him. Whipping his horse into a gailop he began a race for life. The howling of the wind and the roar of the flames made a noise he will never forget. His horse seemed to realize the danger threatening his master and galloped along at a lively pace. A tumble would have been certain death and Houser held his animal to its work with grim desperation. A lull in the wind for several minutes served to in-

PRICES OF ANCIENT STATUES. The Old-Time Sculptors Must Have

Fairly Reveled in Wealth. The prices sculptors receive for their July today are sometimes thought, September 19 says the Art Interchange, to be high in comparison with what is received by painters. But when the highest prices paid to the sculptors are compared with those paid for famous May 4.15 4.17 statues in ancient times they seem mere July trifles. The famous Colossus of September 4.32 4.35 Rhodes, a bronze statue which rose to the height of about one hundred and May 8.45 five feet, cost 300 talents, which taking the Attic talent, equals $225,000, or by the other talent, which is more probable, $510,000. Then there was the famous Colussus of the Sun, a bronze figure of Apollo, forty-five feet high which cost 500 talents, equal to $375,000,

But the value of both of these colossal g works sinke into insignificance when N compared with the price paid for a I colossal statue of Mercury, made by Enodorns for the city of Averni, in Gaul. The cost of this colossal work was $1,675,000, and occupied the sculptor for ten years. The great statue of the coming vacation from school duties Athena, which Phidias made for the s call upon the people hereabouts in the Parthenon at Athens, was also an expensive work, but the exact amoun pabl by the state is not known. It was richly adorned with ivory and gold, costing vast sums. The ancient writers are equally silent as to the aggregate said to Phidias for the statue of Jupiter at Olympia but they do tell us something as to details,

The unalloyed gold on the movable drapery on the Athena, we are told by Thucydides, was over forty talents in weight, which would equal in value $580,000 in coln, while a single lock on the head of Jupiter represented a value of about $25,000. Even when gold was not employed, handsome prices were paid to the artists for their work. For the famous statue, the Diadumenos, a bronze figure of life size, representing a youth tying a fillet around his head Polycletus received what would equal

To Cure Female Ills-Some True Reasons Why Mrs. Pinkham is More Successful Than the Family Doctors.

A woman is sick ; some disease peculiar to her sex is fast developing in her system. She goes to her family physician and tells him a story, but not the whole story. She holds something back, loses her head, becomes agitated, forgets what she wants to say, and finally conceals what she ought to have told, and thus completely mystifies the doctor.

Is it any wouder, therefore, that the doctor fails to cure the disease? Still, we cannot blame the woman, for it is very embarrassing to detail some of the symptoms of her suffering, even to her family physician. It was for this reason that rears ago Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., determined to step in andhelpher sex. Having had considerable experience in treating female ills with her Vegetable Compound, she encouraged the women of America to write to her for advice in regard to their complaints, and, being a woman, it was easy for her ailing sisters to pour into her ears every detail of their suffering. In this way she was able to do for them what the physicians were unable to do, simply because she had the proper information to work upon, and from the little group of women who sought her advice years ago a great army of her fellow-beings are to-day constantly applying for advice and relief, and the fact that more than one hundred thousand of them have been successfully treated by Mrs. Pinkham during the last year is indicative of the grand results which are produced by her unequaled experience and

Had times been good and money plenty we would not have one pair of these expensive, real lace curtains on hand that we bought at the Bankrupt Stock of Kerr, Son & Co. But money is tight and imitations have the field, because they look well at a distance and cost little money.

Well, the Spring Curtains, including Cluny, Brussels, and Point Laces, Orientals, Rennaissance, Marie Antoinetta and other high class curtains have staid with us. We must sell them; we have no option in the matter, and for this week we will sell the highest grade of curtains that ever came to this city at common quality prices. It's a shame, but there's no help for it.
