BIG RESERVOIR BURSTS AT PITTSFORD

Quite a Stir Created Among Residents of Hamtown Hill by a Small Johnstown Flood.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Pittsford, Nov. 28.—The bursting of the Pennsylvania Coal company's big reservoir on the side of the Hamtown hill, near the east city line, caused quite a stir among the residents of the eastern section of this city this morning about 6:30 o'clock.

The first break was near the bottom, in the southeast corner of the reservoir, and a large body of water was released through the hole which gave way. The wall of the reservoir was merely an embankment of earth, and the first rush of water through the huge hole at the bottom was followed by a rushing of the top of the embankment. This put a check to the water for several minutes, but the large body yet remaining soon swept this away and a tremendous volume rushed out, the steep grade on the hill giving momentum to it. A portion of the fence surrounding the reservoir was swept away and a deep gully torn in the hillside, and the street and gutters in the vicinity being flooded.

The water took several courses, and reached William, Butler and Carroll streets. The greater portion, however, followed in the bed of the Erie and Wyoming Valley tracks. At the head of William street this body left the track bed and flooded the residences in that section. The yards of the residences were like small ponds, and in some the water was from six to eight inches deep. The thermometer was low and the water soon turned to ice. At this point the homes occupied by Thomas Golden, Mrs. Mary Ann Clifford and James Moffatt suffered the worst. In each case the cellars were completely filled to the rafters. Mr. Golden suffered worse than any. For the past three months he has been sick in bed. All the food supply of the family was in the cellar, where the water reached such a height, as to reach through the door. The family was left without food for the breakfast, even the Thanksgiving turkey being drowned by the flood.

The force of the water, however, was not sufficient to disturb any of the houses. The stream of water which took its course down Butler street, flooded many cellars in its path down as far as Main street. The city sewers served a good purpose in carrying off the water before it reached Main street, and while they were taxed to their utmost capacity, they were not damaged, owing to the wide distribution of the water, and the fact that the larger body, which struck the head of William street, reached the river by way of the creek which runs down the end of the hill.

The reservoir contained water pumped from the river by the company's pumps at the Ferry bridge, and held the supply for the colleges in the lower end of the town, including Nos. 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11 and 12. The stream of water which took its course down Butler street, flooded many cellars in its path down as far as Main street. The city sewers served a good purpose in carrying off the water before it reached Main street, and while they were taxed to their utmost capacity, they were not damaged, owing to the wide distribution of the water, and the fact that the larger body, which struck the head of William street, reached the river by way of the creek which runs down the end of the hill.

Our schools are closed until Monday, on account of Thanksgiving. George Simpson has purchased the blacksmith shop and good will of Frank Ross, located on South Warren street, and will conduct the business hereafter. Mr. Ross will go to Lestransburg, N. Y., to work at his trade. Miss Jessie Eisek of Scranton, spent a short time with friends here on Wednesday. The Thanksgiving football team played a game with the Pittsford team today. Our schools are closed until Monday, on account of Thanksgiving.

held Friday evening and organization effected with plans and purposes laid down. Membership will be restricted to students living in Scranton and vicinity and the aim of the boys is to boom the university.

Weyburn was elected president, Bailey, vice-president; Leber, secretary; Ziegler, corresponding secretary; and Frothingham, treasurer.

Mercury is safe in the hands of the freshmen class. To introduce Mercury to the public at large, we might say that the "Mercury stunt" is one of the strong points in contention among the under-class men, and is of recent origin. In days of yore, a colossal, bronze figure, Mercury, adorned the campus and having lost its classic beauty, it reposed in damp cellars and dusty store rooms, until finally the class of 1901, when sophomore came into possession of it, resolving that forever after it would be a disgrace for that underclass that banquished without it. Accordingly, as the rule requires that a class of an odd numeral hand the statue down to an odd class, when the "sophomores" of '01 became juniors, they delivered Mercury over to the present freshman class, and it looks as if the sophomore must this year, banquet without Mercury as guest of honor. The figure may be secreted anywhere within a radius of five miles. Hamilton, the center, and no wonder some freshmen didn't get home till morning.

Prof. Robert W. Moore last Tuesday evening gave an illustrated talk on Berlin, to the German classes. Ziegler, '06, is spending the Thanksgiving vacation with his parents on North Main avenue.

Dean and Mrs. Durban entertained at Thanksgiving dinner S. Leon Weyburn, Randolph J. Frothingham, and James G. Bailey.

Intense cold prevails here. The college "caper" service for the remainder of the fall term and during the winter term will be held in the Baptist church, instead of College chapel. The time is changed from 8 p. m. to 7 p. m.

Leber, '06, has been called home by the death of a relative.

George F. Genung, D. D., late dean of Richmond Theological school, visited the university the past week, and supplied the pulpit of the Baptist church, morning and evening, on Sunday last. Dr. Genung is a twin brother of Prof. John F. Genung, of Anshurst, who is the author of a series of text books on rhetoric.

TAYLOR.

The borough night school which has been in progress for the past two weeks is being quite well attended, but the classes are not near as large as they should be.

Pyma local No. 261, United Mine Workers of America, will meet in special session this evening in Jones' hall.

The funeral of the late Thomas J. Jones, of the Pyma, will take place this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Services will be held at the house. Interment will be made in the Presbyterian cemetery.

The entertainment held at Weber's rink last evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent Catholic association was a success both financially and financially.

The Lackawanna company mines here suspended operation a half day yesterday in observance of Thanksgiving. The borough schools and business places were also closed.

The schools will remain closed until Monday. Thanksgiving services were held in all the town churches yesterday.

Miss Cordelia Murray, of Main street, is slightly improved from her serious illness.

Mrs. M. J. Lloyd and children, of Pricorog, spent yesterday with her mother, Mrs. Robert Llewellyn, of Union street.

Druggist and Mrs. Thomas W. Watkins, of Olyphant, visited relatives in this borough on Wednesday evening. In Washington camp, No. 42, Patriotic Order, No. 1, will meet in regular session this evening.

A large number of Taylor people attended the classed at Providence yesterday.

Miss Jessie Harlos, of Stroudsburg, State Normal school, spent Thanksgiving with her parents, Councilman and Mrs. Samuel Harlos, of Washington street.

Young James and His Bride

Jimmy Steer was in luck. A gentleman had given him 10 cents for a note. Soon she was attacked. Jimmy turned the coin over and over in his hand, taking care, however, to keep the hand hidden in the pocket of his ragged trousers.

"I dunno whether to go in for a good breakfast or a good dinner," he thought, "but his attention was drawn to a little girl, a year or two younger than himself—pittifully named outside a cookshop, though she was a pretty child, though the big black eyes, fixed so curiously in the sockets of her pale, pinched face, were swollen up with crying.

"Hallo," said Jimmy, "who's been a-punching you?" "Nobody, I'm only hungry," she sobbed.

"So'm I," Jimmy retorted. "I'm all the hungrier for your mother and golden oak dressers, sideboards, extension tables, and beds, mattresses, springs and everything in line of furniture for sale. If you can give me your name, you can have it."

"My name's Alice," she sobbed. "I'm going to have a birthday, it's suddenly said. 'Come along, Alice.' The hungry mite needed no second invitation. She slipped on her shoes and she began to ask questions. The meal loosened her tongue and she began to ask questions.

"Where do you live?" asked Alice. "O, anywhere," was the careless reply. "I think a doorway in Grecian lane I'll have best when I haven't got no money."

"Can you take me? I haven't got no money to sleep?" Jimmy didn't answer immediately. "Yes," he said, when he had fully considered the matter, "I'll have to sleep there if I don't have no more luck."

Jimmy conducted his weary little companion to Grecian lane. It was poor hospitality, that bleak doorway, but he had no better to offer, and, in one respect, it could scarcely be improved upon. The lane bore such a desolate aspect, and the policemen always walked in the middle of the road at night, so occupants of the doorway and entries generally escaped observation.

Next day Jimmy's fortune was no worse than usual, but he had a worse than usual day, and the doorway in Grecian lane was again their resting place. This was the case for nearly a week.

"I can't go on much longer," Jimmy said one night, "I've had lots of jobs, but they've all failed. Police men, school board, or children's home, or summat's had 'em on. I've been lucky, I have; but I know I'll be here some day, then we'll be parted, Alice."

The child nestled close to him, and rested her ragged little head on his ragged shoulder. "I'll die if I was took away from you, Jimmy," she said, "Nobody could part us if we was married. Mother used to tell father so when he said he'd run away. How does you get married, Jimmy?"

"Easy 'nough," Jimmy answered with all the confidence of superior knowledge. "There's a church by Trafalgar Square where folks get married 'most every day. I've sneaked in once or twice. They stands in front of some parson's and a man in a long white shirt reads summat out of a book. He's the marrer, he is."

"Do you think he'd marry us?" "Not for nuffink. I've only got 5 cents; an' we'll want that for breakfast."

"I'll need to goin' without breakfast," said Alice. "I'd rather be married."

"If we was to sneak in when the marrer was marryin' some'dy else," said Jimmy, thoughtfully, "we might get married for nuffink. But here's a better 'nuffink. Lay down, Alice!"

Soon after 10 o'clock next morning Jimmy and Alice might have been laughing about St. Martin's church. Toward 11 a string of carriages drew up in front of the church.

"Come on, Alice!" Jimmy cried. "A marrer's best goin' ter be gin!" And in the crowd, unnoticed by any of the officials, they stole into the church and toward the chancel, and, concealed by a pillar, waited hand in hand for the ceremony to begin.

"Miss Graham is with the children," was the answer. "If you step this way I will tell her. What name shall I give her?" "I had rather not send in my name," said Jimmy.

"Nobody's going to hurt him," said the superintendent. "Where do you live?"

"Along with Jimmy," she sobbed. "Where does Jimmy live? He's your brother, I suppose?"

"No, sir," said the mite. "We're married. You can't part us."

Dr. Barnett looked at the sergeant, who in his turn, looked at the superintendent. No one laughed. Presently the doctor bowed his nose.

"The carriage drew up at the curb while the children told their story. "You ain't going to part us?" Alice cried.

"Yes, allowed the superintendent to lift her into the carriage without a struggle. But Jimmy kicked and fought like a little Turk.

"More than fourteen years had passed. A burly young blackwoodsman, with a broad, honest face, to judge by his appearance, was walking down Montcalm street, Quebec, studying the numbers and tradesmen's names as he went. Presently he pulled out a letter and read it. It was dated from London:

"My dear James—I have much pleasure in informing you that Alice Graham went to Canada, with twenty-four other girls, in May last. Her address is care of Mr. Le Croix, 101 Montcalm street, Quebec. I am very glad to learn that you are doing so well and I hope you will continue to prosper.

Your sincere friend, Robert Barnett."

This was at least the one hundredth time that Jimmy had read Dr. Barnett's communication, as its ragged state testified.
