

INTEMPERANCE and licentiousness are two of the world's most deadly enemies. Both are rooted in the depraved elements of human nature and both are likely to remain in some form to trouble the world until a transformation has been wrought in the disposition and habits of mankind.

ALTHOUGH not a dollar of the proposed $50,000,000 State loan for road building will be expended in any city, and notwithstanding the fact that the cost of the loan will be largely borne by corporations located in the cities, it is known that the people of the large centers of population are virtually unanimous in favor of the project.

A PRESS dispatch from Pittsburg says that it is reported upon what is regarded as reliable information that William Finn is still a Republican, and that he is not in sympathy with Roosevelt's edict to the effect that the Progressive party must not fuse with the Republicans upon any pretense.

FOR the first time since 1865, that is to say for almost twenty years, the undivided responsibility for legislation and administration will rest upon the party which stood so nearly right with Grover Cleveland and went so triumphantly with Bryan in the disastrous adventure of 1896.

AS THE Oil City Blizzard remarks, it is decidedly interesting to read that political campaign matter, transmitted free of postage through the mails, accounted for the difference between a postal surplus and postal deficit for the last fiscal year, ending June 30.

THERE are no two opinions about the fact that good times now prevail, and that they are as good or better than ever before. The treasury will again have a surplus this year. Public revenue exceeds expenditures. The currency is at par everywhere in the world.

FARLEY GIRL ACQUITTED

Ohio Jury's Verdict Causes Joyful Demonstration in Courtroom. Miss Cecilia Farley, charged with the murder of Alvin E. Zollinger, a Columbus (O.) advertising solicitor, was freed by the jury.

The girl was acquitted amid the most dramatic scenes ever witnessed in a Franklin county courtroom. While Miss Farley heard the verdict with stolid composure her attorney, James A. Allen, joined with strong men in weeping as they shouted for pure joy. The fair defendant turned and kissed her mother as the shouts grew deafening and stood in her close embrace while the crowd surged up to shake her hand. The formalities attending her actual discharge and release of the jury could scarce be rushed through in the confusion and disorder that reigned. "I'm so glad," was all the girl would say.

WOULD EJECT A BODY

Queer Suit Over Burial of Suicide in Catholic Cemetery. An equity suit involving unusual features was begun in the courts at Uniontown, Pa. Those bringing the action ask that the body of Matthew Jurzasko be removed from St. Mary's Catholic cemetery. The suit is brought by St. Mary's Roman Catholic Slovak church.

It is set forth that Matthew Jurzasko committed suicide on May 24 last; that the body was smuggled into St. Mary's cemetery; that the gate to the cemetery had been broken open by Andrew Brown, the grave-digger; that the latter prepared the grave and made all arrangements for the funeral services which were held in the cemetery and that they were conducted by the captain of the Salvation Army of Uniontown.

The family of William Walmsee, negroes, were found near Philadelphia at their home with their heads crushed with an ax. Walmsee's wife and the four-year-old child were found lying in the middle of the floor. The husband was found 300 yards from the house in a fence corner. The indications were that the fatal blow had been struck by the murderer when Walmsee was trying to get over the fence in an effort to elude his pursuer. The ax man's victims now number twenty-eight.

The Spirit of Spunk.

People hesitate about going to sanatoria because they think that they are gloomy places. They imagine rows of men, sad-faced consumptives lying on rest chairs amid an atmosphere of melancholy.

If you feel this way and are advising consumptives not to go to a sanatorium, read "Spunk," a little magazine published by the patients at the State Sanatorium at Mont Alto; or better yet, visit the Sanatorium itself. Were it not for the occasional allusions to tuberculosis, you would think that "Spunk" was a boarding school or a college magazine. It is full of jokes and tales of Sanatorium life. Everything is goodnatured. There is no drumming. It is the healthiest, most cheerful magazine imaginable.

Visit the Sanatorium and you will understand why. There is so much sunshine, the buildings are so attractive, and the nurses and doctors are so ready to enter into the life of the patient that no one can feel gloomy.

The patients are fighting for their lives, and they know it. Do not mistake that. But they have the spirit of Spunk, and though often they are facing death, they do it with a smile so that the patients beside them will not lose courage.

The Sanatorium is your best friend. It is a good place to be. Show the spirit of Spunk and go there if it is necessary. So says Karl de Schweinitz, executive secretary, Pennsylvania society for the prevention of tuberculosis.

—M. J. Heywang, Esq., for more than 40 years a resident of Tionesta, and one of the well known lawyers of Western Pennsylvania, died suddenly from heart disease at his home in that city Monday morning at 12:20 o'clock. He seemed to be in his usual good health Sunday and attended the Presbyterian church services Sunday night. About 11:45 o'clock he awakened his wife and told her he was ill and complained of a shortness of breath. She called the family physician by telephone, and although he came promptly, the patient lived but a few minutes after the doctor's arrival. Mr. Heywang passed his 60th year on September 4th last, more than 35 of which were spent in the practice of law. He was well known to many of our citizens having frequently been professionally engaged in the courts of Forest county. His wife and five daughters and a host of his wife's friends are left to mourn the loss of this splendid citizen.
