

The following article was in type last week, but was crowded out. We give it to-day for the benefit of those of our readers who have not heard or seen any account of the battle between the British and French squadrons and the natives of the Argentine:

THE WAR OF THE PARANA.

The ship Courier, Capt. Wolfe, arrived at New York on Saturday from Rio Janeiro, whence she sailed on the 29th of December. We are indebted to the New York Herald of the 31st inst. for the news by its arrival.

The U. S. frigate Congress, Commodore Stockton, arrived at Rio on the 20th December, fifty days from Norfolk. The U. S. ship Plymouth, Commodore Henry; the frigate Ritnan, Captain Gregory; and brig Bainbridge, Commander S. Pennington, were also at Rio.

The advices from Buenos Ayres are of the 14th December. The official account of the battle of the Parana, rendered to the Argentine Government, states as follows:

On the 19th, the enemy prepared to attack, and on the 20th, at 8 o'clock in the morning, the whole squadron manoeuvred skilfully before the batteries. First in line were four brigades of war, one English and three French—in the centre, the steamers Fulton, Gorgon and Friedland, and in the rear two corvettes and two brigs.

At half past 9, A. M., the General being at the head of the forces of the batteries, the national hymn of the Argentine Confederation was sung, the drums rolled, and the combat commenced.

The enemy made his attack with gallant intrepidity, with a force of 113 cannons, of the calibre of 24, 32, 48, 64 and 80 pounders, sustaining, without the intermission of a single instant, a well directed, quick and destructive fire of his whole line on the front and flank of our batteries.

To this brisk attack the batteries opposed the vigorous fire of 35 pieces of the calibre of 4, 8, 10, 12, 16, 18 and 24, and the Argentine soldiers their heroic breasts on the esplanades. They, and the first among them the General, disputed the dangers of the fight and the honor of sustaining the dignity of the Argentine flag. After 8 hours of a bloody fight, courageously sustained on both sides, the overpowering fire of the enemy silenced our guns, destroyed the parapets, and our artillery men fired their last cartridges, all our ammunition being thus consumed.

The forces then proceeded to land, and after some more hard fighting effected their object and the Argentine forces retreated.

As to the loss, the report acknowledges but 150 killed and 100 wounded on the side of the Argentines. For the other side, it says: "The enemies have suffered great loss in killed. They were seen continually throwing from their vessels the dead bodies, which were floating down the waters of the Parana; this number of their casualties is estimated to exceed double that of ours. Three of their vessels were put hors du combat, and the remainder have suffered considerable damages in their spars, sails and hulls."

From the Buenos Ayres Packet, Dec. 13. THE BATTLE OF PARANA. "Nothing in an official shape from the Anglo-French commanders in the Parana, with respect to the Battle of Obligado, has yet come to hand, but the Montevideo journals, notwithstanding their habitual mendacity, afford evidence enough that there was nothing exaggerated in the report of the Argentine General. It is acknowledged that the fire lasted nine hours, and that several vessels of the combined fleet were literally riddled with shot, including the purloined Argentine brig San Martin, under French colors, the British brigantine Dolphin, and the French steamer Fulton. And though great anxiety is evinced to make light of the loss suffered by the "allies," from the number of officers allowed to have been killed, and the wounded known to have been landed at Montevideo, Martin Garcia and Colon, it is evident that it must have been very severe. Be this as it may, it is clear that the resistance opposed by the batteries of Obligado against such overwhelming odds, was in the highest degree heroic, with such as neither England nor France singly ever met with before since the last general peace. It is also indubitable, that had the Argentine Government employed the means at its disposal—had the cannon been of a larger calibre—or even had the ammunition held out—the result would have been far more disastrous to the combined squadron, if even it escaped the ignominy of defeat."

There was evidently hard fighting, and the glory is by no means on the side of the assailants. Nor does the Argentine Government show any symptoms of submission. Armed forces bristled on the banks of the Parana, ready to renew the struggle on the first opportunity. The hostile fleet was making its way up the river amid difficulties and dangers, and if the same spirit continues to animate the republicans, it is very likely never to get back again.

In the article we copied yesterday, the purpose of this English and French invasion was explained to be, to open a free commercial intercourse with the Republic of Paraguay, situated high up the river, and having no other outlet. It is now known that this State was originally part of the Argentine Confederacy. It is still claimed as such, its independence never having been acknowledged. This circumstance complicates the affair, as it serves as the pretext for a very severe decree issued by the Argentine Government, declaring all the merchant ships of whatever nation, that have accompanied the hostile fleet with intent to take advantage of the opening of the trade of Paraguay, liable to seizure and confiscation, and their officers and men to the treatment of pirates. The merchant vessels accompanying the fleet, are about half of them from the United States, and if this decree is more than a threat, they are most decidedly in a bad box. To call them pirates seems rather hard—still harder to hang them as such. But it is scarcely easier to give them any other name. They belong to countries at peace with the Argentine Confederacy; they have penetrated its acknowledged territory against its positive prohibition; and they have done this under the protection of a hostile fleet, forcing its way at the cannon's mouth. What are they, then? Can they claim the protection of their own Government, if they are captured? However it is likely they rested their hope of impunity on the certainty of the success of the invading force—a certainty that has been considerably shaken by the result of the first battle. We wish them a safe deliverance. But if they should get banged, they may take this consolation, that very probably they deserved it.—Charleston Mercury.

Save your Corn Cobs and Shucks.

TO THE PLANTERS AND MILLERS OF NORTH CAROLINA.
THE undersigned has obtained Letters Patent, to enable common Mill stones (or rocks) now in use, to grind CORN, COB and SHUCK, into meal, for Hogs, Mules, Cattle, Hogs, &c., thereby saving more than one third of a crop, which is an important item with planters. The machinery used for the above purpose is simple and durable, and cannot, with fair means, get out of order. It will last as long as the Stones last, with an expense of 50 cents every five years. To enable the common Mill Stones to grind ear corn into meal, requires no new buildings or extra power. It can also be applied to Horse Mills, Threshing Machines, Gins, or any given power known. The same Mill will grind one-third more of Corn Meal by the introduction of this Machinery, and can be changed from grinding Corn and Cob, to grinding Corn Meal in the space of thirty seconds. Corn, when fed to stock, is said to be by the most practical and scientific Planters, constituting in its effects, producing founders, cholics and various other maladies which are incident to stock. Grinding cobs with the Corn, makes a food congenial with their nature, and cannot produce any of the serious results above mentioned. Stock, when fed on Corn exclusively, are deprived of the benefits of distension (so necessary to the proper health of animals,) by their being unable to eat a sufficient bulk to produce distension before the animal becomes gorged. Cobs ground with the corn, produce the necessary distension, without any danger of diseases arising from overeating. Corn and cob meal is improved by scalding, and still more by boiling, and yet more by a partial fermentation.—All the preparations facilitate digestion for Hogs. But Horses and Mules will not eat fermented food, consequently they will require it dry or partially wet with cold water. Horses, Mules and Oxen, when fed with unground food, void much in an undigested state, which is of course lost for all beneficial purposes. The undersigned can be addressed at Raleigh, and all calls will be attended to punctually and with despatch by himself for Agent.

CERTIFICATE.
Having been solicited by Maj. Collins to have my Mill adjusted to grind Corn in the Ear and Shuck, I consented that he should do so as an experiment; and I am able to say that it grinds Corn in the Shuck at the rate of 30 bushels per hour; and the dressing of the stones is so improved, that it grinds shelled Corn more than twice as fast as before, and by my watch, at the rate of 15 bushels per hour, and the meal finer than usual. I deem it a valuable improvement, and shall purchase the right to use it, as it will afford me a speedy way of feeding my horses and cattle, and save much thereby.
