roundings can boast of many things of interest. The rural suburbs are very charming. The country is undulating, richly adorned with trees and at the time of my visit, embellished with the rich vegetation of autumn. The business places in the town are of no mean order and some of them are both large and elegant. The residential part of the town is very beautiful. The houses are large and generally surrounded by a little lawn well kept and abundantly adorned with fruit trees and flowers. The public institutions of the place do credit both to the heart and head of the inhabitants. The public library is a "Memorial building" it is an elegant, substantial, spacious structure, which we may designate as being all glorious within. In addition to the many good churches the town can rejoice in having a mission hall which I believe is doing a good work for many of the class of our communities who never attend church meetings and what was very pleasing to me was to learn that this mission was worked by all evangelical churches of the town. The missionary is a man whose soul is ablaze with love for the poor and outcast.
