

Calendar for December 1912 showing days of the week and dates.

AUTOMOBILE casualties are far beyond the line of what can be endured. Enforce the law.

The political lesson of 1912 is an old one. A plurality beats a majority if the majority is divided against itself.

The milkweed is recommended as an addition to the menu. As the country has another Democratic period on its hands the thistle also may be considered.

Mr. Wilson received only 43 per cent of the total vote in the United States. The Democratic party less far less than half that it should even develop some modesty.

The Democrats intend to try the budget system of making appropriations, but just now the people are more interested in the Democratic plan for raising revenue.

SIXTEEN years ago Congress assembled with a Democratic period of full control ahead. But no good citizen hopes that the results within the next two years will be a repetition of history.

MUCH of Mr. Wilson's mail contains Democratic warnings against Mr. Bryan as a member of the cabinet. With or without a portfolio Mr. Bryan is Warwick, and his enemies may make the most of it.

If a Democratic referendum could be held at this time the classified civil service would be destroyed root and branch. The wave of Democratic hunger hits Mr. Wilson harder at Bermuda than any spark by wireless.

UNDER date of December 5, a Washington, D. C., dispatch says: Secretary of War Stimson, by inference, today scored the promiscuous granting of water rights to private interests in an address before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress here. "The taxpayers of this country should get the benefits from these resources," he declared.

"I am greatly interested in the question of the building of levees on the Mississippi river. I am a thorough believer that this should be a national question. It was brought closely to my attention by the recent floods and the work done by the War Department for the relief of hundreds. The control of the Mississippi river approaches nearest the Panama Canal as a national property." The policy of the Taft administration has all along been to safeguard the interests of the people in dealing with water rights, as was shown during the recent session of Congress when the President vetoed the dam bills passed by that body favoring the giving away of water power rights to private corporations. Will the incoming administration be as watchful in this respect?

In every city and town in the United States a determined effort is being made to sell the greatest number of seals ever sold. This comes about through the fact that so much good is being done in the fight against tuberculosis that it is hoped to procure more money than ever to strengthen and maintain the forces. There is nothing you can do with your money to which so large a part goes right to the work desired than by buying Red Cross Seals. For sale everywhere.

A rear end collision between two freight trains at Onoville yesterday derailed two freight cars and one engine. The night passenger train down the river was over three hours late. Nobody hurt.

Kellektiville.

Walls at work on the mill, Monday. Howard Shotts was thrown from the runway into the run below. There was a broken plank on the track and in helping H. E. Murphy steer his car past the defective place he was struck by the lumber and thrown off. As he fell he threw up his arm, striking one of the timbers which dislocated his arm at the shoulder joint. His head also struck a timber, cutting quite a gash in his forehead. He lit on his feet in the water and the lumber from the overturned car following landed on top of him. He was considerably bruised and shaken up and will be laid up for several weeks.
