SCRANTON OF THE LONG AGO

FACTS GLEANED FROM DIRECTORY OF 1859-60.

The Book Has Seventy-five Pages and in it are to be found the Names of Many of the Men Who Have Been Instrumental in Making Scranton What She Is—Men Who Did the Business of the City in Those Days, Officers of the City and Other Ancient History.

A Scranton directory for the years 1859-60, which recently came into the hands of James A. Mellon, chief draughtsman of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company's motive power department, contains many interesting facts concerning residents of this city over forty years ago, many of whom have since passed away, while others, whose names are recorded, are now identified most prominently with the city's social, industrial and business life.

The directory is a book of seventy-five pages, about the size of an ordinary first or second grade school book, and contains an alphabetical list of the citizens of Scranton at that time, "also a complete business classification," as the publisher put it. The first advertisement inside the front cover is that of Hunt Bros. & Blair, wholesale and retail dealers in hardware, cutler and oil, etc. Their announcement covers two pages.

Then follow other ads. of Peter Kuller, boot and shoe dealer, who "received the highest premium awarded at the last Luzerne County Agricultural fair, for articles in his line of manufacture," J. Courtney, fancy dry goods, who "has always on hand a choice selection of dry goods, embroideries, ladies' and children's garters and shoes."

George Sanderson & Co., banking and collection house; Sanderson & Willard, law and collection office; L. S. & E. C. Fuller, druggists and postoffice; Charles Fuller, insurance agent; John D. Fuller, express agent; S. Sherrerd, insurance agent; William Cooke & Co., "cut work" machine shop and foundry; C. H. & W. G. Dowd, hardware merchants; James Harrington & Son, cabinet makers, and a number of other advertisements follow, covering many pages.

At that time J. Amstien was a bookseller at Lackawanna, and Washington avenue, and A. Kenner conducted a livery and sale stables at the corner of Wyoming avenue and Spruce street. Brock & Carling operated a screen and railing manufactory "near railroad depot," and C. D. Messler's billiard room was located on the third floor over Fisher & Co.'s store on Lackawanna avenue.

D. K. Kressler was then proprietor of the St. Charles hotel, with a coach at the depot on arrival of the passenger trains. Horace Shiner dealt in beef hides, sheep pelts and calf skins "at his residence on Franklin avenue, next door below the Catholic church." A. S. Washburn conducted a coal yard on Lackawanna avenue, between Penn and Wyoming avenues, and Charles W. Roessler's hair dressing and shaving saloon was located in the Wyoming house.

George L. Whitmore and D. R. Malven were in business in Niver's block on Penn avenue, and John V. Shoemaker manufactured carriages, sleighs and market wagons on Mulberry street. Sceler & Co. dealt in harness, saddles, whips, nets, etc., on Franklin avenue, two doors below the Mansion house. George H. Smith, teacher of music, was located over Nock, Cornish & Co., on Penn avenue.

Among the other prominent merchants in this city at that time were: Bright & Henson, Parrott & Morris, G. H. Walter, Isaac Newhouse, E. V. Fellows & Clark, Arnold & Halstead, J. H. Gunster, S. Sutto, B. T. Parsells, H. Zoch, Weeks & Bours, George B. Boyer, M. D. Engle, Manuery & Alberger, and Davis & Wheeler. Joseph Godfrey was proprietor of the Forest house, where Hotel Jermyn now stands, under the management of his son, E. S. Godfrey.

The first name in the alphabetical list is that of David Ackerman, grocer, of Penn avenue, near Mulberry street. Then follows Hiram Adams, a well-known Delaware, Lackawanna and Western engineer, and J. B. Adams, a printer, who will be remembered by many. Joseph J. Albright, general coal agent of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad; Frank P. and Joel Amstien, civil engineers, and James Archibald, chief engineer of D. L. & W. R. R., are among the leading names in the column.

David Beck, Frederick Becker, Thos. Gesseler, Laura A. Bixby, Thos. M. Bixby, M. L. Blair, Edward Blewitt, Patrick Blewitt, Dr. Fred Boleman, George B. Boyd, Daniel B. Bralnard, James Bright, John Brishin, Sidney Broadbent, J. W. Brock, John H. Brown, Jacob Bryant, J. C. Burgess, G. W. Bushnell, Byrne & Dart, lawyers, and others were recorded in the B's.

Among the C's those whose names appeared in capital letters are William P. Carling, G. B. Chase, Joseph Chase, J. M. Chittenden, Jacob D. Clark, Isaac F. Cliff, George Cone, W. P. Connell, Watts Cooke, J. Courtney, Peter Crater, and others. All through the alphabet are printed many names of men whose names are very familiar today. A few of them are as follows:

David Dale, Dr. A. Davis, H. W. Derby, Philip Doersam, Thomas Dickson, W. G. Dowd, Richard Drinker, William Duckworth, Rev. Charles Edwards, John Emerich, M. D. Engle, John Erdman, Daniel Evans, A. Fasold, August C. Ferber, P. B. Finley, E. T. Fisher, Fisher and Surtick, James W. Fowler, George A. Freeman, Jacob Freis, C. R. Freymuller, William Frink, George W. Fritz and a large number of Fullers.

Then follow Gangelhoff & Morris, tailors; Matthias Gerban, justice of the peace; John Gibbons, grocer; W. Green, physician; Aaron Griffin, wood agent; Thomas Griffith, puffer; Martin Gurl, laborer; Conrad Hagen, teamster; Dr. F. G. Hunt, Benjamin Jay, justice of the peace; James Jifkins & Sons, butchers, and a score of Joneses.

D. Kemmerer was a tobacconist at Penn and Lackawanna avenue, and Edward P. Kingsbury was paymaster for the Lackawanna Iron and Coal company. Jonas Lauer was in the clothing business on Lackawanna avenue, and E. A. Lawrence was then principal of the schools. Edward C. Lynde was employed as a bookkeeper, and James McKinney was a constable. W. W. Manness was superintendent of the Lackawanna Iron and Coal company's lumber department, and Henry L. Marvin was superintendent of the Belvedere, Lackawanna and Western machine shops; Mason, Meyler & Co. were prominent bankers, and Charles P. Mathews conducted a drug store opposite the Wyoming house. F. S. Paul was engaged as a hatter, and Joseph C. Platt was real estate agent for the Lackawanna Iron and Coal company.

Philip Robinson was the leading brewer of that time, and Charles Schlager kept a bakery. Joseph H. Scranton was superintendent of the Lackawanna Iron and Coal company, and George R. Sprague was a real estate broker. Dr. Robert Westcott was a leading coal operator, and Edward N. Willard was a boarder at the Wyoming house. J. W. Wyckoff was the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western paymaster, and John C. Zedler conducted a bakery on Franklin avenue.

The officers of the corporation of Scranton borough in 1859 were: Burgess, W. H. Pier; town council, F. J. Leavenworth, James Mullins, N. C. Norton, Frederick Schwartz, A. M. Maynard and William Kennar. P. C. Morgan was the secretary, and the auditors were R. A. Oakford, S. Grant and George Fuller. The other "city" officers were:

Assessor, W. P. Carling; treasurer, Peter Carling; street commissioner, D. K. Kressler; collector of borough and poor tax, Daniel Lundy; collector of state and county tax, John Melvin. The justices of the peace were: South ward, Thomas Walsh, H. W. Derby, North ward, Benjamin Jay and M. L. Newbman, James Mullins and C. C. Morgan were overseers of the poor, and C. C. Carpenter was high constable.

The police force consisted of twenty members, under the chieftaincy of A. A. Arnold. H. L. Marvinne was president of the school board, and W. A. Chittenden was the secretary. The other members were J. C. Platt, S. Grant, A. L. Horn and H. Carpenter. Six public schools were in existence then, with a total of fourteen teachers. The fire department, which was organized April 22, 1859, had George Fisher as its first chief. The engine companies and one hose company constituted the department.

The Young Men's Christian association was organized on Aug. 27, 1858, with John Brishin as president; Joseph H. Scranton, Charles G. Saxton and Charles Q. Carman as vice presidents. Several lodges of Masons and Odd Fellows were also in existence at that time. A. H. Winton was then the recording and F. L. Hiltchcock the corresponding secretary of the Young Men's Literary and Debating club.

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company operated but four mines at that time, the Diamond, Bellevue, Hampton and Scranton Coal company. The individual operators were Judson Clark, Howell & Co., John Jermyn, Deum & Co., Price & Ruston, Smith & Brock, Messch Davis, B. F. Sawyer and S. Stevenson. Many other interesting facts are in the book.

LECTURE ON LUTHER.

The Important Part He Played in the Reformation Discussed by Rev. S. A. Repass Last Night.

Rev. Dr. S. A. Repass, pastor of St. John's church, Allentown, and recognized as one of the ablest men in the Lutheran church in this state, delivered a scholarly lecture in the Evangelical Lutheran church of the Holy Trinity last night on "Luther's Place in the Reformation."

Rev. Mr. Repass compared the work accomplished by Luther with that of Calvin and Melancthon, the two other great figures of the reformation. These last two men, he declared, were both distinguished factors in the movement, but the influence of neither was as powerful as that of Luther.

The Reformation, he said, was not simply a religious movement, but a movement which touched everything of importance and from which our modern civilization is very largely evolved. He discussed at some length the corruptions which existed in the old church, and which Luther stood out against.

The Holy Scriptures, he said, were printed in an unknown tongue and could not be read by the common people. He laid particular stress upon Luther's careful study of the Scriptures in the monastery of Erfurt, and how this study led him into a clear knowledge of the way of salvation.

The Augsburg confession was discussed at length and the speaker reiterated the claim of the Lutheran church that it is the mother of Protestant Christendom. He discussed the Thirty-nine Articles of Faith, of the English church; the Westminster confession of the Presbyterian church, and the creeds of other protestant bodies, and sought to show that they are all derived very largely from the Augsburg confession.

Luther, he said, reformed not only the doctrines of the church, but he reformed the church itself, and was himself the embodiment of all he taught and believed. Melancthon was a profound scholar and a better theologian than Luther; Calvin was more logically consistent, but neither of these men had at all the influence upon the work of the Reformation as did Luther.

WALL IS STILL MISSING.

No Light Has Been Shed On Circumstances Leading Up to the Death of Miss Hinchcliffe.

Harry Wall, of Oakwood place, is still absent from his home and the circumstances leading up to the death of Miss Susan Hinchcliffe, of Avoca, at the Lackawanna hospital early Monday morning have not yet been ascertained. The parents of young Wall are unable to account for his disappearance from home, except from the facts which connect him with the Hinchcliffe case.

MISS SUSAN HINCHCLIFFE.

He did not take any extra clothing with him, but secured what money was due him from the Model rooms when he resigned his position.

The facts in the case printed in The Tribune were a surprise, both to the parents of the girl and to Wall's father and mother, and both families are anxiously awaiting his return.

When the girl was removed to the Lackawanna hospital she was in a critical condition, and talked incoherently of her troubles, being delirious up to the time of her death. When Wall was at home on Monday morning he appeared to be greatly disturbed over the young woman's death.

He is known to have relatives in Moscow, Pittston and Wilkes-Barre, and it is possible that he has gone to either of these places. An effort is being made by his parents to locate him. Coroner Saltry is still pursuing his inquiries into the case, but as yet, has not unearthed any new developments.

The funeral of Miss Hinchcliffe will take place this afternoon from the late home in Avoca.

Mrs. Augustus Houck, of 323 Penn avenue, says that Miss Hinchcliffe did not live at her home, but at Mrs. Mary Houck, 325 Penn avenue.

BANKRUPTCY ADJUDICATIONS.

Judge Archibald Declares J. A. Coddington to Be Insolvent.

John A. Coddington, of Hallstead, was, Monday, adjudged a bankrupt by Judge R. W. Archibald. An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed by his creditors many months ago and insolvency was denied. The case was referred to Referee Van Wormer who declared Coddington to be insolvent after hearing testimony. The referee's findings were approved yesterday by Judge Archibald.

Judge Archibald also formally declared Anna M. Traugott, of Lackawanna avenue, milliner, to be a bankrupt. An involuntary petition had been filed in this case also.

REVENUE COLLECTIONS.

A Falling Off of Nearly One-half from Last Year.

The internal revenue collections for the month of October just ended show a falling off of nearly one-half from the figures for the same month last year. This is attributed to the taking off of the special war taxes. The total collections for the month were $72,478.25 and for October, 1902, $140,216.23.

The itemized list is as follows: Collections on lists, $3,240.68; beer stamps, $30,888; spirit stamps, $5,883.49; cigar and cigarette stamps, $7,750.09; tobacco stamps, $5,678.40; special tax stamps, $1,024.19; total, $72,478.25.

Dr. D. B. Hand's Office.

Is in the Rosbery building, corner Washington avenue and Spruce street and not on Penn avenue. Dr. Hand will be found in his office from 2 to 5 in the afternoon and from 7 to 9 in the evening.

INSISTED ON HIS RIGHTS

DAVY CHARLES ROBERTS KNEW WHAT HE WANTED.

Demanded That Magistrate Davies Send Him to the County Jail for Ninety Days—When the Magistrate Refused He Threatened to Send a Stone Through the Window. A Compromise Was Reached by Sending Davy Up for Thirty Days. Accepted with Bad Grace.

When the family of Thomas Bevan, in West Scranton, awoke a few mornings ago they were somewhat alarmed at finding a rear window open and evidences everywhere of the visit of an intruder. The household was even more startled some time later by discovering a frowsy-looking one-legged whiskey-soaked man snugly ensconced in the "apart" bed.

The arrival of the police discovered the identity of the intruder. Davy Charles Roberts, a worthless, harmless local "bum."

The Bevan family declined to prosecute him, and Magistrate Davies was averse to committing him, as imprisonment never had any effect one way or the other on Davy Charles.

"I will let you go this time, Davy," said the magistrate. "This offense is comparatively so mild that it can be considered a step towards reformation, and just to encourage you, I won't send you up."

"You won't send me up?" queried Davy Charles, in surprised tones. "No, not this time," said the magistrate.

Davy Stood on His Rights. "But ———, you will send me up," quoth Davy, with emphasis and indignation. "I have as much right in the county jail as half those ——— foreigners that are kept there over winter. You send me up ——— I'll appeal the case to the courts. I was born here and I've paid taxes, too. I want you to understand."

"O, get out," broke in the magistrate. "If you don't, I'll ———"

The magistrate came to a sudden pause. He didn't know just what he could legally threaten to do except send the fellow to jail, and that he was not disposed to do, because it would not only be a punishment to Davy, but a fulfilling of his heart's one and only immediate desire.

"Well, what'll you do?" sneered Davy. The alderman was at his wit's end. He thought of having one of his office attaches kick Davy out of the office and around the block a few times, but Davy is a crafty old fellow, and could not be subjected to any treatment of this kind. Completely at a loss to know what to do, the magistrate concluded to dismiss the dilemma by dismissing Davy.

"You will have to get out of here," said the magistrate, sternly. "Put me out if you can," was Davy's retort.

"Put him out!" the magistrate ordered.

Davy Made Threats. As one of the constables was approaching with a view of carrying out the magistrate's orders, Davy turned to the magistrate and solemnly declared: "So help me ———, Bez, if you don't send me through your window ——— Davy had won the day. The magistrate knew he was capable of carrying out his threat and that he would very likely exercise this capability.

"Davy, I'll send you up for thirty days for contempt of court," said the outraged representative of the power and majesty of the law and peace and dignity of the commonwealth.

"Not by a darn sight, your honor. It's ninety or nothing."

"This is thirty," said the magistrate, firmly, with some comment.

"All right, make it thirty," said Davy, disconsolately. "Country born people ain't got any show any more around here, since the foreigners got into politics."

Davy is now enjoying the best that is going at the Washington avenue Hotel, Schadt.

FIVE MORE LISTS.

Young People Getting an Early Start in The Tribune's Junior Contest.

The young people of this section of the state are already interested in The Tribune's Junior Educational Contest, which was announced on last Saturday. On Monday the first day, five young persons submitted lists of words in accordance with the rules of the contest and yesterday more did so.

Last year a number of the lists sent in the contest showed that their writers did not fully understand the rules, because a number of letters were used that they took their words. This year, however, this misunderstanding seems to be cleared up, as far as the early returns show.

This is a great opportunity for the youngsters to earn valuable Christmas presents. There are to be twenty in all, the first three being $20, $10 and $5. Then there are two of $2.50 each, five of $1 each and ten of 50 cents each. These presents are to be all in cash and the winners can spend it for themselves in any way they choose. The particulars and rules governing The Tribune's Junior Educational Contest are all given in an advertisement in the right-hand corner of the fourth page of this morning's Tribune.

Lists were received yesterday from the following: Wallace Latham, Thompson, Pa.; Willie Toy, rear 514 Harrison avenue, Harold R. Dodson, 1531 Bilsen street, Hugh Williams, Elmhurst, Pa. Walter Toy, rear 514 Harrison avenue. The second one of these boys, Willie Toy, was in last year's contest and won a writing desk valued at $4.

W. C. T. U. MEETING.

Need of Enforcing Temperance Education Law Discussed.

The necessity for a more stringent enforcement of the law requiring instruction in the public schools on the effects of alcohol on the human body was discussed at yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance union, and it seemed to be the sense of those present that a movement in favor of such an enforcement should be begun. It is probable that a committee will be appointed in the near future to consider this question.

The discussion was the direct result of comments made on the course of lectures delivered at the county teachers' institute last week by Mrs. Mary

Hunt, of Boston, who was brought here at the expense of the Women's Christian Temperance union, and whose views found a ready acceptance on the part of many of the teachers.

An article on "Women in Politics" was read by Miss Frances Raub, the secretary, and was generally discussed. Mrs. C. A. Van Wormer expressed it as her opinion that where women interest themselves in politics it should be with the idea in mind of teaching their sons so that they will not be led into the habit of voting as their fathers vote, solely because their fathers vote that way.

The next meeting will be devoted to the hearing of reports from the delegates to the recent national convention.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

Directors Chosen by Merchants and Mechanics Bank Stockholders.

The annual meeting of the stock holders of the Merchants and Mechanics bank was held Monday morning in the magnificent new bank building on Spruce street. The following directors were chosen: James J. Williams, A. J. Casey, P. W. Jordan, Franklin Howell and Thomas E. Jones. The directors afterwards met and selected the following officers: President, James J. Williams; vice-president, A. J. Casey; secretary of board, Franklin Howell and cashier, C. W. Gunster.

The bank is now comfortably housed in its new home, which is one of the most beautiful buildings of kind in the state. It will be opened every Saturday night until further notice for the inspection of the general public.

PERMITS OF THE MONTH.

Building Operations for October Amount to $61,832.

The total cost of the proposed new buildings and repairs for which permits were taken out during the last month from the office of F. L. Brown, superintendent of building inspection, are only $61,832 which is only little more than one-quarter the amount for the same month last year.

Superintendent Brown attributes this falling off almost entirely to the strike of the new buildings for which permits were taken out only two or three are of any size and only one or two cost more than $3,000.
