MORE ARRESTS AT OLD FORGE

Day Replete with Incidents of an Exciting Nature.

DEPUTIES ARE REINFORCED

Twenty More Men Engaged and a Case of Winchester Rifles Taken to the Mine—Strikers Pursue Two Workmen and Have an Exciting Time at an Italian Colony Where a Number of "Blacklegs" Live. Leader of the Crowd Is Arrested and Sent to Jail—The Deputies Succeed in Capturing the Much Sought for Frank Apple, One of the Alleged Strike Leaders.

Nothing of a very violent nature occurred yesterday in connection with the Old Forge strike, but there were a number of excited incidents and several that came nigh being very exciting.

The night was free from any disturbances, but with the approach of day came the usual morning scenes. The deputies in squads commanded by Manager Joseph J. Jermyn, Superintendent Edward Jermyn and H. F. Perber went out at daybreak to the surrounding hamlets to escort the workmen to the mine.

In line with the resolve made the night before, the strikers were abroad in larger numbers than usual and were determined that every bit of wood work in the interior of the building will be scraped and revarnished, and it will probably be over a month before the work is completed.

JEERED THE MINERS. In the afternoon, when the men were returning home, there were lively scenes enacted on all the paths leading from the mine. The strikers and their women no sooner sighted the workmen going across the fields than they started out to head them off and give them at least a farewell jeer.

The plateau between the mine and Main street and the field lying below and to the south were the scene of the most exciting episode. Two workmen started for home across the plateau without being accompanied by deputies, thinking to reach the road without being detected from the village on the flats below.

They kept behind the brow of the hill, but they were, nevertheless, discovered, and in a twinkling there was a mob in pursuit of them.

When a Tribune reporter passed through the hamlet—Jerusalem it is called—on his way to the mine at 1:30 there was scarcely a man to be seen anywhere about. Less than an hour later, when the workmen started to steal across the plateau, the village fairly swarmed with shouting men, women and children, all hurrying out to the field below the plateau and following a path skirting the edge of the hillside, which eventually meets the road and runs from the plateau and into Mudtown.

As they ran they called out "Come on, come on," "Watch the —"

"Kill the blacklegs" and the like. No weapons were in view, but stones were gathered and a few casted at the mob. The two workmen saw the mob hurrying to head them off, and, quaking their pace into a run, took a course to the northeast and disappeared in the direction of Rendham.

FURIOUS STRIKER. One of the strikers who was intoxicated became furious when he saw the prey escaping and, raising high above his head a huge stone he had been carrying, he dashed it to the ground, and then picking it up repeated the performance six or seven times, all the while muttering imprecations against "Dem blackleg" in Hungarian and broken English.

At the edge of the field over near the main road five houses face the commons. In these houses live a number of Italians and among their number are several who are taking the strikers' places at the mine.

When the crowd was seen coming across the commons in the direction of the strikers those of the Italians who were at home imagined that the attack was about to be made on their colony and consternation reigned supreme.

The women ran out of the houses and rushed forward to meet the oncoming strikers, crying out beseechingly for them to turn back and plead with them that they would not hurt "my gooda man" who they solemnly averred was "no blackleg." The strikers, presumably, had no intention to molest the Italian colony but their attention being called to it and the original game having ended, they resolved to devote a few minutes to the Italian colony.

They moved over toward the cluster of houses in a halting, aimless sort of way and were within a hundred feet or so of the fence line when a door in the second floor of a stone house in the center of the group was suddenly flung open and a big fierce-mustached Italian appeared on the threshold with a gun at his shoulder and the strikers were pointed at the foremost of a crowd of other Italians looking out over his shoulder and all talking excitedly.

CROWD MELTED AWAY. The crowd halted, shifted about and finally melted away to the right and left and went around the houses by the side streets to the main road at Fallon's. Later they came back in a body and stood on the road intersecting the street skirting the Italian houses. The man with the gun came down in front of the house and walked up and down the street sentry fashion casting defiant glances now and then in the direction of the threatening crowd.

The assemblage in the road had by this time assumed large proportions and when the women at Jerusalem saw it, they rushed across the commons thinking the long expected outbreak was at hand. When they came up they urged their men to "go for the blacklegs," saying "we have you," "fight the skab, too," and like words of encouragement. But the man with the gun dispelled any warlike tendencies that might be caused to arise in the threatening crowd and gradually it dispersed and disappeared.

MORE ARRESTS. Manager Jermyn started to a Tribune reporter yesterday afternoon that two more strikers were to be arrested last night. They are charged with having held up one of the workmen yesterday morning and ordering him to turn back under pain of death. The miner turned back but he succeeded later in getting through the lines and gave to Jermyn the names of the men who held him up and threatened him.

Later on the alleged leader of the mob, Martin Duffy, was arrested by Deputies Byers and Bryant on a warrant sworn out before Alderman Millar charging him with rioting. In default of $500 he was committed to jail. Frank Apple, who had been cluding the deputies since Monday and was sought for at Martin Molinski's house at midnight Tuesday, was captured yesterday and sent to jail. He is charged with holding up one of the company's teamsters. The deputies spread the word that Manager Jermyn would hold a conference with the men and as anticipated Apple was one of the committee that went to the mine for the conference.

As they arrived the committee took him to jail and loading him in a wagon with Duffy took him off to jail. This latter incident did not tend in any great degree to better the relations between the strikers and the company.

Ludwig Lesbinsky, the striker arrested Tuesday for holding up Superintendent Edward Jermyn, was released from the county jail yesterday on bail furnished by Edward Harris, of Old Forge.

Manager Jermyn said significantly: "They will be men molested tomorrow morning," and then added that twenty more deputies had been engaged and a case of Winchester sixteen-shot repeating rifles secured.

"We will have the new men and the guns here tonight," he said, "and if anybody comes around here looking for trouble they will get it."

While talking with the Tribune representative at the mine yesterday afternoon Manager Jermyn was accosted by one of the strikers who had come in to look for work. He said he was perfectly satisfied with the treatment he had received and would not have gone on strike at all if he had not been forced to do so. He and four of his "buddies" had determined to go back to work and he came to get the "buddies" and have the company's wagon sent for their tools.

"That's the case with nine out of every ten men I talk with," said Mr. Jermyn. "A few of the leaders got them to go out and now they are afraid to come back. Just as soon as they are satisfied their cars return to work in safety they will come back. Every day we have applicants from the old men for their old places and before many days we will have the most of them back. I have told them that they can come back and get their old places or even better ones, but that if they wait after this week they will have to be satisfied with anything we may have to give them. If we will give them anything at all, I have also sent word to the strike leaders that we will not brook any interference with our business. We have paid our men off and they have no claim whatever on us. We want nothing whatever to do with them as a body. We tried to come to an agreement with them and they would not listen to reason. Now we propose to leave them out of consideration."

Organizer Benjamin Jones, of the United Mine Workers Union, was on the scene yesterday and visited Mr. Jermyn. He hopes to effect a settlement.
