

EVENTS OF DAY IN WEST SCRANTON

HEPTASOPHS ENTERTAIN IN A CLEVER MANNER.

Excellent Programme Given in Ivorite Hall by West Side Conclave. Political Rogues' Gallery Established—Alderman Kelly's Busy Day—Story About Mr. Potter, the Mountebank—Kalos Plegan Programme—St. Paul's Annual Ball. Funeral of Mrs. McNulty—Other Notes.

When the members of West Side Conclave, No. 211, Improved Order of Heptasophs, or the Lackawanna Council, Royal Arcanum, announce a reception, social smoker and lunch after a business meeting, they are always assured a good attendance and the visitors are doubly assured of a welcome and first class entertainment.

The event in Ivorite hall last evening under the auspices of the former organization was no exception to the rule, and all who attended were well repaid for the time spent among a fraternity which is second to none in the city. The address delivered by Superintendent George Howell, of the public schools, was in itself worthy of being publicly repeated and enjoyed by any person who is interested in the future welfare of those who are nearest and dearest to us all.

It, A. Parsons presided over the gathering, which included the representative business, professional and active members of the order and other invited guests. Phonographic records were skillfully reproduced by H. T. Thomas and short talks were given by Professor Howell, L. A. Howell, Charles Wiggins, Dr. Houser, H. A. Parsons and others. J. Archie Jones and W. R. Hughes recited and sandwiches, coffee, pickles, fruit and cigars were passed by the entertainment committee.

POLITICAL ROGUES' GALLERY.

Probably the only "political rogues' gallery" in existence can be seen hanging in a conspicuous place in Jenkins' drug store, where all the candidates for office assemble to discuss their campaign and make staves for the fall election.

It remained for an ingenious young man to arrange the photographs of all the aspirants for public favor in a group and number them according to his idea of the period in which their fates should be fought, and he has styled the collection "The Political Rogues' Gallery." Following are the date assigned to the respective candidates:

Jacob D. Ferber, 1892; Frank Becker, 1846; John H. Fellows, 1900; Dr. J. W. Houser, 1904; David M. Jones, 1847;

ALL KINDS OF TROUBLE.

Mrs. Annie Bowelick, residing with her husband, John Bowelick, at 1236 Thompson street, near the Briabain mine, had the latter arrested yesterday and arraigned before Alderman Kelly, of the Eighteenth ward, charging him with non-support. At the hearing, when a term in the county jail was evident, the woman forgave her husband and withdrew the charge. Michael Bowelick, a brother of John, and two other men named John Rushinski and Michael Rusk, board with the Bowelicks, and the husband alleged undue familiarity on the part of the trio with the boarding mistress. Mrs. Bowelick resented the accusation and in her wrath chastised the three boarders. They in turn committed assault and battery upon her and she had them arrested.

When arraigned before the alderman, Rushinski and Rusk pled ignorance of the charge and were discharged. Michael, the brother-in-law, could not extricate himself from suspicion, and was fined $10 and held in $300 bail for his appearance at court.

DEWEY DAY EISTEDDFOF.

The eisteddfof to be held on Tuesday next, May 1, at the First Welsh Baptist church, promises to be one of the most successful ever held in this section. Nearly seventy entries have been received for the various competitions in solos and recitations, and among the competitors may be found some of the best musical and elocutionary talents of the county. Great interest is taken in the chief choral competition, and a keen contest is expected between four or five choirs in solos and recitations, for the competition on Emerson's "Star of Descending Night."

The number of entries makes it necessary to have a preliminary contest on nearly all the competitive numbers, the time and place of which will be announced later. The officers of the committee in charge of the eisteddfof are: Chairman, James R. Hughes; vice-chairman, Thomas G. Williams; treasurer, Professor William Evans; secretaries, Miss E. Thomas and Oliver Harris.

HER LOVE GREW COLD.

Annie Mahrdy, an Arabian woman residing at 1907 Jackson street, came here from New York some time ago at the solicitation of Thomas Driedau, whom she was engaged to marry upon her arrival. The prospective groom gave Annie $47 to purchase her wedding trousseau, and during her shopping tour she met another fellow whom she thought she loved better than Driedau.

The consequence was that Thomas received the congested stare from Annie when she returned to the house, where both reside. All overtures made by Driedau were unavailing, and Annie was resolute. Incidentally the woman also refused to make good the amount of money advanced by her prospective husband. The result was that Miss Mahrdy was arrested yesterday on the charge of larceny by bailie, and when Alderman Kelly was consulted he arranged for the woman's arrest. She is now in jail, which will result in their marriage after all.

FAKE FAKIR STORY.

Several contemporaries published fake stories yesterday about alleged fakirs, who were stopped by the police, Tuesday evening, for selling without a license on a vacant lot on North Main avenue.

The fact of the matter was that a man named Potter, who manufactures his own preparations and has been doing business in and out of this city for the past twenty years, secured permission from Dr. Allen's agent, Contractor George Cooper, to exhibit his wares on the private property near Price street.

When the patrolman accosted Potter and asked for his license, the alleged fakir told the officer that he didn't need any, and consequently did not have one, because he was doing business on private property. The officer did not understand the law, neither did Potter understand the officer, and the consequence was both became angry.

As a result, Potter was escorted to the station house, where he consulted Lieutenant Williams, and the latter not being familiar with the circumstances and the city ordinance, reserved his decision.

The whole matter involved a point of law, and Assistant City Solicitor Davis says the officer was right in his position, and that transient merchants must obtain a license to do business on private or public property.

Potter did not sell a cent's worth of goods but two other agents who took advantage of Potter's privilege on the premises did a thriving business for a short time, and made their escape while Potter was giving the patrolman an argument.

The initial performance of the mysterious production, "Kalos Plegan," will be given in Mearns' hall this evening, and the promoters claim it will be a revelation in the way of beauty and motion picture. The performance will be given two nights and the admission is 25 cents.

HENNESSY COURT AROUSED.

The famous yellow kids of Hennessy court, who usually monopolize the front of the stage in the city, were relegated to oblivion yesterday, when Vincenzo Carucci and Mrs. Jane Jones, landlord and tenant, respectively, were doing a stunt in the alley.

Mrs. Jones complained of the lack of sanitary accommodations furnished by Carucci on the premises and proceeded to utilize a portion of the back yard as a dumping ground for refuse. This incensed Carucci, and he threatened to shoot his tenant if the nuisance was not abated.

The second scene was enacted in Alderman Kelly's court last evening, when the heroine succeeded in having the landlord held under $300 bail for his appearance at court.

AFTERMATH OF THE FIGHT.

As a sequel to the celebration and attempted murder which occurred in the "Hissing Sun" block on Seventh street last Sunday evening, Wassell Plisco was arrested yesterday on a warrant from Alderman Kelly's court, charging him with assault and battery.

The complainant was Peter Wasco, who tried to act as peacemaker during the melee. Testimony of an uninteresting nature was offered by the prosecutor to substantiate the charge, and Plisco was held in $300 bail for his appearance at court.

STEEL WOOL.

Curious Material That Is Used as a Substitute for Sandpaper. From the New York Sun. Steel wool, introduced five or six years ago, is a machine-produced material that is used as a substitute for sandpaper. It is composed of sharp-edged threads of steel, which curl up together like wool, or somewhat as the wool fibres of the familiar material known as excelsior curl up together, though the steel wool is very much finer; the finest of it being not much coarser than the coarsest of natural wools. The steel wool is put up in packages containing one pound each. These are something like rolls of cotton batting, but smaller; a pound of steel wool, loosely packed, making, rolled in paper an open at the ends, package perhaps fifteen inches long and two or three inches in diameter. Made in various degrees of coarse-

Yesterday was observed in a fitting manner by the members of the Episcopal church in this borough, it being the annual observance of Saint Mark's day. This morning at 9.30 o'clock Holy Communion was administered by Rt. Rev. Bishop Talbot, who, after this service, preached an excellent sermon to the large audience which had gathered. The remains were taken to St. Joseph's church, where a requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. W. A. Gorman, interment at Minooka cemetery.

"A Famed Husband," given last evening at St. Joseph's hall by the members of the Ladies' Irish Catholic Benevolent Union Dramatic club, of Hyde Park, can be classed as a very amusing entertainment. It was remarkably well staged and cleverly enacted. Every member in the cast acquitted themselves in an excellent manner. The piece was under the direction of Miss Pauline C. Hall, the able elocutionist of the Scranton College of Music, and the good work of each member is due to her careful instruction. Those desiring special mention are Misses Gaughan and Carleton and Messrs. Conboy, Gannon and Reagan. O'Donnell and O'Toole, the black-faced comedians, proved to be very amusing in their specialties. Little Bettina Joyce's dancing was roundly applauded. She had to respond to several encores.

OBITUARY.

The death of Lymon, the 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Price, of 1925 Paul street, occurred yesterday morning, paralysis of the heart being the cause of death. Funeral Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will be private. Interment in Petersburg cemetery.

ness, steel wool is put to a variety of uses, the finer wools for polishing wood and metal, and the coarser for rubbing down paint and varnish. It is often used on special parts of work, while, for example, on the flat surface of a door a man would use sandpaper with a block back of it; for the mouldings he would use steel wool, which fits into the crevices and conforms itself to irregular shapes. Such work can be done with steel wool far more readily and quickly than with sandpaper; and it is used with like advantage on irregular and small surfaces and on carved work.

Besides the steel wool there is a coarser material of the same kind called steel shavings, which is put to various uses; as in taking off old paint or varnish; and in polishing wood before painting and it is used on bowling alleys and on floors for smoothing and cleaning them.

Sandpaper clogs in use, steel wool breaks down. The wool is commonly used with gloves to keep the ends from sticking into the fingers.

CITY OF THE SUN GOD.

Marvelous Ruins to Be Found in Asiatic Turkey. From the London Standard.

Baal 'Bek, the city of the sun god, lies at the foot of Anti-Lebanon. In order to reach it you must ride many miles over bare brown plains, across ridges hoary with olive and green with mulberry, between massive hills streaked like the zebra. Suddenly out of the silent fields spring mighty walls and pillars—giants who lift their heads into the amber sky. The walls are of these superhuman columns, beside which the tallest trees look like blades of grass, fill one with amazement. It is not alone their size and strength and beauty that inspire wonder, but their very existence in such solitude, far from the track of mankind. We of the nineteenth century—mere dependents on rail and steam—are so in the habit of associating cities with modern means of communication that we are astonished at the presence of massive ruins in the heart of a valley remote from river and sea.

As we draw near our wonder grows, for out of the thick grove, whose dark branches sweep and moan like a troubled sea around the foot of imperishable cliffs, there rise new columns, new columns, massive, ornate, stately even in their heaped confusion. This is the Temple of the Sun—a relic of pagan worship that has looked unmoved on the birth and death of dynasties and faiths. Less than by some enchantment, we pass through the grove, whose dark avenues, overgrown with weeds, have echoed with the shrieks of the victims of Baal, Lord of the Heavens. There, in the shadow of that poplar, may have stood the molten image, the human figure with a bull's head and outstretched arms, from which children dropped into the fiery lap. "They caused their sons and daughters to pass through the fire." They made themselves molten images, even oxen calves, and made a grove, and worshipped all the hosts of heaven, and served Baal." It is not easy to associate these bloody rites with such splendor of design and colossal workmanship, yet it is beyond dispute that these walls have seen the worship of Baal, that here incense has been consumed in his honor, that his priests, clothed in rich vestments, have trodden these paths, that here mothers have looked on dry-eyed at the sacrifice of their children, while the screams of the burning victims were deafened with flute and drum.

Six columns, graceful and gigantic, carrying a broken frieze—six columns each 75 feet high and 7 1/2 feet in diameter—all that remain of the marvel of paganism. The grove whose poplars look like grass growing out of fissures in the fallen walls, is silent. "There is no voice, or any that answereth." We leave the ghostly shade, and, walking down a quiet country lane, reach the gate that leads us into the temple. A Turkish man admits us, and in a moment we are plunged into the gloom of a vast vault-like passage. The flickering glare of torches reveals the huge blocks of stone that shut out air and sky. Emerging from these vaults, we arrive at the Acropolis, and wander in growing amazement among the ruinous heaps of stone, so monstrous in size, so perfect in shape, so rich in carving as to almost raise doubts of their human origin. It is not that the ruins are of great extent. "Those at Karnak—familiar to every tourist in Egypt—and at Paestum rival a wider area. Their strength, the massive simplicity of their proportions, and the elaborate beauty of their ornamentation and admiration, and make every modern palace and cathedral dwindle into the insignificance of a hazy and ephemeral structure. The great wall of tains stones each from 62 to 64 feet long, 13 feet thick, and as many broad. What Titans heaved and placed these enormous blocks that oppress us with the insignificance of the Church of St. Peter at Rome and the meanness of the Coliseum? What genius conceived and what cunning hands wrought the elaborate tracery and embroidery of frieze and capital and sculptured architecture? Whoever your steps lead you—through the space of the Acropolis, in the Temple of Jupiter, or in the Temple of the Sun—the same marvels of masonry appear, the same delicate embroidery of stone, the same giants of hewn rock. And the color! The deep orange stain on wall and pillar reflects the sunsets of a thousand years."

SPAIN'S COLONY IN AFRICA.

Trying to Turn the Rio de Oro Province to Good Account. From the New York Sun.

Now that Spain has lost all her large colonies she is doing all she can and encouraging every effort on the part of her people to develop the small colonial possessions still remaining to her, particularly in Africa. Spain's largest possession in Africa is the district of Rio de Oro, south of Morocco. It fronts on the Atlantic between Capes Bojador and Blanco for about five hundred miles and extends inland from 420 miles in the north to 600 miles in the south. This territory is about one-twelfth as large as the United States, but inland it is mostly sand, and development is possible on an important scale only in the coast region, unless minerals may be found in the interior.

Spain's ambition is to make the most of the fertile strip along the coast, developing plantations to supply Spain with a variety of tropical products and establishing trading posts for goods of Spanish origin, which may be exchanged with the natives for their gold dust and ostrich feathers. Inducements, therefore, are being offered to a considerable number of farmers and traders to go to this new region and make it worth something to the home country.

A mineral survey of the region is now under way. It is quite certain that in some parts considerable gold may be obtained, particularly along the Rio de Oro. The Spaniards will also endeavor, unless France too strenuously opposes the idea, to divert some of the trade from Timbuctoo to direct trade relations with the fertile Sudan. Up to this time Spain had entirely neglected this great possession in Africa and it is scarcely probable that its development would now have been undertaken if Spain still had her former large colonial interests to absorb her attention.
