Social Gossip

It is a very unusual spring-time when at least one handsome wedding does not mark mid-April in Scranton. This season is no exception, for yesterday was signified by one of the prettiest weddings ever seen in this city, when Miss Frances Pratt, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin H. Pratt, was married to Andrew Nelson Walker.

The ceremony took place in the Second Presbyterian church at 3 o'clock. The procession was most attractive as to the wedding music, played by Professor Chance, the bridal party proceeded up the center aisle. It was a charming spring-time wedding, for banked high behind the altar were masses of rich green, starred thickly with marguerites. The guests of the bridesmaids harmonized with the general effect. They wore pale green mousseline de soie, striped with satin and made with Empire sashes and swirling foot-puffs. They carried bouquets of white Anemone, Anemones and white bows of white illusion in their hair and at the altar fastening. The maid of honor was Miss Katharine Pratt, the pretty sister of the bride. She, too, was attired in pale green. Her gown was trimmed with lace and she carried white carnations and maiden-hair fern.

The bride followed the procession, and as the loving gaze of her friends fell upon the fair, girlish face, so serious and almost grave, as she slowly passed through the rows of assembled guests, many an eye dimmed with a sudden mist, remembering how it all came about that the bride of the day walked alone—remembering the universally honored and devoted father and the brother who so recently went away forever.

The bride wore white crepe-de-chine, made with exquisite simplicity, the full, circular ruffle being garnished with narrow folds. Her veil was fastened with orange blossoms and she carried bride roses. Real lace formed the upper bodice and underleaves.

The bride was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Dr. Claude Walker. The ushers were Geo. M. Hallstead and J. J. Lander, of this city; Charles Avery Hickey and Harry Walker, of Binghamton; George Walker, of Emporium; E. Stanley Bicker, of Easton. The bridesmaids were: Miss Caroline Hall, of Elmira, N. Y., and Miss Sara Fordham, cousins of the bride; Miss Cordelia Woolley, of Danville; Miss Edith Norton and Miss Grace Birdsall, of this city; Miss Dorothy Strath Miller was the dainty little flower girl. She walked with William Hallstead, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Hallstead, who acted as page.

After the beautiful and impressive ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Dr. C. E. Robinson, a large number of invited guests attended a reception held at the home of the bride's mother, on Mulberry street. The prominent families of society were represented. The charming rooms were lavishly decorated by Clark Bauer's orchestra, stationed on the second floor landing, furnished music. Hanley entered.

The library, which was attractively arranged for the occasion, was used as a back-ground for such a superb collection of rich and elegant gifts as are seldom seen. The bridal party received in the front drawing room. Mrs. Pratt and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Walker, of Nicholson, parents of the groom, stood at the head of the line. Mrs. Pratt wore pearl grey brocade. Mrs. Walker's gown was grey poplin, trimmed with lavender silk and lace. Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Hall, Miss Hall, Elmira, N. Y.

MISS ELLSWORTH, Mr. M. Miller, Mr. Maguire, Mrs. M. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Long, West Pittston; Harry C. Walker, G. A. Walker, Jr., Emporium; Charles Avery Hickey, Binghamton; N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Walker, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy, Nicholson; Mrs. Vaughn, Moscow; Mr. and Mrs. George R. Heizey, Marietta, Pa.; Miss Emily Harding and Moses Shields, Jr., of Nicholson.

Few young women have found so tender a place in a multitude of hearts as the bride of yesterday. No less lovely in character than in face, she is universally admired. Mr. Walker is an attorney of more than usual ability. He is a nephew of William F. Hallstead and has brilliant prospects in his chosen profession.

The young people will take up their residence in the home of the bride's mother, occupying the lower half of that spacious residence.

Mrs. Fletcher and Miss Fletcher will give a May Day reception at their home on Madison avenue Wednesday, May 1.

Among the losers are: J. F. Broadbent, T. H. Dale, L. G. La Bar and A. P. Hintermeister, while some of the victors are: Mrs. P. H. Jermyn, Mrs. Myron Karsson, Mrs. G. B. Jermyn and Miss Dale.

BIG CAVE-IN AT MAYFIELD

LARGE AREA OF THE TOWN SEVERELY DISTURBED.

Two Veins of Erie's Glenwood Colliery Collapse and Do Considerable Damage to the Surface—Twenty-six Houses Feel Effects of the Fall—Greek Church and School Severely Shaken—Water Mains Burst and Flood Low Flats—Child Injured by Being Thrown Down.

Mayfield experienced another serious cave-in last evening, No. 2, the lower vein of the Hillside Coal and Iron company Glenwood colliery, began settling a week ago yesterday, and just at 6 o'clock last evening, it collapsed, causing the upper vein to also give away, and allowing the surface to settle in some places as much as five feet.

The disturbed area extends from the Delaware and Hudson station on the north, to Mendelsohn's store, on the south, a distance of three hundred yards, and from the Main street, paralleling the Delaware and Hudson tracks, on the west, to the top of the hill at the eastern extremity of the town, an average distance of two hundred yards.

This particular portion of the town is populated by Russians almost exclusively, and is closely built up. Nearly every building in this large area was more or less affected, and twenty-six of them were very noticeably damaged. The water mains were broken in half a dozen places and the low-lying properties were flooded.

The Greek Catholic church was in the immediate center of the disturbed district, and suffered considerable damage. The stone steps were separated from the building, the iron fence surrounding the church, and the paragon wall was badly twisted and the candle-sticks and other furniture of the altar were thrown to the floor.

TRACKS DISTURBED.
The Delaware and Hudson tracks, which extend through the center of the cave-in territory, were disturbed in some places four inches to the right or left, and in other places were caused to sink several inches, while all along the road-bed, large fissures appear at every few yards. The up-bound 8 o'clock train came along while the settling was going on, and halted a short distance below the lower limit of the territory in which the fissures appeared. When the settling subsided the train was allowed to proceed cautiously, and without incident, without incident. A large gang of trackmen from Carbondale worked until late at night, straightening out and leveling the tracks.

The cave was accompanied, as is usual, with a loud report, as a cannon, followed by reverberations and then rumblings, which continued for a minute or so. Occasional cracklings were heard during the whole fifteen minutes that intervened between the collapse and the subsidence of the settling.

The people rushed from their houses in terror, and for an hour or so the greatest consternation prevailed. Many of them, especially those whose houses were thrown considerably out of plumb, refused to re-enter them to sleep, but instead took away their portable belongings and sought shelter with friends in other parts of the town.

How severe were the vibrations is attested by a peculiar and sad accident which the cave-in caused. A two-year-old child of Frank DeWoznyk, who was sitting on a pool table in a room in the rear of the barroom. The shock came and the child was seen to topple over the edge of the table. Before the father could save it, the little one fell to the floor, and when Dr. Jackson came to examine it he found one of its ribs broken.

EXCITEMENT IN SCHOOL.
The children in the Russian school had an exciting experience. This school is in session from 4 to 6 o'clock, to permit the Russian children to attend both the English and their native schools. They were about to be dismissed when the cave-in occurred. The school tilted first one way and then another, and for a minute or so rocked and tossed in every which way. The children and benches were thrown about promiscuously and plastered upon them. None of the children were hurt, but one boy could get a footing they rushed from the building and never stopped running till they had firmly gripped their mothers' skirts. One little fellow, who went through the exciting experience, gleefully told a Tribune reporter of how "the teacher, him ketch hold the desk and den hees legs go every way."

Two months ago when the first cave-in occurred, Mr. Waschelski's house was thrown three feet out of plumb. Yesterday's settling set the house straight again, and the floors are now as level as when first laid.

The first cave-in came without warning and caused the death of Larry Cantwell, a carpenter, and the serious injury of seven of his fellow workmen. Yesterday's collapse was heralded by a squeeze which was first noticed a week ago. It continued to grow worse day by day and at noon yesterday all the men and mules were taken out of the mine.

Sunday night a meeting of the property holders in the threatened territory was held and a committee appointed to petition the company to do something to avert the cave-in. Each man present contributed a quarter to hire an attorney to represent them.

The mine is practically worked out in the cave-in portions and the loss to the company is, consequently, insignificant.

AN OPERATIC COMEDY.
It Was Given at Music Hall by the Saengerunde.

In Music hall, last night, the Scranton Saengerunde, of South Scranton, gave "Jaromir," an operatic comedy by Wilhelm Stura, under the direction of Professor Theodore Hemberger, and in a way that surprised and delighted the many friends of that well-known organization, which comprises in its membership some of the best known German residents of South Scranton.

The story of the opera is dramatic, and the music has a decided Wagnerian flavor. The action of the opera is based upon the efforts of Jaromir, chief of a fierce robber band, to win Ursula, the daughter of the good king Mastodon. Charles Fell was the king; Miss Lizzie Hiltz, his beautiful daughter, and Gustav Schaefer was the robber chief. All sang their roles with an ease and grace that is rarely noticeable in the work of amateurs. The chorus consisted of over thirty male voices, and the numbers they gave were warmly applauded by the audience.

At the conclusion of the opera there was dancing for several hours, Bauer's orchestra furnished the music for the opera and the dancing.

DR. SITTERLEY REMOVED.
Veterinarian's Office Head Lopped Off by Director Hitchcock.

Director of Public Safety F. L. Hitchcock has sent a letter to Dr. C. M. Sitterley, who has for several years been the veterinarian for the fire department, stating that his services are no longer required and that he may consider himself dismissed.

Director Hitchcock would give no reason yesterday for the removal, but said that for the present no one will be appointed in Dr. Sitterley's place. If any of the department horses need medical attention a veterinarian will be called in, he said.

FIREMEN QUIT WORK.
They Hampered the South Mill of the L. I. & S. Company to a Considerable Extent.

Thirty-two firemen and a number of coal unloaders and laborers quit work at the South mill of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel company yesterday afternoon, as a result of the refusal of General Manager Henry Wehrum to grant the demands of the firemen for more pay.

The unloaders and laborers who struck admitted they had no grievances other than that they objected to working in "week" firemen. Although all operations at the mill were considerably impeded during the early part of the afternoon and much delay caused by the refusal of men to take the strikers' places, last night the greater part of the vacancies were filled.

The firemen are the only organized branch of employees at the works. For some time past, much dissatisfaction has been current among them, on account of their wages, which they claimed were not high enough. Saturday a wage scale was presented to General Manager Wehrum, with the statement that unless a favorable answer was received by 2 o'clock Monday afternoon the firemen would go on strike.

Substitutes were recruited from the laborers, but the men whose duty it is to unload the cars for the firemen refused to work for the substitutes, and they too quit. A number of laborers refused to act as firemen or unloaders, and as a result, at 6 o'clock there were probably between fifty and sixty men who had given up their places. Superintendent George Barnard personally attended to the work of assigning new men to the vacant places.

When he was asked what the demands of the strikers were, he said: "Manager Wehrum refused their demands, which were of a highly exorbitant nature."

It is understood that the firemen asked for a raise in wages which would increase their daily earnings from approximately $1.60 to $1.80. Shorter hours were also demanded.

Man Named Miller from New York State Created Excitement in the Central City Last Night.

Quite a little excitement was created in the central part of the city last night by an intoxicated man who was found lying on the ground on Adams street, and who was taken to the hospital by Patrolman McMullen with a serious cut on his right wrist from which the blood was flowing freely. He was followed by a number of wild-eyed persons, who whispered to the officer in awe-stricken tones that the man had been stabbed.

Patrolman McMullen escorted the injured man to Dr. Heilner's office in the Burr building, where the cut was bandaged temporarily and where he was allowed to remain until the Lackawanna hospital ambulance, which had been summoned, arrived. In the meantime Patrolman Thompson began an investigation.

Beginning at the corner of Adams avenue and Spruce street, where the man had been picked up, he followed the trail of blood which he had left in his track. This trail led to Lackawanna avenue, thence to Washington avenue and thence along that thoroughfare to the sidewalk and between the Commodore and the Pennsylvania buildings.

Here he found the solution of the mystery. The broken pieces of a window lay at the bottom of the steps leading down the passage in a pool of clotted blood. The injured man in all probability had lurched down the steps and had struck his wrist against the window opening into the cellar, cutting it open.

The man was kept at the Lackawanna hospital just long enough to give the surgeons time to bandage up his wrist and to have a bottle of iodine put on his hand, but it is understood that his name is Miller and that he is a hay merchant from New York state.

STRIKE OVER HIGH ART AT MINOOKA

OFFER OF SUPERINTENDENT BUTLER ACCEPTED.

Hands at the Simpson Silk Mill Will Return to Work Thursday Morning as a Result of Vote Taken at Yesterday Afternoon's Meeting. Superintendent Butler's Proposal a Generous One—Outlook for a Settlement at the Sauquoit Mill is Bright at This Time.

As was exclusively predicted in yesterday morning's Tribune, the strike at the Simpson silk mill, at Minooka, was settled yesterday afternoon, when the girls by an almost unanimous vote decided to accept the offer made by Superintendent Butler. They will return to work Thursday morning.

A meeting of the union was held yesterday afternoon in St. Joseph's hall. A large percentage of the three hundred girls employed were present, as were also "Mother" Jones and representatives of the Textile Workers' union. The committee which waited on Superintendent Butler Friday afternoon reported the result of their conference and stated the terms of his offer. "Mother" Jones addressed the meeting and in strong terms urged the acceptance of the proposal.

The full wage scale asked by the girls was granted and a number of minor concessions yielded. During the four summer months a half holiday will be given each Saturday, for which full pay will be allowed. The strikers' requests for seats in the rooms where they eat their lunch has also been granted, and a number of benches will be provided for this purpose.

WILL BE RECOGNIZED.
The union will be recognized and none but union help employed. The girls after accepting the offer notified Superintendent Butler of their action and decided to return Thursday, by which time the mill will be in readiness for a resumption of work.

The soft silk department of the Sauquoit mill met in Economy hall, but the girls refused to accept the offer unless the measuring of silk. The weavers declare that they wish the persons in charge of this work to be chosen by the girls, and unless this is granted they will not return just yet. Moreover, they agree that before work is resumed they must have a written agreement, something more than a mere verbal contract. "Mother" Jones, however, argues that this latter complaint is an idle one, and says that if the other grievances can be adjusted this should prove no obstacle in the way of a settlement.

MEETING THURSDAY.
A special meeting of the soft silk girls has been called for Thursday afternoon, at which a vote will be taken. The members of the hard silk department will meet Wednesday afternoon and take their final vote. The Sauquoit warpers, forty-seven in number, present another obstacle to the adjustment of difficulties. As the best paid employees in the mill they have no demands for increased wages, but object to the reduction to the ranks of one of the four ladies who went out on strike with them.

Her position will be occupied by a foreman and the girls intend making an effort to have the young woman reinstated. They will meet at 7 o'clock this evening and discuss the situation. The girls made the weavers by Superintendent Davis a one-half cent additional per yard. They asked a one-cent increase on each yard, but, nevertheless, if the other difficulties are adjusted it is very likely that they will decide to accept the offer. "Mother" Jones yesterday expressed herself as very hopeful of a settlement.

A meeting was also held yesterday afternoon of the striking employees of the Hess-Goldsmidt mill at Wilkes-Barre. The girls by a practically unanimous vote decided to remain out, as they claim that the offer made them by the management presented barely any inducements.

WRECK AT PLATT PLACE.
One Car Was Derailed and Demolished.

A slight wreck occurred on the Lackawanna railroad near Platt place last evening. The train, which consisted of several cars, was derailed and one of them was demolished. The train separated and ran together again, causing the wreck. No one was injured.
