GEN. GOBIN HAS ARRIVED

He Put in an Appearance at Camp Alger Yesterday Afternoon.

MARCH TO THE POTOMAC

Brigade Beat All Previous Records.

ON THE MARCH THE INFANTRYMEN WERE ATTACKED BY TROOPERS BUT THE LATTER WERE REPULSED AND THREE OF THEM MADE PRISONERS--THERE IS EVERY INDICATION THAT MORE OF THE TROOPS WILL BE MOVED IN THE VERY NEAR FUTURE--ONE OF THE ORDERS THAT HAS BEEN ISSUED.

Special from a Staff Correspondent. Camp Alger, Va., June 23--General J. P. S. Gobin arrived at 5 o'clock this afternoon to report to General Graham for formal assignment. A luck would have it, the Pennsylvania brigade was on its two days' practice march when its new brigadier arrived.

He will take charge tomorrow afternoon. General Gobin came to camp alone in a hired "Fix," and carried nothing with him in the way of accoutrements except a small hand satchel and a sword. There is a very evident intention to see large losses from here on. The earliest possible moment, General Miles is forming a Porto Rico army and he intends that there shall be no such expediting delays in its formation as characterized the getting away of the Shafter expedition. The Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth Michigan, Secretary Alger's home regiments, wanted to get away early. General Miles was requested to give them a show. He did. Although they did not have all their recruits, they were lined up at 9 o'clock at night to leave at 9 o'clock next morning. The following letter which the brigadiers are sending throughout their regiments indicates that there is a hurried hunt for available men:

In accordance with orders from Major General Commanding Second Army Corps, you will report to these headquarters at the earliest possible delay the number of enlisted men in your command of all arms, that are fully armed and equipped, that is to say, with ordnance and ordnance stores, quartermaster supplies, tentage and in general all things that the government supplies them with.

The major general is emphatic in calling for a speedy report. FIRST TO BE CALLED. The regiments that are nearest completion in the matter of organization and equipment can expect to be called from here at any hour. The Thirtieth, whose guns were all condemned last week by Inspector Butler, is not likely to be in the first batch that goes. It is also lacking in canvas suits, but it would not take long for the government to supply these if it set out to do it. There is no telling when a call may come. Colonel Courson's brigade arrived at Chain Bridge on the Potomac at 11 o'clock this morning after four and a half hours of hard and exciting march, hard because of the heat and dust, and exciting because of the harassing assaults of the cavalry. Reveille was sounded at 4 o'clock with the intention of getting under way at six, but owing to unforeseen delays it was five minutes later than this when the start was made.

The expedition moved under directions from division headquarters as if marching through an enemy's country. First in line came Adjutant H. M. Courson, of the second battalion, Thirtieth regiment, who formed one of the party that had preliminary surveyed the route and who acted as guide. Under his direction marched a detail from the Twelfth acting as advance guard. They were strung out in the form of a crescent with the horse about five hundred yards apart. Next to them came the reserve, then the first resistance, then the pioneer corps with axes, picks and shovels to clear the road and build bridges, and finally the main column. The Thirtieth was under command of Lieutenant Colonel Mattie and was headed by the new band and the drum corps. The rear guard consisted of Companies E and H, of the Thirtieth and was under the charge of Major Wood. On both sides of the entire column flankers were thrown out to prevent a surprise and at every cross road a squad with fixed bayonets kept guard while the main body was passing.

COMPANY ALLOWANCES. Each company was allowed to take only sixteen sets of fours. The others, principally left behind to guard the camp, Captain Kambeck, the officer of the day, being in charge and Assistant Surgeon Keller remaining behind to look after their health. The medical end of the expedition was in charge of Acting Brigade Surgeon Burke, four attendants in charge of these regimental surgeons and squad of stewards and orderlies comprising his section of the column. The detailed orders for march were promulgated by Acting Brigadier General Courson. The brigade left the camp at 4 o'clock a. m., and proceeded by an eight mile route to the banks of the Potomac in the neighborhood of Great Falls, two miles above Georgetown. The men were in heavy marching order and carried the recently issued shelter tents on their backs, each man carrying half a tent. When they bivouacked two men slept under each tent. Two days cooked rations were carried.

Pursuant to the order from division headquarters the men marched as if in an enemy's country, with guards thrown out to front, flank and rear. The first battalion of the Twelfth Regiment was detailed as advance guard. Companies G and H of the Thirtieth formed the rear guard. The wagon train composed of two wagons from each regiment followed the advance guard. The second regiment in the line, a company from that regiment acting as guard. A lieutenant, a non-commissioned officer and twelve privates from each regiment was detailed as a pioneer corps. They carried axes, picks and shovels and following in the wake of the first line of skirmishers opened or repaired roads, etc. First Sergeant Frederick A. Snyder, adjutant of the Twelfth regiment, was named by Colonel Courson as acting engineer officer of the expedition. He took a sketch of the country through which the troops marched and will submit it to brigade headquarters upon the return from the trip. Commanders of regiments were instructed to report to Colonel Courson upon their return and give a detailed statement of the experience of their regiments on the trip. Lieutenant Roberts of Company B, had charge of the Thirtieth detail for the pioneer corps.

AN ATTACK. Major General Butler the night before had secretly given orders to the cavalry squadron to dispatch one hundred troopers in pursuit of the infantry and if possible capture their provision train or cut off their rear guard. No intimation was given the infantry that they were to be attacked, but as other expeditions had encountered this experience, Colonel Courson took it for granted that there would be an attack and so notified his command. The result was that scouts, skirmishers, flankers and guards were constantly on the alert for "yellow jackets." The march had proceeded an hour without a sign of the enemy and the boys were beginning to think that they were not to be molested, when out of the woods on a clearing a half mile to the right one of the trooper's scouts suddenly burst upon their view. He had discovered himself unintentionally, but quick as a flash turned about and swung himself out of sight on the off side of his horse and dashed back into the woods.

He evidently brought up the main body of the troopers for from this time on the country seemed to be fairly alive with cavalrymen. Time and again they were encountered laying for a weak spot in the line, but when they failed to find what they thought might be a vulnerable spot they would dash away like mad, to turn up later at some other point of the column. One persistent fellow dogged one rear guard for two miles and had a 10c of fun with the squads that were detailed to capture him. A corporal and three or four men would locate themselves behind a house or in a clump of bushes waiting for him to come up. He would ride along with an easy air as if all unsuspecting of a trap, but just as the infantrymen would be preparing to spring out upon him he would leap his horse over a fence, dash through a field and disappear in the woods. A mile further on the same aggravating fellow would be found trailing leisurely along the road ready to repeat his daring escapade.

THREE PRISONERS. Three of the troopers who were not as wily as the trailer fell into our hands. Two of them, the surgeon, Dr. Canizar, and the veterinarian, Dr. Bell, were surprised in a farm house by the flankers and taken into custody. They found themselves cut off and thought to avoid detection by stripping their horses of their accoutrements, turning them loose in the farm yard and retreating into the house. They were caught in the act, however, and were put in one of the ambulances under guard.

The third prisoner was Private Flata, of Troop C, the well-known sketch artist of the Brooklyn Eagle. His horse ran away with him and carried him plump against the rear guard. He was heavily thrown and badly cut up about the face. When he recovered from the shock he was placed in the ambulance with the two other prisoners.

The advance guard put two others to hasty flight, one of them losing his hat and the other his carbine. Adjutant Courson kept the hat as a trophy. Lieutenant Corless, of the Twelfth, who picked up the carbine, returned it. When the column arrived at Chain Bridge the troopers were found there grazing their horses. They had given up the fight and admitted, when our boys came up with them, that the "cool heavers" were too much for them. They complimented our defensive work in the highest terms, but said it was a dirty Spanish trick to make prisoners of surgeons and a wounded man. The troopers returned to camp after a three hours' rest. The Pennsylvaniaans continued up the river about a mile, camping on a high piece of ground on the Maryland side of the river, about one hundred yards from the water.

ROUTE TRAVELED. The route traveled was about eight miles. The time made, four and one-half hours, was an hour and a half better than any previous expedition had been credited with. The men were all thoroughly tired, but not a single case of prostration was reported. The roads were narrow, hilly and dusty, but despite the hard marching the boys showed no great inclination to rest when a halt was made, few of them taking the trouble to throw off their burdens, preferring to lean against a fence or rest on their guns until the order would come to move on again. They were anxious to get to the river. Arrived at the camp the dog tents were pitched and then the men set to making coffee and preparing dinner. It was very plain, but it was eaten with great relish. The remainder of the afternoon was given over to bathing, such of the men who were not on guard or other camp duty spending all their time in or about the water. The evening programme includes band concerts and the like. The men will be sent to bed early so that they will be refreshed for the march back to camp, which begins at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning. T. J. Duffy.

GOSSIP OF THE CAMP.

Special from a Staff Correspondent. Company E's ball team yesterday won the championship of the division by defeating the Eighth Pennsylvania team. The score was 14 to 11. The first game with the Eighth's team was won by Company F by a score of 22 to 2. The second game was a tie, 8 to 8. These two teams had an even number of games won and lost up to yesterday. The Thirtieth's representatives now lead with a record of fourteen games won and three lost. General O. O. Howard conducted an evangelistic meeting on the parade ground last night which was attended by an audience of several thousand, including most of the officers of the corps. During the course of his address he said he had been privileged to say that there was a strong possibility of the end--First division being moved from here within ten days. Captain Demann, of Company A, was yesterday's officer of the day and Lieutenant Berry, of Company B, commander of the guard. The orderlies at headquarters were Private George Tolomeo, of Company A, and Private Thomas McLaughlin, of Company F. Captain Cobell, who was last week assigned to the brigade as commissary of subsistence, has been transferred to the Second brigade of the First division, which is scheduled for immediate movement to the front. It is reported that Captain McCausland is ill at his home in Montrose with vaccine fever. Major and Mrs. C. R. Parke and Rev. Dr. N. G. Parke spent yesterday in Washington. Dr. and Mrs. G. E. Hill, of Scranton, are visiting at the Thirtieth's headquarters. Sergeant Dimmick, of Company A, is back from a seven days' furlough.
